RESEARCH WORK WAS HOWE'S JOB, WITNESSES SAY

A. T. Morey Testifies in Suit by Employe Against Former Head of Commonwealth Steel.

TELLS OF OWN TASK AS 'HUMAN ENGINEER'

H. M. Pflager Asserts He Furnished the Idea for Device Which Plaintiff Now Claims.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 22.—Arthur T. Morey, director of the "Safety and Fellowship" program of the Commonwealth Steel Co. of Granite City, testified today in Federal Court regarding the firm's efforts to aid its employes in their personal affairs, and to build up a spirit of brotherhood and co-operation in what was called the "Golden Rule Foundry."

His testimony was the prelude to a week's recess in the hearing of the suit of Andrew Frank Howe of University City to force an accounting for the firm's use of his steel mould and sand mill patents from 1919 to last year, when the Commonwealth was purchased by the General Steel Casting Corporation for $35,000,000. The hearing will be resumed Monday, March 31, the interruption having been due to criminal cases on Judge Fitz Henry's docket. The plaintiff's testimony, begun last Monday, was finished yesterday.

"Human Engineer" Tells of Work.

Morey is a brother-in-law of Clarence H. Howard, former president of Commonwealth. Morey is also the organizer of the St. Louis Safety Council. In his testimony for the defense, he told of reducing accidents in the plant 80 or 90 per cent through safety devices; of a 3 per cent, no security, small loan fund to keep the men away from loan sharks; of a building and loan arrangement through which employes were aided to build homes; of a visiting nurse for the men and their families; of a free insurance plan of $2000 maximum; of an apprentice school which developed into an accredited high school; of Americanization and Y. M. C. A. work; of non-profit-making lunchrooms.

"You were called a 'human engineer' in connection with your work, I believe?" asked Bruce Campbell, of Howe's counsel.

"Yes. I have been called that," Morey replied.

"What was the result of your fellowship work?" Campbell asked.

"It brought about a very necessary spirit of co-operation."

"And the company benefited by it as well as the employes, in better trained personnel, men with better states of mind, greater productiveness and so on?"

"Yes."

Asked if he had ever heard the mould patent referred as as the Howe process, Morey said he had not until last summer. "I was very much surprised to hear it," he added. He asserted that Howe's development of the mould was in his regular line of duty.

Patents in Howe's Name.

Morey related that Howe developed three safety devices in the Commonwealth plant. "I was very grateful to Howe for these devices," he testified, "as I was directing the safety campaign; so I suggested to Mr. Howard and Mr. Bringer, vice-president, that we waive our usual custom and permit Frank (Howe) to take out the patents in his own name. This was done."

These safety device patents, Morey testified, were used by Howe when he went into business for himself, in 1919, as the Howe Safety Appliance Co. The venture was not successful, and in 1923 Howe returned to Commonwealth. Before he quit in 1919, he was receiving $480 a month; he returned at $240 a month, but in 1927, and up to last July, his pay, including salary, bonus, dividends and prizes, was $560 a month.

Almost a truckload of defense exhibits is being held in readiness for the resumption of the hearing. Ledgers and records are to be shown, and a model steel mould, one-quarter size, was stored in the district clerk's office for the week.

The facts as disclosed in the past week's hearing, are these:

Howe made application in 1910 for a patent on a steel mould for making large castings. The patent was granted in the name of the Commonwealth Steel Co., Howe's application being accompanied by an assignment of title to the firm, so that the patent was never in

$33,000,000 TAX REFUND TO U. S. STEEL BASED LARGELY ON WAR COST AMORTIZATION

Garner Points Out Treasury Settlement Is Result of Fifth Audit, Concludes Four Others Were Wrong.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The Treasury today made public its reasons for refunding $33,000,000 to the United States Steel Corporation on income taxes assessed for the years 1918, 1919 and 1920. The refund, announced last week, was bitterly criticised on the floor of the House by Representative John Garner of Texas, the Democrat leader, who asserted that the refunding of corporation taxes under the administration of Secretary Mellon had become "a national scandal."

As in the case of many similar refunds made during Mellon's administration, a large part of the steel refund is based on an increased allowance for amortization of the cost of facilities constructed during the war, presumably for the production of war materials. On the same theory a huge refund was made several years ago to Mellon's own company, the Aluminum Company of America.

The total of $33,000,000 returned to the steel corporation was made up according to the Treasury statement as follows:

Additional deductions for amortization, $10,494,000; $8,250,000 in additional deductions for capital invested in subsidiary companies, $1,568,000 on account of adjustments for invested capital in connection with taxes paid in previous years; $323,000 additional allowance in compensation for the use of the corporation's railroad properties by the Government during the war period; $322,000 in deductions based on revised inventories; $132,000 additional deduction for depreciation and $5600 in miscellaneous allowances, including deductions for ordinary business expenses. To this total of approximately $21,000,000 there was added nearly $12,000,000 interest on the tax money improperly collected and held by the Government.

Based on Fifth Audit.

Representative Garner commented caustically on the statement when it was shown him, especially on that portion of it relating to the additional deductions for amortization.

"This settlement," he said, "is based on the fifth audit which the treasury has conducted on this account. Since the result finally arrived at differs materially from previous ones, it is a confession that the first four audits were erroneous. All five audits were made by the same people; they dealth with the same subject. If they got it wrong four times, what reason is there to suppose that they got it right the fifth time?"

Garner exhibited a prepared chart showing the interesting variations which have marked the corporation's successive claims for amortization allowance, and the contrasting results of the treasury's successive audits. The corporation's claims have ranged from $49,000,000 to $114,000,000 while the treasury's audits have resulted in sums ranging from $19,000,000 to $55,800,000.

Thus the corporation originally claimed an amortization allowance of $49,000,000. Following the end of the Wilson administration, under which the assessments were made and the inauguration of the Harding administration, the company increased its claim to $82,000,000. The treasury made an audit which resulted in an allowance of $55,800,000. Then the company increased its claim to $114,000,000.

Couzens Launched Inquiry.

At this juncture Senator Couzens of Michigan launched his investigation of the Treasury, which resulted in grave charges of favoritism and irregularities. Thereupon the Treasury conducted another audit, on the basis of which it reduced the allowance to $19,000,000. Subsequent audits, in 1928, resulted in increasing the allowance, first to $22,000,000 and then to $32,000,000, and the final allowance forming the basis of the present refund, was $48,000,000—within a million of the corporations' original claim.

"Either the Treasury must plead guilty to gross incompetence in making the previous assessments, or to gross favoritism in making the final settlement, and apparently it has chosen the former alternate," Garner said. "Obviously the public can place no confidence in a public official who advances his own mistakes as a justification of his own acts.

"For a man called the 'greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton' to say that it takes him 10 years to arrive at the proper deductions to be allowed a taxpayer on account of ordinary business expenses is perfectly silly," he added. "Any competent bookkeeper could do it in a short time."

TWO GERMAN OCEAN LINES REPORTED IN AGREEMENT

Hamburg-America and Lloyd Companies Said to Have Made Operating Pact.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 22.—An agreement of close co-operation between the Hamburg-American and the North German-Lloyd lines is expected to be announced officially at the meetings of the two boards, set, respectively, for March 24 and 25.

Both companies issued a joint statement today saying neither knew anything about the newspaper reports which they had not authorized, but adding: "Business courtesy forbids making any statement just now when the boards of both companies have not yet occupied themselves with the matter." This was generally interpreted as indicating a working agreement was afoot and would be announced early next week.

The motives for closer co-operation are chiefly explained by the ever stronger competition of foreign shipping companies, some of which are state subsidized, which is not the case in Germany. Under the agreement a big saving would be effected in the general costs. The joint fleet will number 320 steamers aggregating more than 2,000,000 gross registered tons.

HOOVERS ALL TOGETHER AGAIN

First Time at White House Since President's Inauguration.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The two sons of President and Mrs. Hoover tonight are together at the White House with their parents for the first time since Mr. Hoover's inauguration. Allan Hoover arrived on vacation from Cambridge, Mass., where he is a student at the School of Business Administration at Harvard University. Herbert Hoover Jr. came up from the fishing camp of Lawrence Richey, one of the President's secretaries, near Frederick, Md.

Next week the President and Mrs. Hoover expect to make their first visit in 1930 to the Hoover camp on the Rapidan in the Virginia hills.

Knell Turned to Joy-Bell.

LONDON, March 22.—The peals of the famous Lutine bell at Lloyds new bring joy instead of gloom to the insurance men. Formerly the bell tolled only when a ship was reported in distress or missing. During the heavy gales all over the world this winter it worked overtime. It made such dismal noise that the directors decided instead to have it rung only to announce that a missing ship had been found.

MICHIGAN DEFIES RADIO BOARD; TO HAVE OWN STATION

Governor Says Police Broadcasting System Won't Wait for Wave Length Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

LANSING, Mich., March 22.—Gov. Green today defied the Federal Radio Commission in issuing an announcement that the State will proceed immediately with the construction of a broadcasting station for the State. He said bids would be opened Monday.

"Inasmuch as the State has not surrendered its police power to the national Government, Michigan will not delay in this matter, but will proceed at once with the installation of the radio broadcasting station that will cover all parts of Michigan," the Governor said.

The Governor's statement was prompted by announcement by the Federal Radio Commission that it would hold a hearing on Michigan's petition for a wave length "within a couple of months." The Governor is annoyed by the delay.

MILWAUKEE FAVORS DRY ACT REPEAL BY BIG MAJORITY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Milwaukee, Atlantic City and Hartford, Conn., show large majorities for outright repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in the Literary Digest prohibition poll as tabulated to date. In nine other cities listed today, the vote for repeal and the vote for modification of the Volstead act total more than the vote for retention and enforcement. The vote of Orange, N. J., includes East Orange and South Orange. The tabulation:

ROBBERS HANDCUFF VICTIMS IN $150,000 JEWELRY HOLDUP

Select Only Choicest of Stock in Jamaica (L. I.) Shop and Make Their Escape.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Selecting only the finest gems, three robbers held up a jewelry store in Jamaica, L. I., today and escaped with loot valued at $150,000.

The store had just been opened for the day when one of the robbers entered, drew a pistol and forced Harry L. Gross, partner of the jewelry firm, and two of his employes to hold up their hands. Two other men, who had been waiting outside the store, entered and handcuffed Gross to one of his employes and held the other under guard. A girl clerk and a window washer who entered while the holdup was in progress also were handcuffed.

While one robber stood guard the other two went about selecting diamonds and other jewels from the stock. Then all walked out together. No trace of the robbers has been found.

POLICE AND COMMUNISTS CLASH ON FIFTH AVENUE

Seven Arrested, Including Two Women, and a Boy; Several Treated for Injuries.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 22.—One of three Communist demonstrations today resulted in a clash of about 200 demonstrators with police on Fifth avenue, and the arrest of five men, two women and a boy. Police said one of their number had been knocked down and beaten, and others mauled and pushed. The arrests were made in front of the Children's Society of the Heckscher Foundation. Most of the prisoners were treated for minor injuries.

The demonstration was in protest against the lodging at the Children's Society of Harry Eisman, 16 years old, who since has been transferred to the reformatory at Hawthorne, N. Y., for his part in the Communist riot in Union Square on March 6.

Wind Fills Trawler With Herring.

BOSTON, March 22.—Capt. John Hally and his crew of the beam trawler Breeze, came into the fish pier today from George's Banks. Sixty miles east of Cape Cod yesterday the Breeze ran into a northwesterly gale and was boarded by heavy seas. When the water receded, the trawler's deck and deck spaces were filled with silvery herring.

VOTE ON TARIFF IN SENATE SET FOR TOMORROW

SIXTH ATTEMPT TO PUT DUTY ON OIL BEATEN

Thought President Will Sign Bill if Substitute Flexible Plan and Debenture Are Removed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Completing the revision of the tariff bill, the Senate tonight recessed until Monday for a few speeches by factional leaders before taking a final vote. Passage of the Hawley-Smoot measure, which will send it to a conference with the House for adjustment of several hundred differences, appears certain.

It was a fretful group that went home after nearly seven months of wrangling over the controversial issue. Frequent sharp exchanges marked another night session.

There was a scattering of spectators in the galleries. Around the floor was a host of experts from the Tariff Commission, on hand to furnish statistical advice on the numerous last-minute amendments. The work was finished at 8:20 P. M.

The last day of the revision saw no important changes in the rate structure or administrative sections. A sixth attempt to put a tariff on oil and gasoline, now on the free list, failed by a vote of 45 to 33.

Promises New Attack on Rates.

Senator Thomas (Dem.) Okla., who proposed rates of 10 per cent on crude oil and 20 per cent on petroleum by-products and lost, served notice he would move before the final vote is taken that the bill be recommitted with instructions to strike out all rate changes except those on agricultural products. A similar motion planned by Thomas to limit the revision to agriculture without sending the measure back to the Finance Committee was ruled out of order by Vice President Curtis.

Two previous attempts to restrict the revision to farm products have failed. One by Senator Borah, (Rep.) Ida., last June was defeated by a single vote. Thomas lost a similar move later by a more decisive margin.

After being turned down the sixth time on an oil tariff, the tall gray-haired Oklahoman obtained approval of an amendment instructing the Tariff Commission to investigate and report to Congress on costs of oil to refiners on the Atlantic Seaboard of crude oil from domestic fields during the last three years and the present approximate average cost a barrel delivered to the same points from Lake Maracaibo, Venezuela.

New information reached him today, Thomas said, to the effect that the Royal Dutch was advertising an issue of stock of $40,000,000 to the people of the United States to work wells in other lands. He listed the profits of this concern at $40,000,000 in 1928.

"Oil Industry in U. S. Killed."

"Yesterday the Senate sent the oil industry of America to its death," Thomas asserted, referring to the defeat of an oil tariff proposal by Senator Pine (Rep.), also of Oklahoma.

Senator Wagner (Dem.), New York, succeeded in having approved an amendment to make Jan. 1, 1932, the effective date for barring the importation of merchandise, produced or manufactured abroad by forced or indentured labor.

Wagner also had restored to the bill the right of appeal to the courts by Customs brokers whose licenses had been revoked by the Secretary of the Treasury.

An effort by Senator Fletcher (Dem.), Florida, to make the bill rate of 15 cents a pound on alligator pears and mangos apply to such fruit coming from Cuba failed. These commodities now come in free from Cuba, under the Cuban-American reciprocity treaty.

Senators Smoot, Utah, and Norris, Nebraska, Republicans, declared that the proposal would have violated the international agreement.

The Senate measure carries the highest protection in history on agricultural and woolen products. The House boosted these levies

WIFE GOES HOME AFTER LOVE TEST, MAN KILLS SELF

Mrs. Benjamin March Returns to Detroit and to Husband Who Gave Her Month to Experiment.

ADMIRER ENDS LIFE AFTER SHE LEAVES

Pair Who Decided Only Thing They Wanted Was "Each Other" Parted at Miami.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., March 22.—A love test which Benjamin March of Detroit allowed his wife to make whereby she was permitted to take extended visits to Bermuda, Havana and the Florida coast was disclosed today after Thomas A. Newton, son of a Detroit millionaire, ended his life in a Miami, Fla., hotel.

March is curator of Asiatic art at the Detroit Institute of Art. They have been married four years and have an 18-months-old daughter. The Newtons have been married ten years and are childless. Meeting at the home of the mutual friends, Newton and Mrs. March, both social leaders, formed an acquaintance.

Mrs. March is an author, a writer of children's stories and verse. Newton delved into mystic and strange religions, and Benjamin March was interested in his art.

This is his version of what happened:

"Newton's attention to my wife increased in the autumn of 1929. He began to see her with regularity in December, when the depression in the stock market gave him more leisure and the pressure of my work was greater.

Does Not Check Intimacy.

"I made no move to check their friendship. It has always been obvious to me that prohibitions and denials are not intelligent solutions of various problems.

"By Feb. 22 they had come to the conclusion that what each wanted most in life was the other. They proposed to go away together. I agreed to their proposal but I still hoped that my wife's ultimate happiness would be with me and our child. Accordingly I agreed that they go away on condition that it be regarded experimentally. I believed that if the experimental method is scientifically valid in the laboratory, it ought to have a certain validity in life.

"I assured my wife that if she desired after a month of this experiment to leave me and the baby permanently, she should have that privilege. I further told her that if she discovered finally that she wanted to return and resume life with me, I would try to make that life agreeable.

Why Newton Killed Self.

Following the decision of Mrs. March to return to her husband and child, Newton shot himself in his hotel room, after summoning the management.

Meanwhile, on a train, northward bound, and unaware of Newton's act, Mrs. March wired her husband at Detroit:

"Safe on way home. Tom quiet and happy in unchanged plans. Sweet love for you, Baby and Granny."

Mrs. Esther Newton, the second woman in the case, is on her way to Florida with his parents to claim the body of her husband.

FINDS ON TABLET REPORT OF TRIAL HELD 2200 B. C.

Prof. Lutz of California U. Thinks Mesopotamian Record Oldest Legal Document.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 22.—A clay tablet which he thinks is the oldest legal document in existence was described tonight by its finder, Dr. Henry F. Lutz, professor of Assyriology at the University of California, at a meeting of alumni.

Prof. Lutz, who came back from Mesopotamia on March 5, said he thought the tablet, on which was recorded the verdict in a legal case about 2200 years before Christ, was a contribution to the history of jurisprudence.

"The accused was a feudatory and in some way had shown insubordination in his Lord's son, and later had beaten him up," the tablet recorded. "The case came up before a civil court but as that tribunal had no jurisdiction over a feudal subject he was sent under guard to Babylon, where he was judged by a feudatory tribunal and found guilty. He got off by payment of a heavy fine."

KILLS SELF AT PLAY

ROY HOLLAND.

YOUTH HANGS SELF IN THROWING LASSO

Roy Holland, 16, Victim of Unusual Accident—Body Found by Brother.

Roy Holland, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Holland, 2648 Ann avenue, accidentally hanged himself at his home yesterday afternoon with an improvised lasso.

The boy had looped one end of a piece of clothes line over his shoulder and was leaning outward from the banister of a first-floor rear porch, attempting to throw the noose to a post on the second-floor banister.

Apparently he lost his balance when he succeeded in the attempt and fell over the banister. His 10-year-old brother, Ray entering the yard through the rear gate, saw the body dangling from the porch and called his mother. Examination at the Morgue showed death was caused by strangulation.

Roy attended McKinley High School until last year and had worked occasionally as a clerk. He was the oldest of four children.

U. S. HIGH COMMISSIONER IN HAITI TO BE WITHDRAWN

Hoover's Investigators Suggest Step but Praise Work of John H. Russell.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Although the work of Brigadier-General John H. Russell, American High Commissioner of Haiti, has received the public praise of the presidential Haiti commission, his early withdrawal from Haiti, as a result of the commission's recommendations made yesterday to President Hoover is expected in official circles.

General dissatisfaction of the Haitians with United States Marine occupation was regarded as the basis for the indication that Russell would withdraw. On the other hand, the commission made the announcement yesterday that it had been "particularly impressed with the splendid results accomplished under the sincere and efficient direction of Gen. Russell."

Gen. Russell has been High Commissioner since 1922.

William Allen White of Kansas, and James Kearney of New Jersey, both newspaper publishers, spent the afternoon together compiling the various observations made by the commissioners preliminary to completing a final report.

CALENDAR HAD 10-DAY WEEK

Tiahuanacan Relic in Bolivia Provided Three-Week Months.

By the Associated Press.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, March 22.—Prof. Arthur Posnansky, German scientist, said in an interview today that he had found among the relics of the Tiahuanacans, a race that flourished thousands of years ago, a calendar which he considers more practical than that now generally in use.

It provided a year of 12 months, like the Gregorian calendar, but divided the months into three weeks of 10 days each. The odd days were used as national holidays, or were set aside for sun worship.

SHEEP AT 35 CENTS A DOZEN

Even That is a High Price in Australian Arid Area.

By the Associated Press.

BRISBANE, Australia, March 22.—A sheepman in the Mungindi district of Queensland where there has been little rain for two years, has sold 1700 sheep at 25 cents a dozen.

Other sheepmen in the district envy him. They cannot give their stock away. Owing to the lack of rain the sheep are a burden rather than an asset, as feed costs have risen to exorbitant levels.

JURY ACQUITS DOHENY OF BRIBERY ON FIRST BALLOT

Millionaire in Tears Thanks Jurors, Poses for Talking Pictures and Departs Amid Cheers of Crowd Outside.

VERDICT REACHED IN 15 MINUTES

Judge Ruled Fall (Who Was Convicted) Might Be Guilty of Accepting Bribe and Doheny Not Guilty of Giving It.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Edward L. Doheny was acquitted today in the District of Columbia Supreme Court of having paid a bribe of $100,000 to Albert B. Fall, Secretary of the Interior in the Harding Cabinet, in order to obtain the Elk Hills oil lease. Only one ballot was taken by the jury, which was composed of nine men and three women. The jury returned to the court one hour and six minutes after it retired.

The 73-year-old multimillionaire stood still staring ahead, awaiting announcement of the verdict by the jury foreman, Chelsey P. Ray. With the words "not guilty," some of the spectators, who crowded the courtroom, cheered, to be silenced immediately by bailiffs. Justice Hitz thanked and dismissed the jury, then left the bench.

Doheny still stood, but tears were pouring down his wrinkled cheeks.

For seven years his name had been involved in the oil scandal, but for the second time a jury had acquitted him. His first acquittal was on a charge of having conspired with Fall to obtain the Elk Hills lease. The former Secretary of the Interior also was acquitted of that charge, but only five months ago was convicted in the same court on the same charge of which Doheny was acquitted. Fall was sentenced to serve one year in jail and to pay a fine of $100,000 for accepting a bribe of $100,000 from Doheny. Fall is free on bond pending an appeal.

Doheny's Thank Jurors.

Mrs. Doheny pushed her way to the side of her husband after hearing the verdict today, and clasped him in her arms while she wept.

After Justice Hitz had left the bench, numerous friends and relatives followed her within the fenced enclosure and surrounded the Dohenys as they thanked members of the jury for their verdict.

Some of the jurors wept, and one, Emory H. English, who walked on crutches, due to the loss of his right leg, sat in his chair and cried when Doheny came over and shook his hand. Leaving the courtroom, Doheny posed for photographers and sound pictures.

"Of course I am happy," he said, facing the camera men's microphones. "I am only sorry that the same verdict could not have gone to my friend, Mr. Fall, who deserved it as much as I do."

There was a burst of hurrahs from the crowd, as the Doheny party entered an automobile.

Verdict in 15 Minutes.

The jurors refused to discuss what took place in the jury room today other than to say that the first ballot taken was unanimous for acquittal. The foreman told counsel that he verdict had been reached 15 minutes after the jury retired. He said the indictment was read, to be followed with a brief discussion of its terms, and then the first ballot was called for. After finding that there was no difference of opinion, the jury rested for little more than half an hour before returning to the courtroom. It was locked up during the trial.

The Government charged that the $100,000 which Doheny sent Fall on May 30, 1921, was a bribe prior to the negotiation of a contract for the construction of a naval oil storage plant at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. That contract contained a clause which gave the successful bidder—Doheny's Pan-American Petroleum & Transport Co.—a preference to the Elk Hills lease.

Doheny insisted that the money was a loan to an old friend in need and testified that it was given to Fall without any thought of in-

HOOVER WILL NOT ASK FOR HUSTON'S RESIGNATION

Up to G. O. P. Chairman to Decide Whether He Will Retire, President Has Informed Party's Leaders.

OLD GUARD CHIEFS CHANGE ATTITUDE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—It is up to Claudius A. Huston to decide whether he will resign as Republican Chairman. President Hoover will not ask for the resignation; he has so informed Republican leaders who have discussed the situation with him in the last 48 hours. Several prominent leaders have told the President that the storm over Huston may "blow over."

Senators Watson of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate, McNary, Moses and others have discussed the Huston case with Mr. Hoover, who has been told fully of the testimony before the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee disclosing how Huston induced the Union Carbide Co. to give him funds, ostensibly needed at once, for their lobby on Muscle Shoals, but actually diverted by Huston to his private brokerage account to supply more margins for stocks he had bought.

Yesterday Republican leaders were clamoring for Huston's dismissal, and speculating on his successor. Today, taking cognizance of the White House attitude, they are hoping the publicity and agitation will die down and be sufficiently forgotten so that Huston can remain.

But with the Muscle Shoals bill due to come up next week, there is uneasiness among Republican leaders over the use that Senators Norris, Caraway and others may take of the disclosures of Huston's lobbying for the American Cyanamid and Union Carbide bids for the Government's water power plant.

The fact that Chairman Caraway of the lobby committee is content to let the Huston record speak for itself, without further prying into his affairs, has contributed to the hope that the affair will subside.

Caraway, for his part, as well as other Democrats, say they prefer to have Huston stay as Republican chairman in the forthcoming senatorial and congressional elections if the President and his party are content to face the issue that will be made over it.

Hoover Faces Two Alternatives.

Mr. Hoover, faced with the alternatives of taking action himself or leaving it to Huston, chose the latter course, upon the advice of the leaders who have consulted with him. The meeting of the Republican Executive Committee, with power to oust Huston and name a successor, is to be called in two weeks or so, to name a secretary as successor to Congressman Fort of New Jersey, who has resigned, but unless members of the committee demand the ouster there is no longer any plan among party chiefs here to use this occasion to rid the party of the present chairman.

Rather the program is to stand pat and await public reaction. This, frankly, is the position expressed by the leading senatorial figures of the party. If the clamor against Huston continues, they expect him to resign to save the party further embarrassment. If it dies down, they will let matters stand as they are, but unless he changes his mind, Mr. Hoover will not act to force Huston out.

In accordance with this stand, Republican leaders were minimizing the Huston disclosures today, saying that nothing had been shown against him beyond a "natural mistake in judgment." They felt that he should not have accepted funds for one purpose and used them for another purpose. But their contention is that there was nothing illegal or reprehensible about it.

The Caraway committee will make a report to the Senate giving a far different version of it. This report, Caraway said today, will be brief.

President Much Disturbed.

That Mr. Hoover is much distressed and disturbed over the situation has been made clear to every Senator who has talked over the Huston predicament with him. But they have brought back the impression that Mr. Hover is still reserving judgment, or at least has not expressed any opinion of his own as to the propriety of the chairman's conduct.

It would be incorrect to assume that the party leaders are at all happy over the situation, and it is apparent that they hope Huston will decide to resign. Apparently with that end in mind, they were at pains today to emphasize how embarrassing his continuance as chairman makes it for the party with the Muscle Shoals legislation about to hold the center of the Senate stage.

That the situation has helped Norris in his fight for his Government operation bill, which Coolidge killed by pocket veto, is generally agreed in the Senate. Similarly it has about wrecked whatever chance the Cyanamid and Union Carbide had of getting the valuable Government property for themselves.

JOHN DWIGHT FILLEY.

J. D. FILLEY DIES OF PNEUMONIA AT ISTANBUL, TURKEY

He Had Gone Abroad With Daughters Who Returned Home Wednesday While He Continued Trip.

John Dwight Filley, retired banker, manufacturer and prominent St. Louisan, died of pneumonia in the American Hospital in Istanbul, Turkey, early yesterday, relatives in St. Louis were advised by cablegram. He had started alone upon a tour of the Holy Land and had been ill since Monday. He was 77 years old.

Before his retirement from business four years ago, Mr. Filley was president of the American Manufacturing Co. and was for many years a director of the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and First National Bank. For a time he was president of the trust company. Earlier in his career he was vice president of the Standard Mills Bagging Co.

Accompanied by two daughters, Mrs. James H. Wear Jr., 5333 Waterman avenue, and Mrs. Thomas McPheeters, 5099 Waterman, he sailed on a cruise of the Mediterranean Feb. 15. His daughters remained with him through a motor tour of North Africa and left him in Marseilles, France, March 7. They returned home, arriving in St. Louis Wednesday, and he continued his journey to the Holy Land alone. He was in excellent health when they last saw him.

Last Monday his son-in-law, James H. Wear, was advised by a Canadian steamship line that Mr. Filley was ill and had been taken to the hospital. Communication with the hospital later disclosed his condition was worse and that his illness had been diagnosed as pneumonia. A third cablegram, yesterday morning, reporting his illness as critical, was followed within an hour by a fourth, announcing his death. His death occurred at 2 p. m., Contantinople time, or 7 a. m. St. Louis time.

A niece, Miss Helen Morton, who lives in Paris, France, left for Istanbul immediately. His body will be sent to the United States at once. Funeral arrangements will not be made until after its arrival. The trip from Istanbul to the United States takes about two weeks.

Mr. Filley, who resided at 40 Westmoreland place, was born in St. Louis and lived here all of his life. He was educated in the public schools and Washington University. His father was Oliver Dwight Filley, who was Mayor of St. Louis from 1858 to 1860. He was married to Miss Fannie L. Douglass Feb. 16, 1881. Four children were born, of whom three survive. They are Mrs. Wear, Mrs. McPheeters and Mrs. Ralph Simpkins, 5328 Waterman avenue. Lieut. John Dwight Filley Jr. was the first commissioned officer from St. Louis killed in the World War. He was fatally wounded at Chateau Thierry June 6, 1918. Mrs. Filley died in 1926. Her death, like that of her husband, occurred away from home, she having been stricken suddenly when on a visit to New York.

Besides his three daughters, Mr. Filley is survived by three sisters, Mrs. John T. Davis, 17 Westmoreland place; Mrs. Isaac W. Morton, 43 Portland place, and Mrs. Robert Moore, 61 Vandeventer place. Among other relatives is Dwight Filley Davis, former Secretary of War and now Governor-General of the Philippines, a nephew.

EILSON AND BORLAND, FLYERS, WILL BE HONORED TODAY

Bombardment Squadron Will Circle Over Seattle Dropping Flowers; Notables in Cortege.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, WASH., March 22.—After buffeting heavy head winds on the trip south, the steamship Alaska arrived here tonight, with the bodies of Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, American aviators, killed November 9, while on a flight from Teller, Alaska, to the icebound fur trading ship Nanuk at North Cape, Siberia. The bodies were placed aboard the ship at Seward, Alaska, last Sunday.

Late arrival of the ship forced postponement of funeral services, originally planned for today, until tomorrow. Borland will be buried in Seattle. The body of Eielson will be taken to Hatton, N. D., the family home for burial.

The Aerial 484th Bombardment Squadron and commercial planes, which will drop flowers, will circle over the funeral procession.

In the funeral cortege will be State and city officials, a guard of honor from North Dakota, which will accompany Eielson's body to Hatton. State and city police and aviators, including the Americans, Canadians and Russians who searched the Arctic wastes for their bodies, and Legionnaires, Fort Lawton soldiers and National Guardsmen of Washington. The train will start homeward with the body tomorrow night.

By the Associated Press.

BISMARCK, N. D., March 22.—North Dakota will have an official period of mourning for Carl Ben Eielson, its distinguished son, who was killed in the Arctic Nov. 9. Gov. George F. Shafer directed that flags be placed at half staff on March 26 and that the hours from noon to 5 p. m. be observed as a period of mourning. All public business within the State will be suspended and the schools closed during the period.

DE VALERA GETS COLD GREETING FROM MAYOR OF BOSTON

BOSTON, March 22.—Eamonn de Valera, head of the Fianna Fial party in Ireland, received a cool reception from Mayor James M. Curley at City Hall today when the leader of the Irish opposition called to pay his respects after arriving from Philadelphia.

The Mayor subjected De Valera to a close interrogation concerning what Curley characterized as his "destructive policy." The Mayor took him to particular task for his opposition to the Shannon River hydro-electric project.

Curley asserted that Ireland could never hope for real progress until a genuine republic was formed to embrace not only the southern but also the six northern counties. The Mayor contrasted De Valera's attitude with that of President von Hindenburg of German, who, Curley said, had abandoned his war-time militarism for a constructive peace-time attitude that had put Germany back on its feet.

De Valera insisted that he was working for a united Ireland, but Curley rejoined with the observation: "That will never be if you continue the policy you have adopted in the past few years."

Later De Valera went to the State House, where he was welcomed on behalf of Gov. Frank G. Allen by Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner.

ENGLAND'S HANGMAN FEELS PRESSURE OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Paid on Piecework Basis; Will Testify He Does Not Favor Abolishing Capital Penalty.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 22.—Pierpont, for 20 years England's public hangman, is the latest person to feel the pressure of unemployment.

His wife complains that his job is too irregular, and that, since he is paid on a "piecework" basis, this makes a serious difference.

Pierpont will testify shortly before the select committee of Parliament studying capital punishment that he is not in favor of abolition of capital punishment, his reason being: "Murderers, when reprieved and sent to penal servitude for life, are a great expense to the country. They should be made to suffer the same penalty as the victim."

cannot convict $100,000,000 of a felony."

Chairman Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, of the Senate Public Lands Committee, said: "It is unfortunate that Doheny and Fall were not tried together and by the same jury. The same jury should have received the evidence in such cases. It is another one of those queer twists of justice in the District of Columbia courts."

Doheny, his wife, their daughter-in-law and five grandchildren, will board their 290-foot oceangoing yacht, Casiana, this summer and "go places, mostly on the ocean, particularly down the Pacific Coast to the South Seas."

Mrs. Doheny disclosed these plans today.

Mr. and Mrs. Doheny left the courtroom together to have luncheon with about 40 friends and relatives, all of whom came across the continent to stand by them through the trial. They will start back home probably Tuesday.

While Mrs. Doheny talked, he turned to the telegrams. There was one from Bishop Cantrell of California. There were many from men prominent in industry. There was one from El Paso, Tex., that read: "We thank God and rejoice for you in this great vindication. Love from all the family—Albert and Emma Fall."

More than any other, Mrs. Doheny rejoiced over a message signed "Lucy." It was from the widow of Edward L. Doheny Jr., and her five children. "We will take them with us and spend the summer on the yacht." Mrs. Doheny said. "All of us need a rest."

What Doheny hopes will be the last court action he must face as a result of the oil scandals of the Harding administration, is a civil suit for $16,000,000 damages brought by one of the stockholders of Doheny's Pan-American Petroleum Co. The suit is docketed in a Federal Court of California for April 29.

FALL SAYS 'TRUTH HAS TRIUMPHED'

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., March 22.—Declaring that "truth and innocence finally have triumphed" in the acquittal of Edward L. Doheny in a bribery charge Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, said today the oil magnate was freed on the "identical evidence" upon which he (Fall) was convicted on a similar charge.

"It now remains for the people to answer the puzzle," said Fall. "As to the position of these verdicts have left the cases I think it is for the newspapers, as leading or voicing public sentiment, to ponder the matter for themselves and answer the puzzle, if they can.

"A jury found me guilty of accepting a bribe; a jury which heard identical evidence, acquitted Mr. Doheny. Of course, I rejoice with the Doheny's and their friends.

"The foreman of the jury announcing the verdict in my case, I am informed, stated to newspapermen immediately afterwards that nine of the jurymen in that case voted for acquittal on the first ballot and apparently were originally in perfect agreement with the 12 intelligent jurors who have today recorded the Doheny verdict."

DOHENY ACQUITTED OF GIVING BRIBE TO GET OIL LEASE

fluencing his official actions regarding the leases.

Justice Hitz, in his charge to the jury, told it that the only thing they had to decide was whether Doheny intended to bribe Fall when he sent him the $100,000. He said unless they determined that it was Doheny's intent to influence Fall's action they must acquit him. The Judge included in his charge the defense prayer that it was possible for Fall to be guilty of accepting a bribe and Doheny to be not guilty of giving it.

The trial lasted 10 days.

The scene in the courtroom today was in sharpest contrast to that in the same room last October, after Fall had been convicted of receiving the bribe. Doheny at that time sat as if stunned and after Justice Hitz had left the room, he rose and with tears of anger on his face, cried: "It's that damn Court!"

Mark Thompson, who, with Frank Hogan—chief counsel for Doheny at his trial—defended Fall, said that the verdict was "a clear vindication" of the former Secretary of the Interior.

"The Judge charged the jury that the whole point," Thompson said, "was whether Doheny bribed Fall. The jury's verdict was a clear vindication of both of them."

"You Can't Convict $100,000,000."

Word of the verdict spread quickly to the Senate, where the investigation leading to the trial of Doheny, Albert Fall and Harry F. Sinclair were started.

"It is another evidence," commented Senator Norris (Rep.), Nebraska, "that under our system you

STORY OF OIL SCANDAL NOW IN LAST CHAPTER

Fall's Sudden Prosperity Led to Disclosures of Elk Hills and Teapot Dome Deals.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Edward L. Doheny's troubles with the Government began in 1923 after Albert B. Fall's sudden rise from moderate prosperity to apparent affluence attracted the attention of the Senate.

The oil leasing policy of the Harding administration had caused scrutiny and adverse comment. Fall, then Secretary of the Interior, played a major part in it, and was asked where he got the money to purchase a ranch next to him own in New Mexico. He bluntly informed his questioners that it was none of their business. He was then called for further questioning by the Senate Oil Committee.

The developments that followed have been told and retold. They included Fall's false story that he got $100,000 from Edward B. McLean, Washington publisher.

Doheny's Pan-American Petroleum & Transport Co. had leased the Elk Hills, Cal., naval oil reserve. Doheny went before the Senate Oil Committee and said that he gave Fall $100,000. He said it was a loan to an old friend whom he had known since 1886 when both were young. The Government later charged that it was a bribe for the Elk Hills award.

Fall and Doheny Indicted.

Fall's troubles multiplied as did those of Doheny. The spotlight of publicity was turned on the lease of Teapot Dome to a Harry F. Sinclair Co., and shifted back and forth from it to the Elk Hills lease in the years that followed.

Harding had died in office. Fall had resigned from the Cabinet. President Coolidge answered the demand for action by appointing Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene, former Senator from Ohio, as special prosecutors to take charge of the oil lease criminal and civil investigations.

They presented the cases to the grand jury, Doheny was indicted on a charge of giving Fall a bribe and Fall was indicted on a charge of accepting it. Then both were indicted on a charge of conspiring to defraud the Government of the Elk Hills lease. When tried on the latter charge they were acquitted.

Teapot Dome.

Sinclair and Fall were indicted on separate charges of conspiring to defraud the Government of the Teapot Dome lease, but Fall became sick before the trial of this case. Sinclair was acquitted.

The prosecution, after the two acquittals, planned to drop the bribery charges against Doheny and Fall, but, according to generally accredited reports, was ordered by President Coolidge to press them.

Last October a jury in the same court in which Doheny was tried, returned a verdict convicting Fall of accepting a bribe from Doheny. Fall was sentenced to serve one year in jail and to pay a fine of $100,000.

While the bribery charges against Fall and Doheny were awaiting trial the Government brought civil suits for recovery of the naval oil reserves, and won the cases. The verdicts were upheld by the Supreme Court. The oil lands were returned to the jurisdiction of the navy. In handing down its opinion the Supreme Court branded Fall as a "faithless public servant."

Doheny's acquittal is thought to be the end of the criminal trials growing out of oil leases. Harry F. Sinclair has served his sentences for contempt of court and of the Senate. Death or political oblivion has removed others who figured prominently in the Senate's investigations of the oil leases.

The late Edwin Denby, Harding's Secretary of the Navy, whom his friends stoutly maintained was a victim of circumstances, is dead. Harry M. Daugherty, Harding's Attorney-General, resigned before the Senate inquiries closed and is no longer a prominent figure in his party councils.

Fall's appeal from his conviction is yet to be heard, and that is expected to be the end.

Billion a Year Added to Living Costs by New Tariff, Norris Says

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellog Building.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—About $1,000,000,000 a year will be added to the living costs of the American people under the new tariff, providing the bill is passed by Congress and signed by President Hoover in anything approximating the form it will leave the Senate next week.

This estimate, made tonight by Senator Norris of Nebraska, takes account of the fact that many of the rate increases made by the House and reduced by the Senate, will be partially restored when the bill comes out of conference a few weeks hence. In general, the rates adopted by the House were higher than those fixed by the Senate, but the general level of Senate rates is far higher than those existing under the present law, and the final figures will be a compromise between House and Senate figures.

It is certain that the bill in its final form will provide for increased taxes on literally thousands of commodities, many of them in general use. By excluding foreign products, or increasing the prices at which they can be sold, the bill would enable American manufacturers to introduce drastic increases in the price of their own products.

Imported Commodities Affected.

Among the more important commodities affected by the bill, Senator Norris listed the following, together with the amounts which would be added to the present total yearly cost paid by consumers:

Clothing	$125,000,000
Cement	60,000,000
Rayon	50,000,000
Chemicals	50,000,000
Lumber	55,000,000
Sugar	30,000,000
Chinaware	30,000,000
Tiling	20,000,000
Brick	15,000,00

A number of the increases on these major items were made possible by the log-rolling, vote-swapping plan engineered in the Senate by the former lobbyist, Senator Grundy (Rep.), Pennsylvania, which resulted in disrupting the Progressive-Democratic coalition, and overturning the reductions which it had previously written into the bill as it came from the House. Among the rates thus increased, after increases had previously been refused by the Senate, were those on sugar, lumber and cement.

Tax on Consumers of Nation.

"The bill," said Senator Norris, "will go down in history as one of the most audacious attempts ever made to levy a tax on the consumers of the entire nation for the benefit of a few greedy people—many of them already rich beyond the dreams of avarice."

Senator Patterson (Rep.), Missouri, has been conspicuous by voting for virtually every increase offered. Senator Hawes (Dem.), after voting with the Progressive-Democratic coalition against higher rates on many items, finally went over to Grundy and the Old Guard and voted for the increase on lumber, rayon and chemicals, in addition to voting for increases on lesser items.

DOHENY WITNESS VISITS HOOVER

Charles E. Harwood, 99, Calls at White House.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Charles E. Harwood, 99-year-old character witness for Edward L. Doheny, visited the White House today to pay his respects to the President. He became a friend of Herbert Hoover Jr. in California, where he went because of his health more than 45 years ago.

Seventy-eight years ago Harwood was graduated from Wiliams College, Williamstown, Mass. Thirteen years later he went to Missouri, seeking a better climate. About 20 years later Harwood, still in ill-health, went to the west coast, settling up Upland, Cal. In that State he became connected with Edward L. Doheny's oil business, something over 30 years ago.

VILLAGE OFFICERS QUIT AS GANDHI MARCHES ON

33 Heads, 11 Assistants Have Resigned in Janbusar District Alone.

By the Associated Press.

JAMBUSAR, Bombay Presidency, India, March 22.—Mahatma Ghandhi's march opening the civil disobedience campaign has brought about the resignation of village officials in increasing numbers recently.

In a speech at Ankhi today Ghandhi stated that 33 head men and 11 assistant head men had resigned in the Jambusar district. According to information received here, many village officials are resigning in the Jalalpur district also, in anticipation of Ghandhi's coming to manufacture salt from sea water in violation of the Government monopoly.

Several members of the all-India Congress Committee, including Pandit Motilal Nehru, and his son Jawaharlal Nehru, today informally discussed the civil disobedience campaign with Ghandhi.

Addressing Ghandi's meeting, Motilal Nehru said that the march of the volunteers would be memorable in Indian history, and that the places through which Ghandhi had passed would be considered sacred.

JAMBUSAR, Bombay, India, March 22.—Mahatma Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, in a speech today at Ankhi severely reproved the villagers for so enforcing the social boycott against policemen that the officers were unable to obtain food.

The Mahatma declared it was against religious principles to starve officials and that those who harbored active enmity to the Government would be joining his enemies even though they should not salute officers.

Gandhi said he would suck snake's poison "even from Gen. Dyer" if he should be bitten. Gen. Dyer resigned from the British army after a vigorous protest against his order to troops to fire on a mob of 5000 Indians in 1919. Three hundred eighty natives were killed and 1200 injured.

RAGOON, Burma, March 22.—J. M. Sengupta, Mayor of Calcutta, was sentenced today to 10 days' imprisonment for seditious utterances in support of Mahatma Gandhi and his campaign of civil disobedience.

EVEN BROTHERS DIVIDED IN FIGHT ON STEEL MERGER

Samuel Mather Favors Bethlehem Firm Taking Over Sheet and Tube Co., W. G. Mather Against Plan.

SCHWAB AND GRACE ALSO FOR PROPOSAL

Cleveland and Youngstown Interests Lead Opposition —Scramble On for Proxies.

By the Associated Press.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 22.—Here in the rich Mahoning steel district, envisioned by its developers as the future "Ruhr of America," a contest among financial giants is under way. Victory for one side will mean a $1,000,000,000 merger of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.; for the other, it will keep Youngstown's largest industry in Youngstown and Cleveland hands.

Usually manipulations of big business firms are carefully kept from the public, but publicity of almost every move and appeals to civic pride have given this huge struggle as much the appearance of a political campaign as a fight among financiers.

By letters, telegrams, cables and telephone calls stockholders are being deluged with rival appeals from headquarters of both camps, just across the street from each other. One Cleveland stockholder, who held 10 shares of Sheet and Tube as a modest investment, suddenly found himself deluged with opposing arguments for support and most of the rest of them even some vacationing in Europe and Florida, had similar experiences.

Bids Reached $150.

Until the transfer books closed today, bids ran as high as $150 a share in private deals. But for two more weeks the scramble for proxies will continue. Efforts especially will be concentrated in Youngstown. Where stockholders are said to hold the deciding votes.

Dominating the fight are some of the steel world's greatest figures. James A. Campbell, veteran of the game who built up Sheet and Tube during the last 30 years until it now is an outstanding factor, has assumed full responsibility for urging the merger, an about face movement from his former insistence that his company remain independent. With him is Frank Purnell, who became president when Campbell asked for less strenuous duties and was made chairman of the board.

Brothers Divided on Issue.

Cyrus S. Eaton, financial wizard who only a short time ago organized the $300,000,000 Republic Steel Corporation, is the main cog in the opposition, backed by influential Youngstown and Cleveland stockholders. One of the quirks of the fight has divided the Mather brothers of Cleveland, powerful figures in steel shipping. William G. Mather's interests have thrown him into the Eaton camp, while Samuel Mather has come out in favor of the merger. Their recent departure together on a trip, however, indicated their differences extend no further than business.

Proponents of the merger argue that it would strengthen both Bethlehem and Sheet and Tube because of their diversification of interests, and would be a financial advantage to Sheet and Tube stockholders. The opposition decries passing of control of Sheet and Tube into the East, and Eaton has advanced the theory that the future of the industry lies in the Middle West because of European competition in the East. His Republic Steel has no quarrel with Sheet and Tube, Eaton said.

Eight hundred thousand shares of Sheet and Tube, two-thirds of the total issue, must be voted favorably April 8 to effect the consolidation. The decision of the Cleveland Cliffs Corporation not to vote its 126,000 shares has shortened the opposition's goal to 274,000 shares.

his name. Similarly, in 1916, Howe applied for a patent on a sand mill, making a similar assignment.

The opposing claims in the case are:

For Howe—That the ideas for the mould and sand mill originated with and were developed by Howe; that Howe was induced to assign the patents by Clarence H. Howard, then president of Commonwealth, now chairman of the board of its successor, on Howard's assurance that the firm would "take care" of Howe with regard to compensation for the patents; that Howe repeatedly requested Howard from 1916 to make a definite settlement, but was put off by promises until early last year;

EVEN BROTHERS DIVIDED IN FIGHT ON STEEL MERGER

Samuel Mather Favors Bethlehem Firm Taking Over Sheet and Tube Co., W. G. Mather Against Plan.

SCHWAB AND GRACE ALSO FOR PROPOSAL

Cleveland and Youngstown Interests Lead Opposition —Scramble On for Proxies.

By the Associated Press.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 22.—Here in the rich Mahoning steel district, envisioned by its developers as the future "Ruhr of America," a contest among financial giants is under way. Victory for one side will mean a $1,000,000,000 merger of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.; for the other, it will keep Youngstown's largest industry in Youngstown and Cleveland hands.

Usually manipulations of big business firms are carefully kept from the public, but publicity of almost every move and appeals to civic pride have given this huge struggle as much the appearance of a political campaign as a fight among financiers.

By letters, telegrams, cables and telephone calls stockholders are being deluged with rival appeals from headquarters of both camps, just across the street from each other. One Cleveland stockholder, who held 10 shares of Sheet and Tube as a modest investment, suddenly found himself deluged with opposing arguments for support and most of the rest of them even some vacationing in Europe and Florida, had similar experiences.

Bids Reached $150.

Until the transfer books closed today, bids ran as high as $150 a share in private deals. But for two more weeks the scramble for proxies will continue. Efforts especially will be concentrated in Youngstown, where stockholders are said to hold the deciding votes.

Dominating the fight are some of the steel world's greatest figures. James A. Campbell, veteran of the game who built up Sheet and Tube during the last 30 years until it now is an outstanding factor, has assumed full responsibility for urging the merger, an about face movement from his former insistence that his company remain independent. With him is Frank Purnell, who became president when Campbell asked for less strenuous duties and was made chairman of the board.

Brothers Divided on Issue.

Cyrus S. Eaton, financial wizard who only a short time ago organized the $300,000,000 Republic Steel Corporation, is the main cog in the opposition, backed by influential Youngstown and Cleveland stockholders. One of the quirks of the fight has divided the Mather brothers of Cleveland, powerful figures in steel shipping. William G. Mather's interests have thrown him into the Eaton camp, while Samuel Mather has come out in favor of the merger. Their recent departure together on a trip, however, indicated their differences extend no further than business.

Proponents of the merger argue that it would strengthen both Bethlehem and Sheet and Tube because of their diversification of interests, and would be a financial advantage to Sheet and Tube stockholders. The opposition decries passing of control of Sheet and Tube into the East, and Eaton has advanced the theory that the future of the industry lies in the Middle West because of European competition in the East. His Republic Steel has no quarrel with Sheet and Tube, Eaton said.

Eight hundred thousand shares of Sheet and Tube, two-thirds of the total issue, must be voted favorably April 8 to effect the consolidation. The decision of the Cleveland Cliffs Corporation not to vote its 126,000 shares has shortened the opposition's goal to 274,000 shares.

PATENT WORK WAS HOWE'S JOB, WITNESSES SAY

his name. Similarly, in 1916, Howe applied for a patent on a sand mill, making a similar assignment.

The opposing claims in the case are:

For Howe—That the ideas for the mould and sand mill originated with and were developed by Howe; that Howe was induced to assign the patents by Clarence H. Howard, then president of Commonwealth, now chairman of the board of its successor, on Howard's assurance that the firm would "take care" of Howe with regard to compensation for the patents; that Howe repeatedly requested Howard from 1910 to make a definite settlement, but was put off by promises until early last year, when Howard denied having made any such promises; that by virtue of Howe's patents, particularly the mould, the Commonwealth grew from a "shoestring" concern to one worth $35,000,000, its sale price.

For the company—That the patents were the result of group, not individual work; that devising such improvements in the firm's machinery for production was an integral part of Howe's duties; that his regular salary plus bonuses and prizes, fully compensated him for his efforts; that his assignment of patents was in accord with an accepted custom of the organization; that at no time did Howard promise Howe additional compensation or settlement.

The plaintiff has made much of the paternal relation which existed between Howard and the employes, in an effort to show that Howe's delay in filing suit was due to his absolute faith in Howard's alleged assurances, rather than to a suddenly conceived desire to share in the sale price of the firm, as the defense contends.

The Happy Family.

Testimony has been given that Howe was "Frank" to Howard, as other employes, down to the lowest helper in the foundry, were "Tom" or "Harry." Howard was fond of referring to the organization as the "Commonwealth Family" and to himself as "Papa;" of walking through his "Golden Rule Foundry" and slapping its men on the back and encouraging them to greater effort; of calling the foundry workers together, exhorting them to live by the golden rule, and urging upon them the advantages of fellowship and cooperation; of having them bring their individual troubles to himself or other officials, and gaining their confidence and contributing to their welfare by insurance and loan services, sick benefits, recreational facilities, bonuses and prizes.

Such treatment over a period of years created in all the employes, including himself, Howe has testified, an implicit trust in Howard, which in Howe's case was not shaken until last year.

So far, except for a few minutes on the stand identifying stock records, Howard has not been heard, although he has been present in the courtroom with Mrs. Howard, following the unfolding of the case intently.

Claims Credit for Idea.

His former senior vice president, Harry M. Pflager, now vice president of the General Steel Casting Corporation, testified yesterday.

Credit for the basic idea of the steel mould was claimed for himself by Pflager. He said that when he turned it over to Howe to work out in detail, the latter at first was unable to understand it. The part played by the mould in the company's prosperity was minimized by Pflager, who attributed the growth primarily to Howard's original conceptions of the uses to which cast steel could be put.

Pflager testified that, at the time when he and Howard took over the management of Commonwealth, in 1904, railroad heads had little faith in the ability of cast steel to stand the strain of use in locomotives and cars. Howard pioneered in the introduction of cast steel in this field, and today it is standard, Pflager said, adding that in the course of 20 years every large rail line in the country became a customer of the firm. In the two years before Howard and Pflager became executives, the Commonwealth had lost $250,000, Pflager testified.

The steel mold in question differs basically from the method used prior to 1910. It provides a firm setting for the cores, which are inserted in the mold in such a way as to obtain the desired design. Previously, instead of a steel setting, the cores rested on the tamped sand lining of a wooden mold. The cores, in both processes, are made of solid sand.

Howe's contention is that the old method produced castings which were badly overweight, and inaccurate as to plans drawn, and that it was a virtual impossibility to make the larger size castings in one piece by the old methods. He further contends that Commonwealth's success was built on its exclusive ability among foundries to make locomotives and railroad car frames and other huge castings in one piece, dating from 1910, and to make them with almost negligible error, while other foundries were forced to make the castings in sections and bolt them together.

FINDS BIRTH-CONTROL ATTITUDE CHANGING

Mrs. Margaret Sanger Returns After 14 Years for Lecture in City.

The world's attitude on birth control has changed since 1916, when one St. Louis hall was closed to Mrs. Margaret Sanger, she remarked upon her arrival here to explain her views at the Y. M. H. A. in a meeting of the Liberal Forum, at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

In 1916, Mrs. Sanger said, she had not begun her real work, since she did not start her first birth control clinic until her return to New York from that lecture tour. Even then, she said, Portland, Ore., was the only other city where similar difficulties occurred, and St. Louisans heard her at a theater, the Town Club and the City Club, where her audience was the largest that had ever attended a City Club luncheon.

"Now," she said, "physicians may give birth control information in every state except Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. The English say I have created a new scientific literature. Besides all the books and articles on birth control, scarcely a book on sociology, or touching social factors, is published without mentioning this factor.

"There are 29 birth control clinics in this country, 22 in England, and, including Holland, where I studied in 1914 and 1915, about 150 in all countries. In our oldest clinic 13,000 women, 85 per cent of them referred to us by New York social agencies, have been started on the road to health, and we feel that they and their families are on the way to a better chance in life."

Free of Fatuousness.

In appearance and manner Mrs. Sanger denied the preconceived notion of a woman who would spend a month in jail, as she has, just to find out what a law meant. As photographs indicate there is nothing formidable about her. As photographs cannot indicate, she seemed equally free of the fatuousness that might be expected of a woman crusader and the humorless heaviness of a professional social worker.

If the world's view has changed since 1916, so has Mrs. Sanger's, in details if not in any fundamental. She no longer believes that she has a "message" almost solely to the poor, and that middle-class and wealthier people have known all about birth control "for 25 years."

"I have learned the high cost of small families," she said—" in nervousness, in wrecked health, in cases for psychiatry caused by the bad knowledge they now have. Virtually every one of the older married women referred to our clinic has two or more children and has been practicing what she thought was some method of birth control, and virtually every one would be ready for a psychiatric clinic except that many such cases clear up, naturally, upon instruction."

Mrs. Sanger said that the movement she originated is at a standstill now because birth control is included under the Comstock law, so that it is illegal to send, interstate, so much as the address of a clinic. She is attempting to find a Congressman or Senator who will introduce an amendment.

She considered birth control as one phase of the growing view of marriage as "a new responsibility," a contract not merely between lovers, but with full consideration for any children. She believed birth control would reduce not only abortions, mother and child mortality and families grown beyond the parents' ability to feed and clothe them, but also the psychological, and frequently criminological, tragedies of the "unwanted child."

"It's nonsense to say that birth control leads to race suicide, that those with the means to evade parenthood will have no children," said Mrs. Sanger, who has three children herself. "The physiological urge to have children will take care of that."

GIVE BOND IN SALE OF UNREGISTERED STOCK

W. H. and F. C. Young, Brokers, Arrested Because of Alleged Act of Employe.

William H. Young, president of W. H. Young & Bro., Inc., brokerage firm, and his brother, Fred C. Young, vice president and treasurer, were arrested yesterday at the request of Barton County, Mo., authorities on fugitive warrants in connection with an alleged illegal sale of stock in the company by a salesman employed by them. They were released on $5000 bond each.

Edwin L. Moore, Prosecuting Attorney at Lamar, said that information had been issued against the brothers charging them with sale of an unregistered security because their agent, W. B. Knight, also accused, sold stock in the brokerage firm to two Golden City residents.

The complainants, William Chaffee, retired bus operator, and Ray Soper, a farmer, have filed suits for the return of $6100 and $5100, respectively. The charge against the brokers is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $100 to $1000. The case is set for trial at Lamar April 14.

F. T. Stockard, State Securities Commissioner, at Jefferson City, said that an application to register stock in the corporation with his department, thus permitting sale, had been refused because it did not have sufficient property, had not been in business three years and because its financial statement showed that it had not earned one and one-half times the interest requirements of the outstanding stock. The authorized capital stock is $2,000,000.

Edward J. Siegel, attorney for the corporation, said that full information had not been received by his clients, and that they could make no statement since they were not directly involved in the sale.

Offices of the corporation are in the Central National Bank Building. William H. Young is 32 years old and resides at 7346 Westmoreland drive, University City. Fred Young, 35, lives in Clayton.

MAN, 65, INJURED BY AUTO; DRIVEN CAUGHT AFTER CHASE

A man identified by letters as Frank Hopkins, 65 years old, of Kansas City, who has been living at the St. Francis Hotel, was struck and seriously injured by an automobile at Sarah street and Washington avenue at 10:15 o'clock last night.

The driver of the car, who was stopped by another motorist after a short chase, was arrested and taken to City Hospital where physicians said he had been drinking. He said he was David G. Teasdale, 26 years old, purchasing agent for the Metalcraft Corporation, and gave his address at 5602 Washington Court.

Teasdale said he was driving east in Washington boulevard and did not know he had hit anyone until another motorist stopped him at Vandeventer avenue. Later he said that the traffic light at Sarah and Washington was green when he approached it and that the man walked into the path of his automobile before he could stop.

Physicians at the hospital said the injured man, who was unconscious, apparently had suffered a fractured skull.

Julius Cope Jr., 12 years old, suffered a fractured right leg and hip at 7:30 o'clock last night when he was struck by an automobile, the driver of which did not stop, as he stood in a safety zone at Page boulevard and Academy avenue.

He lives at 5054 Page boulevard.

Wichita, Kan., Trying to Find Cause of Paralysis.

WICHITA, Kan., March 22.—In an effort to learn whether paralysis here and in nearby towns actually is due to Jamaica ginger, C. M. Anderson, chemist, drank five ounces of the liquor at the City Health Department today. He said his lower limbs were not affected tonight.

Analysis by Anderson and other chemists here failed to disclose anything in the fluid to produce paralysis. The drinking was preceded by a promise that he would not be arrested.

How "Sassafras Charlie's" Ghost Hunt Led to Killing Of Artist's Wife Near Buffalo

His Widow Committed Murder, Inspired, State Charges, by Indian Woman Who Hoped to Wed Sculptor.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 22.—Eight months ago a fabulously ancient and chronically alcoholic Seneca Indian known in this region as "Sassafras Charlie" Bowen, informed his 66-year-old wife, Nancy, that ghosts were becoming bothersome around their cabin and that he was going out to exorcise the most troublesome of them. So armed with an ounce or two of scrapings from a wild cherry root and the knowledge of several time-tested incantations, he gave her his loaded revolver to shoot any ghosts that might annoy her in his absence and walked out into the haunted night.

Now this one would suppose should never have affected the lives of Henri Marchand, a French painter and sculptor, and of his wife, Clotilde, who lived at the edge of the Cattaraugus reservation. But Clotilde Marchand, a gentle little woman who had never made friends with the neighboring Indians as her husband had, was beaten to death with a ten-cent store hammer by Nancy Bowen, March 6, and Henri Marchand is now held in the county jail, he and Lila Jimerson, a sharp-faced Indian spinster whom he, by his own admission, had seduced that she might be more easily persuaded to pose for him—and old "Sassafras Charlie's" ghost hunt was the start of it all. Marchand is held as a material witness.

Talk of Exhuming Body.

Old Charlie didn't survive his ghost hunt. Perhaps he died, naturally of exposure, in the damp and chill of that September night. But there is a chance that Nancy Bowen, a simple, almost senile old woman, mistook the returning Charlie for one of the ghosts he had gone out to exorcise and shot him with his own revolver. There is now, accordingly, a plan to exhume Charlie's body, in the coffin to pay for which the Senecas collected $50, to see whether he was shot or died of natural causes, for if he was shot by old Nancy then both her counsel and the defenders of Lila Jimerson will argue that she was plainly unbalanced in her fear of ghosts and needed no such elaborate incitements as the State charges Lila Jimerson with providing to drive her to kill Mrs. Marchand.

Lila Jimerson is on trial here for inciting the murder. At the end of three days a panel of 137 talesmen was exhausted with nine jurors in the box. On Monday a fresh panel will be called and the three vacancies filled.

The State's attorney, Guy B. Moore, will charge that Lila, to get Marchand's wife out of the way, in order that he might marry her, persuaded Nancy Bowen by ouija board manipulations to kill Mrs. Marchand in order that Charlie might rest peacefully in the ghost world.

It is significant that State's Attorney Moore refuses to say whether he will put Nancy Bowen on trial even if he does convict Lila. He did say, "If I can find no evidence directly connecting Marchand with this murder I most certainly will ask for his indictment," but he admitted there was nothing of that nature in the evidence yet.

An Indian Woman's Romance.

Lila Jimerson has absolved Marchand in a statement given out through her lawyers, John V. Maloney and John S. Knibole. Her attitude seems to be undecided, even now that she is on trial, for when a reporter asked her if she still loved Marchand, if she had ever loved him, she said, after some thought: "When he is away I don't think about him. But when he was near me, I always did what he said."

"He was the first man I ever had anything to do with," she said "I am an ugly woman, and I never had any sweethearts. I never went anywhere. I never had any good times. I never have had, yet. I guess the only parties I ever went to in my life with a man were with my cousin, but he wasn't my sweetheart."

She told how—and when others afterward described the isolation of the reservation, which can only be reached from here by a 15-mile boat trip and a 10-mile walk through the woods, it was understandable—how Marchand used to take her in his automobile to the doctor, seven miles away, and how those trips were virtually the only excursions she ever made away from her shanty and her garden patch.

"Many times we came home in the twilight, and he would stop his car in the woods and make love to me. It was in September, three years ago—yes, that is right, September, 1926—and he painted a picture of me."

Talks Constantly of His Wife.

Marchand, a man of 54 with iron gray hair and a strong-featured but sensitive face, said later in his cell that he did not care whether he was indicted or not, that his only wish was to be permitted to clear himself in court either as a witness or as an accused prisoner.

"This is a ridiculous thing," he said. "Apparently I am in jail though there is no accusation against me, for the crime of having an affair with a woman who was not my wife. You feel differently about such things in this country from what we do in Europe, but I do not disguise it from you, for it is nothing to be ashamed of. It is stupid to say I killed my wife, if for no other reason than she was the only critic of my work that I could trust. Her help and criticism and advice in the 32 years we were married were what made me as good an artist as I am."

The keepers in the jail added later the information that Marchand has expressed no interest in Lila Jimerson, hardly even any curiosity about her, but had talked constantly of the death of his wife. His sons and his daughter have visited him briefly and infrequently, but apparently he has not cared whether he saw them or not.

Accused Woman's Alleged Skill as Ventriloquist Investigated.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 22.—Stories that Lila Jimerson, on trial for the murder of Mrs. Henri Marchand, used her reputed skill as a ventriloquist to persuade Nancy Bowen to commit the crime, were being investigated, District Attorney Moore announced today.

After a two-hour conference with Nancy Bowen, Moore said that his conversation with her had been "most satisfactory," but declined to go into details.

Ann Snow and Anson Jimerson, Lila's aunt and father, also conferred with the State Prosecutor. Both will be called as witnesses for the State, it has been indicated. The old woman said she had had the care of Lila from childhood.

THREE URBANA (ILL.) BANKERS INDICTED BY SPECIAL JURY

Treasurer of County Also Accused in True Bills Returned Following Failure.

URBANA, Ill., March 22.—Three former officers of the Urbana Banking Co., one of them already in jail, will be called on next week to plead to 32 indictments brought today by a special grand jury.

In addition, the jury turned in an indictment charging Charles W. Dale, treasurer of Champaign County, with receiving interest on public funds from the bank and another charging John W. Thornburn, former president, with grand larceny and forgery. Thornburn, who is serving a one-to-ten year term in Chester penitentiary for embezzlement of $100,000 of the Urbana school board's funds, J. W. Huss, cashier, and Edwin Rea, vice president, were named in the group of 32 indictments as having received deposits when they knew the bank was insolvent. The bank was closed Oct. 21.

5 YEARS ON CHAIN GANG FOR ATLANTA OFFICIAL

Councilman York Guilty of Bribery—First of 20 to Be Tried.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 22.—Councilman Harry C. York was convicted today on the five counts of an indictment for bribery in the administration of municipal affairs. He was sentenced to one year on the chain gang and fined $3,000 on each of three of the counts. On each of the two additional counts, he was sentenced to serve one year on the chain gang or pay fines totaling $1000.

Judge John D. Humphries specified that the sentences, which are to run consecutively, were to be served on the chain gang. Bond for York was raised from $10,000 to $20,000.

York was the first to be tried of 20 city officials and citizens indicted several weeks ago following an investigation of municipal graft. York and Jack White, his partner in a local brokerage house, were charged with bribery in connection with the purchase of municipal supplies and in the awarding of city contracts.

City Clerk Walter C. Taylor, City Purchasing Agent W. P. Price, four other city councilmen and Mayor Pro-Tem J. Allen Couch are among the others indicted.

Counsel for York filed notice of appeal.

Alderman J. Everitt Millican announced he would request appointment of a special council impeachment committee to investigate the charges against York.

SINCLAIR OFFERS $1,000,000 TO AID HOME TOWN BANK

Depository Closed When Huge Shortage Was Discovered in President's Accounts.

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., March 22.—Harry Sinclair, former Independence business man, now head of the Sinclair oil interests, is said to have offered $1,000,000 to assist in the reorganization of the Commercial National Bank here, closed last week when examiners investigating the books of George T. Guernsey Sr., president, discovered a huge shortage.

Sinclair's offer is said to have been made to W. S. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the board of the Prairie Oil and Gas Co., who has been active in attempts to reorganize and reopen this bank. Interest of the Sinclair family in the welfare of their former home community first was evidenced the day after the Commercial National closed, when Earl Sinclair, brother of Harry, wired a $500,000 deposit in the Citizens' National Bank as a safety precaution.

Harry Sinclair's offer comes on the heels of the transfer by George T. Guernsey Sr. to M. E. Murray, receiver, property in Independence, including a 400-acre tract on which is situated Guernsey's famous "shack," where he entertained his friends lavishly, and other holdings, said by George T. Guernsey Jr., vice president of the closed Commercial National, to be worth $175,000.

VOTERS TO DECIDE ON 85C SCHOOL TAX ON TUESDAY

Those Who Pay Taxes of Any Sort, Including Those on Income, Eligible to Vote, if Registered.

Taxpaying voters of St. Louis will decide at a special election Tuesday whether the school tax rate of 85 cents on the $100 assessed valuation, which has been in effect for the last nine years, shall be retained for the next four years. If they defeat the proposal submitted by the Board of Educatoin, as the sole subject of the election, the rate will revert to 60 cents on the $100, under the State Constitution, and many school services will be abolished or curtailed.

The 670 precinct polling places in the city will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. Tuesday, in charge of 4020 judges and clerks of election. The Election Board has prepared 291,000 ballots, but does not anticipate that more than a fraction of them will be needed, in view of the experience in previous special elections.

Voters who approve maintaining the 85-cent rate will scratch "no" on the ballot, those opposed will scratch "yes". A majority of the votes cast will suffice to decide the proposition.

"Taxpayer" Defined.

Only taxpayers who are registered voters may cast ballots in this election. The definition of a taxpayer for this purpose is one who pays general State or City taxes on real or personal property, or a State income tax or a merchant's or manufacturer's tax. The voter does not have to produce evidence that he is a taxpayer and most of those who go to the polls will not be questioned. If there is a challenge, precinct officials may require the voter to take oath that he is a taxpayer which will be sufficient to permit him to vote unless there is evidence to the contrary.

An intensive campaign in support of the 85-cent rate has been carried on by the Citizens' School Tax Campaign Committee which was appointed at the instance of the Board of Education with Thomas N. Dysart, a broker, as chairman. There has been or organized or general opposition of the proposition and apparently little of any sort.

Active Campaign for Tax.

The speakers' bureau of the committee, under the direction of Charles M. Hay, attorney, arranged 292 talks before various organizations and meetings in support of the tax and 46 over radio stations KMOX, KWK and WIL. There were open house receptions and entertainments in 119 public schools on recent evenings, to acquaint the people with the work of the school system and its needs.

A total of 184 civic, political, commercial, fraternal, professional and school organizations have indorsed the 85-cent rate, and some of them pledged their members to work for its approval at the polls Most of the school children have been active in carrying word to voters about the need for keeping the tax rate at its present level.

Helen Wendling, an art student at Hadley Vocational School, won a poster contest sponsored by the Citizens' Committee and her design has been used on 100 billboards about the city, donated by citizens.

The Board of Education charter requires it to conduct elementary, high and continuation schools, a statement pointed out, but it is not mandatory to conduct the evening and various other special schools. If the tax is not voted, it has been stated, much of these extra activities of the system would have to be stopped. If the tax rate were reduced to 60 cents the school revenue would be cut at least $3,250,000 each year.

ALLOCATION OF POWER OF BOULDER DAM ANNOUNCED

Water District to Get 36, California Cities 19, Nevada and Arizona 18 Each, Private Firms 9 Pct.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON March 22.—Secretary Wilbur announced today an agreement had been reached upon the allocation of power to be developed by the $165,000,000 water supply, irrigation and flood control project at Boulder Dam. Contracts are now being drawn, the Secretary said, for allocation of power on the following basis:

"To Nevada, for use in Nevada, 18 per cent, with the privilege of contracting for any part or all thereof at any time on two years' notice.

"To Arizona, for use in Arizona, 18 per cent, on the same terms as the allocation to Nevada, provided that if either state does not absorb its entire allocation the other may utilize it up to 4 per cent.

"To the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, 36 per cent plus so much of the secondary power and of the power allocated to but not taken by the states, as may be needed and used for pumping of Colorado River water into and in the aqueduct and from the aqueduct into reservoirs.

Los Angeles Gets 13 Per Cent.

"To the City of Los Angeles and the municipalities of Anaheim, Burbank, Beverly Hills, Colton, Glendale, Fullerton, Newport Beach, Pasadena, Riverside, San Bernardino and Santa Ana, 19 per cent in all, of which 13 per cent is allocated to the City of Los Angeles and 6 per cent to the other municipalities to be allocated among them as they may agree; or, if they fail to agree, then by the secretary, with the provision that so much of the allocation to the municipalities as is not contracted for by them shall be used and paid for by the city, these municipalities to contract with the United States within one year of execution of contract by the City of Los Angeles.

"To the Southern California Edison Co., the Southern Sierras Power Co., the Los Angeles Gas & Electric Corporation and the San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co., 9 per cent in all to be allocated among them as they may agree; or, if they cannot agree, allocation to be made by the secretary."

The agreement, it was said at the Interior Department, clears the way for the signing of the contracts, which have been in process of negotiation for many months. The threatened injunction suit by Arizona, the signature of which to the compact was not needed for ratification, was said to be the only prospective barrier.

The agreement provides that power allocated to the states and not used by them or by the metropolitan district of Los Angeles shall be taken and paid for equally by the city and the companies.

Any part of the 36 per cent allocated to the district but not used by it will be available, one-half to the city and one-half to the companies. Any power allocated to the states but not required by them or by the district will, meanwhile, be taken and paid for, one-half by the city and one-half by the companies.

"All contracts for purchase of power, including the states, district, city, municipalities and Edison company are to be made directly with the Secretary of the Interior," the agreement stipulates.

Supervision Provided.

"Contracts with the city and the Southern California Edison Co. will provide," the agreement says, "that they, as lessees, shall operate the plant under the general supervision of a director appointed by the Secretary of the Interior. The city shall have the right at cost to generate power for the other municipalities and the metropolitan water district. The States shall designate their generating agency when contracting."

The Federal Government will install the dam, tunnels, power house, penstocks, generating and transforming and switching equipment but the costs of installation and operation shall be borne by those contracting for the power in proportion to the amounts received.

While title will be held by the United States, all contracting parties other than States will be required to pay pro rata to the Secretary in trust for Arizona and Nevada adequate compensation in lieu of taxes on machinery and equipment.

Fair Price Clause in Contracts.

A clause will be inserted in all contracts insuring distribution of power developed at Boulder Dam at such a price as in the opinion of the Federal Power Commission is fair to all consumers.

"The price to be charged for falling water for generation of primary power is 1.63 mills, the price for secondary power to be determined later," the agreement stipulates. "Power supplied to other allottees by the lessees shall be paid for to the United States at cost at the switchboard, such cost to be determined by the Secretary."

After expressing gratification that an agreement had been reached Secretary Wilbur said:

"I have every hope that with the power allocation settled and the way open to begin active construction, the few remaining points in regard to water allocation can readily be settled by Arizona and California. I can see no fundamental reason for failure on the part of these States to come together in an agreement. Regional problems where several States are involved require infinite patience and careful consideration but with good spirits, they can be worked out."

SAYS MAJ. SHEPARD BOUGHT WEDDING RING LAST OCTOBER

Jeweler Avers Accused Army Officer Traded In Two Tokens of Former Marriages.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, March 22.—A Denver jeweler today told Federal investigators that Maj. Charles A. Shepard, 59 years old, Army medical officer, under arrest here for the alleged murder of his wife at Fort Riley, Kans., last June, purchased a wedding ring last October.

Louis Hellerstein, proprietor of a jewelry store, said a man giving the name of Maj. Charles A. Shepard had traded in two old-fashioned wedding rings, one bearing a nineteenth century date and the other engraved with the year 1917, taking a new platinum ring.

Major Shepard told newspapermen that he sent Miss Grace Brandon, 23-year-old stenographer at Brooks Field, Tex., a diamond ring last October, but made no mention of a wedding ring.

Major Shepard and the wife he is accused of poisoning, Mrs. Zenna Shepard, were married in Los Angeles in 1917. He previously had been married. His first wife died.

VOTE ON TARIFF IN SENATE SET FOR TOMORROW

Two Provisions Opposed by Hoover

The measure also provides a higher duty on sugar, although lower than the House, and a general revision of the industrial rate schedules and administrative provisions.

Embraced in the latter are two amendments placed in the bill by the coalition of Democrats and Republican Independents over the expressed opposition of President Hoover. These are: Substitute for the existing flexible tariff provisions, which restores to Congress the power now invested in the executive to make emergency tariff changes; and the export debenture plan, by which exporters of farm surplus crops would be given a Federal bonus equal to half the tariff on similar imported products.

While it has not been disclosed whether the President, who initiated the tariff legislation shortly after he entered the White House with a request for a "limited revision," favors the rate revisions made by the Senate and House, Republican leaders think he will sign the bill if the two administrative provisions are removed.

On the whole, the Senate bill represents a lower percentage of protection than the House measure passed last May. However, it would have been still lower if the coalition, in control of the revision for nearly six months, had not wilted in the closing days of debate and permitted many important increases to go through.

By virtue of this break in coalition ranks, a new coalition formed around the Old Guard Republican high protectionists got through the increase in Cuban sugar rates, and duties on brick, cement and soft wood lumber, all now on the free list.

All these rates, however, are below those passed by the House, except that on lumber, which the House kept on the free list. The House, however, placed duties on cedar lumber, shingles, hides, leathers and shoes, and the Senate retained these in the free category.

Both measures carry higher rates on raw wool and increases all down the line on the products of wool.

The most important reductions in duties approved by the Senate were on pig iron, aluminum, plate glass and automobiles. On the other hand, higher levies were placed on furniture, pottery and chinawares, and rayon yarn and clothing of all kinds.

Long staple cotton, used in the manufacture of tire fabric and fine cotton goods, was taken from the free list by the Senate. To compensate the manufacturers using this Egyptian cotton, approval was given an additional duty of 10 cents a pound on all products made from it.

To assist the textile manufacturers of mixed cotton and wool fabrics, approval was given an amendment today to increase the rates on all of these goods containing 17 per cent and over of wool by weight. The wool content would be dutiable at the higher wool rates and the cotton portion at the cotton rates.

LEAGUE REGISTERS 34 NEW TREATIES IN 1929

U. S. Is Party to 20 of Them —Geneva Regards Number as Hopeful Sign.

GENEVA, March 22.—League of Nations authorities point with satisfaction to increasing evidences of the growth of procedure for pacific settlement of international disputes. All told, there are 130 treaties of this nature registered with the league.

Twenty-five countries were parties to 34 new treaties which were registered during 1929. In 1928 there were registered 15 such treaties and in 1927 only six.

The United States was a party to 20 of the new treaties, which are regarded in Geneva as indicating a world disposition to turn away from war as a means of determining the issue of international controversies.

While the Washington Government is easily leader in numbers of treaties of this kind registered during the past year, they are less comprehensive than most of those in which other countries are the parties. They reflect clearly the traditional American policy of avoiding European entanglements.

Nine of the American treaties are treaties of conciliation embracing no special features; 11 of them are treaties of arbitration of one standard type. These 11 provide for arbitration in disputes of a legal nature only, and include four kinds of reservations; disputes coming within the domestic jurisdiction of states, disputes affecting the interests of third Powers, disputes affecting the Monroe Doctrine, and those affecting obligations under the covenant of the League of Nations.

In treaties concluded between other countries, the following tendencies are observed: To provide in the same treaty for conciliation, arbitration and judicial settlement; to submit all disputes to arbitration or judicial settlement; to avoid reservations; and to designate the Permanent Court of International Justice as the competent tribunal in legal disputes.

11 MISSIONARIES REPORTED BESIEGED IN NO GRAVE PERIL

Catholic Bishop in Chinese Province Says Conditions Are No Worse Than Recently.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, March 22.—Eleven American Catholic missionaries, reported besieged at Kanchow, Kiangsi Province, by Chinese Communist disorders, were declared today by Bishop Sheehan to be in no imminent danger.

Bishop Sheehan, a native of Streator, Ill., who is in charge of Catholic missionary activities in Northern Kiangsi, said the missionaries at Kanchow had been carrying on their work in the midst of continual depredations by Communists and bandit hordes.

Present conditions, however, were no worse than had existed for many months past, he said. A telegram received last Wednesday from the Kanchow Vicariate described the situation as "quiet."

Woman and Escort Struck on Field Near Buenos Aires.

BUENOS AIRES, March 22.—A woman and a member of the Coast Guard who was escorting her across a landing field near here today, were killed when struck by a plane of the Pan-American Grace Airlines.

Raymond Williams, pilot, who damaged his plane in an effort to avoid striking the pair, was detained, but witnesses were reported agreed that the fault rested entirely with the victims.

the conspiracy, Hoban is under a two-year sentence imposed on his plea of guilty last May to a charge of extortion in connection with the conspiracy case. Judge W. A. Cant, ruled, however, that the sentences should run concurrently.

A stay of execution of 50 days for Dahly and Beaton was granted pending filing of notices of motions for new trials. Hoban was granted a 30-day stay, but his counsel said he would not seek a new trial.

BORDER PATROL MEN WIN SKIRMISH WITH SMUGGLERS

Capture Contraband Valued at More Than $400 and Wound One of Rum Runners.

EL PASO, Tex., March 22.—Bullets whizzed across the Mexican border last night in the fifteenth skirmish of the year between Mexican rum runners and United States border patrol men, and today the Federal officers discovered that they had wounded a member of the gang.

When two border patrolmen last night ordered the smugglers to halt, they replied with a rapid succession of shots. The odds were against the officers, only two being on guard on the line in the sand hills while at least six rum runners, carrying liquor on their backs, fired upon them. Despite the odds, the patrolmen forced the smugglers to cover, and the contraband valued at more than $400 was abandoned.

Drops of blood found today at places in the position known to have been occupied by the smugglers were taken by the officers as clear indication that at least one of the rum runners had been hit.

Two patrolmen have been wounded this year in engagements. Two smugglers have been killed.

STOWAWAY ON GRAF ZEPPELIN SUES FOR $25,000 DAMAGES

Clarence Terhune Alleges Von Hoffman Aircraft School Used Photograph Without Paying Him.

Suit for $25,000 damages was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Clarence Terhune, stowaway on the Graf Zeppelin on its flight from New York to Germany in 1928, against the Von Hoffman Aircraft School and the Von Hoffman Press. He alleges that defendants used his photograph and indorsement of the school, but have failed to compensate him for the advertising, which, he declares, was valuable because of the publicity he received from the stowaway incident.

According to his attorneys, Maurice J. Gordon and William J. Burns, he did not authorize the advertising matter. An officer of the aircraft school told a reporter yesterday he had not heard of Terhune's claim.

Albert Von Hoffman, president of both companies, could not be reached.

Capone Made Million in 1925.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Frank Nitto, a chancellor of the exchequer in Al Capone's liquor cabinet, had a net income of $742,887.31 in the three years preceding 1928. An indictment was returned today for failure to pay any income tax. According to the indictment, Nitto owes the Government $158,823.21 in taxes and penalties, which make the total $277,940.61. Nitto's income in 1925 was $426,261.99. Capone, the investigators found, made almost a million dollars in 1925.

3-POWER PACT NOW ONLY RESULT LIKELY AT LONDON

Agreement Among U. S., Britain and Japan Would Be a Material Aid to Cause of Disarmament.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 22.—With tomorrow's meeting at chequers between British Prime Minister MacDonald and Premier Tardieu of France definitely canceled, the five-power naval conference has reached the point where it is a conference in name only.

The stubborn deadlock between France and Italy over a parity and the delay in obtaining Japanese approval for the American-British-Japanese tri-party agreement have resulted in a complete suspension of the London meeting.

Japan's favorable reply next week will save the conference so far as a three-Power treaty is concerned and will enable material contribution to be made to the cause of disarmament. An unfavorable reply from Tokio—which neither the British nor the American delegations apprehend for a moment—would present an alarming prospect of the conference either terminating as did the Geneva conference in 1927, or fizzling out completely unless a naval pact between the United States and Great Britain could be salvaged from the wreckage.

Suggests New Solution.

The influential London Observer will say tomorrow that "an Anglo-American agreement by itself would maintain the peace of the world." This is the first time that such a prospective termination of the conference has ever been suggested in the British press, and while the delegates admit the present situation is bad none admits it is likely to come to such desperate straits.

It was learned today that the moment a Japanese reply is received the work of drafting a London treaty will be started—a task which will require at least two weeks. The plan is to write a five-Power treaty, the principal sections of which will concern Great Britain, Japan and the United States only, with provisions made for France and Italy agreeing to a battleship holiday, humanization of the submarine and technical agreements which have been reached here.

The critical position of the conference has served to put rumors and news about it again into a prominent position in London newspapers, which for a time had shown a want of interest.

The Sunday Dispatch says that MacDonald is faced with many difficult situations, foreign and domestic, in his efforts to save something from the wreckage.

According to the Dispatch, the British Admiralty's approval of the Rapidan figures was contingent on reduction by Continental powers, and the Admiralty now has informed MacDonald that if the French naval program is maintained these figures must be revised.

Fears Admiralty Resignations.

The newspaper fears the outcome of the situation may be resignations at the Admiralty, with grave consequences for the Government.

The Sunday Observer considers that the London negotiations are now directed to "saving what can be saved from the wreck of the hopes inspired two months ago. What can be saved is a three-power treaty based upon the American-Japanese compromise and on the American-British agreement."

In a leading editorial headed "The Conference Fails," the Sunday Times asserts: "The life of the conference has not yet been officially pronounced extinct, but it is already beyond the power of human aid. Only a miracle can save it."

It concludes by saying that "the conference has been a tragedy of mismanagement, and one of the world's greatest chances to disarm has gone."

Something for the tax-payer to think about

Last year individual tax-payers paid into the Federal Treasury $882,727,114.

The estimated cost of Prohibition enforcement and loss of revenue is $936,000,000.

NOTE

This advertisement was paid for by popular subscription to help bring about a repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Mail the coupon below and help this great cause along.

How long will we put up with it?

Prohibition must go.

Its doom is clearly written in the editorial trend of the most influential publications of the country.

It is doomed surely because its greatest protagonists can no longer close their eyes to its colossal failure.

It has failed because it is a law for the other fellow and a law for the other fellow is a law for nobody.

Where is that Utopia that was to have come with Prohibition?

Our jails are crowded to the point of riot.

Arrests for drunkenness are steadily on the increase.

Deaths from alcoholism have mounted.

Public officials have been corrupted.

Murder has become a commonplace.

Prohibition does not prohibit!

New York has 30,000 speakeasies in the place of 16,000 licensed saloons before Prohibition.

Chicago is at the mercy of the beer-running racketeer.

Bootleg highballs cost a dollar a glass and nobody makes a profit out of that dollar but the bootlegger.

The farmer is worse off because he has lost a great market for his grain.

The tax-payer is worse off because the total estimated annual cost of Prohibition, for enforcement and loss in revenue, is $936,000,000, while the total revenue received by the Federal Treasury from individual income taxes in 1928 was $882,727,114.

That money comes out of your pocketbook and ours.

We paid a lot of it on March 15 and there is another instalment due in June.

How long is this farcical hypocrisy to continue?

Why be irrevocably committed to a futile law when the very tools to change it are in our hands?

Two million men who were too busy to vote in 1918 are asking if it isn't about time they had a voice in the matter.

Twenty million men and women who have come into their majority since the Eighteenth Amendment want a chance to speak also.

If the inspired document on which this nation was founded means anything, we are entitled to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Life, the magazine, would therefore like to see a return to that mellowness and joy of living which Ambassador Bryce once characterized as "the kindly neighborliness of American life."

That's why Life asks for a return to Temperance.

That's why Life says, "Let's go!"

What about you?

If you agree with these sentiments, let's clean house!

▸ ▸ ▸ WHILE THERE'S LIFE THERE'S HOPE ◂ ◂ ◂

nb Advertising is the most powerful weapon that can be used to strip the blindfold from the eyes of the American people and bring about a speedy repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

This advertisement which appeared in New York, Chicago, Boston and Detroit brought immediate and enthusiastic response. Already enough voluntary contributions have been received to present this appeal to the more than 329,000 readers of the St. Louis Post Dispatch. We want your help in carrying this work still further.

Do you realize what a nation-wide advertising campaign similar to this can accomplish? Can you visualize the effect on our legislature if millions of people support this great campaign?

The mighty wave of protest from coast to coast would soon sweep the Augean stables clean and put an end to this hypocrisy.

LIFE wants your help

Such a gigantic advertising campaign is easily possible if you will help. Send one dollar (as much more as you like) to the LIFE War Chest. Every penny thus received will be used by LIFE to buy similar publicity throughout the United States.

Don't put this off or wait for the other fellow to do it. Tear out the coupon now and mail it with your contribution as soon as you get a chance.

JOHN TOENSFELDT TO BE BURIED TOMORROW

Introduced Compulsory Physical Education in St. Louis Public Schools.

John Toensfeldt, general agent of the St. Louis Mutual Life Insurance Co. and honorary president of the German House, died in a private hospital yesterday of heart disease. He was 83 years old and had been ill for six months.

Mr. Toensfeldt, once a teacher at the Eyser Educational Institute, later founded the Educational Institute and conducted it until 1899, when he closed it to enter business. He introduced compulsory physical education and manual training in St. Louis schools and was offered the principalship of any of the public schools when he closed his own school. He did not accept the position.

Born in Neumuenster, Schleswig Holstein, May 1, 1846, he came to America in 1868, and after spending several years at La Grange, Mo., joined the Eyser teaching staff in St. Louis.

In 1877, he organized the first volunteer life saving corps after the Southern Hotel fire. It later was incorporated as part of the St. Louis Fire Department. He also was one of the founders of the first swimming pool pool in St. Louis and the second in the United States, at 818 South Ninth street. In 1885 he served as president of the National Turner Society.

His wife, Mrs. Elsie J. Toensfeldt, died of heart disease at the Toensfeldt home, 6114 Washington boulevard, Oct. 20, last. She was 75 years old.

Surviving are a daughter, Miss Grete, and three sons, Kurt and Hans, consulting engineers in New York, and Ralf, former chief electrical engineer for the city, who resides at 5423 Cabanne avenue.

The funeral will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Lupton Undertaking establishment, 4449 Olive street. Cremation services at Valhalla Cemetery will be private.

INSURANCE MAN DIES

DROP OF $18,431,966 IN INCOME TAX COLLECTIONS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Income tax receipts as of March 20 brought the total for the month up to $460,328,715, or about $90,000,000 less than the expected receipts for the entire month. The receipts for March 20 shown in the Treasury statement were $75,475,289, while those for the corresponding day last year totaled $98,779,154. The total for the month at this date last year was $478,760,685.

The continued decrease in daily receipts as compared with those of a year ago remained attributable, in the opinion of Treasury officials, to the speed with which the first collections of income taxes for this quarter were cleared up by the regional collection offices.

EAST SIDE GROCERY HELD UP BY ROBBER WHO GETS $50

A young man armed with a nickel-plated revolver, held up Arthur Friedman and his clerk, Elbert Franzen, in Friedman's grocery, 1901 Ridge avenue, East St. Louis, at 7:30 o'clock last night. He took $50 from the cash register.

Eliza Hutchinson, chauffeur for an undertaking concern, was held up by two Negroes near his home, 810 Converse avenue, at 7:30 p. m. and robbed of his salary, $38.

ACCIDENT VERDICT IN THE KILLING OF DOCTOR BY PATIENT

Louis H. Stuehmeyer Testifies That Dr. James A. Glasscock Was Showing Pistol to Him.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the case of Dr. James A. Glasscock, a physician and collector of firearms, shot to death with one of his own revolvers Friday afternoon by a patient, Louis H. Stuehmeyer, who testified the weapon was accidentally discharged when he was examining it.

Stuehmeyer, a large, gray-haired, stolid man, was the principal witness at the inquest. He is 55 years old and resides with his wife at 4209W Page boulevard. For the last 11 years he has been a motorman on the Delmar-Olive line, and for 18 years befor that he was a carpenter at a St. Charles foundry.

"My wife was sick," he testified. "She had trouble with her stomach, pains in her side. Friday afternoon when I got home from work she asked me to go to Dr. Glasscock, our family physician, for a prescription."

Dr. Glasscock had offices on the second floor of the Hill Building, Jefferson and Gravois avenues.

Doctor Showed Pistol to Him.

"I got there 20 minutes after 5 o'clock," Stuehmeyer continued, "Dr. Glasscock said: 'Hello, how are you? How's the Mrs.' I said "She's sick. I come to get her some medicine." He said: "I'll get you something.'"

The witness then related that his house was robbed last December, that Dr. Glasscock urged him to buy a new revolver for protection instead of relying on an old one that had not been fired in 20 years, that he and the physician had selected a weapon from a catalog and ordered it, but the one sent proved unsatisfactory and another was due in a few days. Stuehmeyer had paid $30 in advance to Dr. Glasscock, who lent him one of his own revolvers pending delivery of the new one.

On Dr. Glasscock's desk when Stuehmeyer called, was one of the physician's favorite weapons, a .32-caliber revolver with pearl handle and nickel-plating.

"Dr. Glasscock picked it up and showed it to me," Stuehmeyer resumed. "He opened the cylinder and the cartridges fell out in his hand. He put them back. He handed the gun over to me and said: 'Feel it, it's a beauty.'

Previous Accidental Shot.

"I was standing (here the witness stood up and illustrated his position). The doctor had turned around in his chair and was writing out a prescription at his desk. I tried to open the gun like the doctor did. I pushed on something and all of a sudden a shot went out.

"I don't know if the trigger was cocked. I'm not used to a pistol."

Seeing Dr. Glasscock slump over his desk, wounded behind his ear, Stuehmeyer ran downstairs to a drug store, threw his hands in the air and announced he had shot his physician. Dr. Glasscock was dead when help arrived.

An employe of the drug store testified that the revolver had a hair trigger and that, three weeks ago when Dr. Glasscock was demonstrating it to a visitor, it was accidentally discharged, the bullet passing through a typewriter, "tearing it all to pieces."

Funeral Tomorrow.

Although Stuehmeyer did not recall pulling the trigger or pushing the hammer to discharge the weapon, when he tried to re-enact the scene at the Wyoming Street Police Station he inadvertently pulled the trigger while the revolver was pointed toward a policeman. This time it was not loaded.

Dr. Glasscock was 49 years old and resided with his wife and three children at 3541 Michigan avenue. Funeral services will be from the residence at 2 p. m. tomorrow, with interment in Lakewood Park Cemetery.

A native of White County, Ill., Dr. Glasscock had been a practicing physician in St. Louis for 20 years. He had collected about 100 pistols and other firearms, some said to be several hundred years old, which he kept at his home and office. He was licensed as a private watchman to carry a revolver, was an expert marksman and a member of the St. Louis Police Revolver Club.

SOVIET PAPER ATTACKS U. S., THE POPE AND ROCKEFELLER

Describes Them as "the International Combine Dollar, Cross and Machine Gun."

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, March 22.—Comsomol Pravda, organ of the Communist Youth League, today published a virulent attack on the United States, the Pope and John D. Rockefeller, under the heading, "The International Combine of Dollar, Cross and Machine Gun."

The paper declared that the Vatican was supported by American capital and that the Pope was an agent of Wall street.

Discussing labor troubles and disturbances in the United States in the past 20 years, the paper charges American capitalists with using violence against American workers.

Comsomol Pravda also mentioned new books on Christ published in the United States, declaring that Christ was pictured as the founder of modern business, an excellent advertiser and a good director and organizer.

Under a subhead, "The Americanization of the Vatican," the paper said the Pope's court was formerly supported chiefly by subsidies from the Austro-Hungarian Empire, but was now maintained largely by American capitalists.

Comsomol Pravda also declared that the Pope's "crusade against the Soviet Union" had failed ignominiously.

PROPOSES DRY LAW AS ISSUE IN FALL ELECTIONS

La Guardia, Wet, Would Demand That Every Congressional Candidate Declare His Position.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—A move by opponents of prohibition to force it as an issue in the coming Congressional elections was proposed today by Congressman La Guardia (Rep.), New York, as drys and wets expressed divergent views on possible results of the hearings before the House Judiciary Committee.

The wets declared they were convinced the hearings had proved the dry law had broken down and that the only question was a remedy. The drys contended their testimony showed the country had prospered under the Eighteenth Amendment and that the hearings had resulted solely in a stimulation of their activities for its continuance.

While these views were being made known, G. S. Jameson, clerk of the Judiciary Committee, announced that the wets had appeared before the group for 29 hours and 30 minutes in seven days, while the drys had testified for 29 hours and 8 minutes. The drys are to have Wednesday in which to end their argument and the wets are to have an opportunity to offer rebuttal testimony only on matters presented by the drys.

In a letter to Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, La Guardia said the statement by the drys before the committee that the majority of the members of Congress were dry must be accepted by the wets at the coming election.

Would Put Candidates on Record.

Regardless of party affiliation, he wrote, the Association should demand that every candidate for a seat in Congress declare his position as either wet or dry.

Speaking for the wets, Congressman Lithicum (Dem.), Maryland, head of the House wet bloc, declared the hearings had been "educational."

"The drys failed to shake the testimony of the anti-prohibitionists on the horrible conditions brought about by the dry laws," he said.

"The hearings have educated the people to the racketeering, bootlegging, increased drinking and disregard of law due to prohibition.

"They will force the candidates in the next Congressional election to come out in the open to make known whether they are wet or dry."

On the other hand, Congressman Hudson (Rep.), Michigan, a dry leader, said the hearings proved that the great middle class of people still are as strong for prohibition as ever."

"The class of people to which daily toil means nothing," he added, "constitutes those who want repeal to satisfy personal desires."

"Will Not Be Modified."

The hearing also proved, he said, that the dry laws would not be modified.

"The most significant thing the hearings brought about," Hudson continued, "was the placing before the American people of the proper position of ex-President William Howard Taft on the eighteenth amendment after it had been enacted."

Taft's brother, Horace D. Taft, of Watertown, Conn., presented the views of the late Chief Justice as supporting the amendment the last years of his life.

Congressman Sparks (Rep.), Kansas, dry on the Judiciary Committee, said the hearings had been educational and good for both sides of the controversy.

Sparks held the view that prohibition would not be an issue in many of the mid-Western State Congressional elections.

Congressman McKeown (Dem.), Oklahoma, another dry on the committee, said the hearings would make "the dry districts more firm for dry candidates, and the wet districts more wet for wet candidates."

WOMAN MUST SERVE 15 YEARS FOR LEADING BANK ROBBERY

Loses Appeal in Oklahoma; Man Companion Once Sentenced to Death.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., March 22.—Characterized as the leader of a gang which robbed the Farmers' Bank of Jet, in December, 1926, Pearl Black today lost her fight in State Criminal Court of Appeals to escape a 15-year penitentiary sentence. Mrs. Black was the alleged companion of Dave Brown, who at one time was under death sentence for his confessed part in the robbery, and Paul Martin, who never has been apprehended.

District Judge Charles Swindall, now a member of the State Supreme Court, sentenced Brown to death after the youth had pleaded guilty of robbery with firearms, but refused to name his accomplice. The sentence recently was commuted to 15 years in the penitentiary. Brown testified he waited in an automobile about a mile and a half from the bank while he and Martin committed the robbery. Mrs. Black's defense was that she did not know a robbery was planned.

EARL OF BALFOUR BORNE TO GRAVE BY OLD RETAINERS

Buried on His Estate in Scotland With Simple Service in Presence of Tenants and Farmers.

By the Associated Press.

WHITTINGEHAME, Scotland., March 22.—Under the shelter of stately beech trees and amid soft green mosses, the Earl of Balfour, famous British statesman, was laid to rest today in the Balfour private burial ground with the simplest of rites. Lord Balfour himself had expressed the wish that the last services be unpretentious.

Only a brief commital service was read at the grave. The oldest six servitors on his estate carried the dark fumed oak coffin from the red sandstone church half a mile away where the body had lain throughout the night, and bore their master's body to a farm cart at the gate, from which the simple procession made it way along his favorite walk through lanes to the graveside.

The inscription on the coffin read "Arthur James, Earl of Balfour, 1848-1930."

The service in the church was brief and simple. Besides the relatives many tenants, neighbors and farmers from all parts of the district attended.

The most conspicuous figure among the mourners was Lord Balfour's aged sister, Miss Alice Balfour, who during the greater part of her life acted as her brother's hostess. She is feeble, but insisted on being present and had to be assisted from her automobile and along the path to the church. She sat beside the open grave, took snowdrops from a basket and dropped them on the coffin.

Other members of the family present included the present Earl of Balfour and his son, Viscount Traprain.

The Rev. Marshall Lang, brother of the Archbishop of Canterbury, conducted the service. There was a touching moment as the small gathering sang Lord Balfour's favorite hymn, "O God, Our Hope in Ages Past," and the village schoolmaster played Handel's funeral march on a tiny harmonium.

There were floral tributes from all parts of thew orld.

Duke of York at Memorial Service in Westminster Abbey.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 22.—A service was held at Westminster Abbey this afternoon in memory of the Earl of Balfour. The Duke of York attended as the representative of King George.

The Dean of Westminster conducted the service, with the Archbishop of Canterbury and all the canons of the Abbey present.

Princess Mary and her husband, the Earl of Harewood, attended, as did members of the diplomatic corps.

Stirring melodies of Beethoven were played instead of funeral marches and the hallelujah chorus was sung instead of a funeral lament.

The Dowager Lady Rayleigh, sister of Lord Balfour, a frail figure sitting in a Bath chair at the head of the choir stalls, suddenly fell forward. Her head lay on her chest, her shoulders heaved convulsively and she raised a thin hand as if in appeal. Lord Dawson of Penn, the King's physician, went to her side, took her hand and raised her head. She looked up at him, smiled and sat during the remainder of the service with hands clasped, while Lord Dawson stood beside her.

Prime Minister MacDonald came from Chequers to pay tribute while several members of the naval delegations, including the five American delegates, attended. Admiral Sir Lionel Halsey represented the Prince of Wales. Other mourners included Mr. and Mrs. Winston Churchill, Mr. and Mrs. David Lloyd George, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin, Wedgewood Benn, the Secretary of State of India, and Sir Oliver Lodge.

The ministers of several London churches devoted their sermons at afternoon services to the life of Lord Balfour. A special memorial service was held at Manchester Cathedral.

FRIEND OF WOMAN WHO GOT DEATH PENALTY TO GO ON TRIAL

By the Associated Press.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., March 22.—With Irene Schroeder convicted, W. Glenn Dague, former Wheeling, W. Va., automobile salesman jointly accused with the "trigger woman," in the slaying of Highway Patrolman Brady Paul, will go to trial Monday.

In another cell, the Schroeder woman read, "did a washing," conversed with other prisoners and received visitors. Her aged father, Joseph Crawford of Benwood, W. Va., and her brother, Joseph Jr., of Concord, O., were among her visitors today.

Her attorneys plan to file a motion Monday for a new trial. If their motion is denied, they said they will appeal to the State Supreme Court.

New Gladiolus Large-Flowered Exhibition Varieties. All colors, up to 6 inches across. Many Ruffled. Postal for full list. Blooming size, delivered... 100 for 50c. BRIERDYKE, E. J. YARDLEY, PENNA.

In Correction of Error.

By the Associated Press.

MATANZAS, Cuba, March 22.—The Associated Press has been advised that on March 2 it incorrectly stated that Mario Jordan had been convicted and sentenced to death here for murder. Jordan conducted the prosecution of a man and a woman, who received the death sentence, and his name was incorrectly used in the report of the trial.

BELLE OF CALHOUN BURNS; LOSS $50,000

Had Been in Service on Mississippi for 35 Years as "Apple Boat."

The river steamer, Belle of Calhoun, famous as "the apple boat from Calhoun County," was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon in the winter quarters in the Alton slough, opposite Alton, Ill.

A veteran among Mississippi River steamers, the Belle of Calhoun had been in service for 35 years, transporting barreled apples from Calhoun County towns to the St. Louis levee each fall. Completely overhauled during the winter, it was to have returned to service next week on its regular summer run between St. Louis and Quincy.

Officials of the New St. Louis & Calhoun Packet Co., owner of the steamer, estimated the loss at $30,000, and stated that the boat was insured for about $35,000. Gevert Meyer of Hamburg, Calhoun County, is president and principal owner of the company.

Four Employes Fight Flames.

The blaze started in the kitchen of the steamer from an undetermined cause. Four employes of the company found themselves unable to fight the blaze with hand extinguishers and abandoned the boat to protect another steamer owned by the company, the Idlewild, which lay nearby.

Dense clouds of smoke and flame rose from the burning vessel and sparks threatened to ignite the Idlewild until a sudden change of wind sent them toward the bank where trees and brush were scorched. After the fire had burned for two hours, the twisted hull of the Belle of Calhoun sank into the slough.

The Belle of Calhoun was built in 1895 by a syndicate of Calhoun County business men and named for Miss Belle Wood, the winner of a popularity contest of that year. One of the largest vessels in the river traffic, it measured 188 feet long, 136 wide and 47 feet to the top of the stacks.

Vessel Sank Three Times.

Because of the fact that Calhoun County has no railroad connections, the Belle of Calhoun has been an important institution as a means of transporting the county's principal product. It sank three times and each time was raised and re-furnished. The recent overhauling, officials said, was the most complete and thorough that had ever been undertaken.

CHANGE U. S. BANKRUPTCY LAW, NEW YORK BAR REPORT URGES

Five Recommendations Made in Report Submitted by W. J. Donovan After Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 22.—The report of an inquiry into widespread abuses of the administration of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, made at the suggestion and expense of the three major bar associations of New York City, was filed with the clerk of the United States District Court today.

The report, submitted by William J. Donovan, chief counsel in the inquiry, declared there is an imperative need for a fundamental change in the Federal act as the only possible method of improving conditions.

Five recommendations, all for changes in the act, were made. These, Donovan said, would speed bankruptcy administrations, place the administration of bankrupt estates on a business basis, relieve the courts of administrative responsibilities by centralizing them in the executive branch of the Federal government, circumscribe creditor control and enforce more efficiently the criminal and discharge provisions of the Federal act.

The inquiry covered bankruptcy operations throughout the United States. The report contained surveys of bankruptcy administration in this country, England and Canada.

Ore Prices Unchanged.

JOPLIN Mo., March 22.—Ore prices were unchanged, but uneasy in the Tri-State district this week. Prime Western grades of zinc brought $37 a ton, float concentrates $36 and lead $62.50 a ton. Sale of zinc was 6740 tons. The lead purchases were less than 1000 tons.

Drastic decline in the lead prices the two previous weeks has forced some mines to shut down, and some companies are curtailing operations to keep up the price of zinc. Production of zinc for the week was about 9500 tons.

CAPONE'S ARREST IN FLORIDA BARRED BY FEDERAL INJUNCTION

Temporary Writ Against Sheriffs Forbids Carrying Out Order of Governor.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 22.—Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter tonight signed a temporary restraining order prohibiting 20 North Florida and East Coast sheriffs from molesting Alphonse Capone, Chicago gang chief, who is expected to arrive at his Palm Island home here next week.

The injunction suit was filed by J. F. Gordonn and Vincent Giglin, attorneys for Capone, after Gov. Carlton had issued telegraphic instructions to each of the 67 sheriffs in the state to arrest Capone and escort him to the state border should he attempt to return to his residence here.

A temporary restraining order is addressed to the sheriffs of counties along the probable route Capone will have to take to reach Miami.

The bill of complaint states that Capone expects to proceed to his home in Dade County on Monday or Tuesday. Capone must make bond for appearance at a hearing to determine whether the order shall be made permanent.

CHAUFFEUR FORCED TO DRIVE INTO COUNTY, ROBBED OF $4

William A. Ryan, chauffeur of a Yellow taxicab, reported to police that he was held up last night by two passengers who forced him to drive from 3600 O'Meara avenue to a point about four miles south of Jefferson Barracks where they robbed him of $4 and made him drive back to Ohio and Park avenues.

Alighting from the car, he said, the men waved to another taxicab, but fled on foot, firing four shots at him, after he called a warning to the other driver.

Couzens Advised to Take Rest.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Worn out by the long tariff grind, Senator Couzens of Michigan was forced to retire from the chamber today and go home. He has not been feeling well for several days but has insisted upon sticking to his post during the 11-hour daily sessions on the tariff bill. He came to the Senate again today but was ordered home by a physician. His condition is not regarded as dangerous by physicians but he has been ordered to take a rest.

HOTEL CLOTHING THIEF CAUGHT

Impersonated Guests and Obtained Keys to Rooms.

A sneak thief who stole clothing from four rooms at Hotel Statler by impersonating guests and obtaining their keys from the room clerk, was arrested Friday by a house detective when he appeared in the lobby with a suit and overcoat on his arm.

At Police Headquarters the man said he was Arthur Summers, 31 years old, of Houston, Tex., and admitted that he had pawned about $200 worth of clothing. He asked for a key, he explained, after selecting a guest who answered his own description and watching him until he turned in his key and went out.

"Me pay 50¢ for a tooth paste ? let me laugh"

"I paid that for years—thought I had to in order to have nice teeth.

"But I don't pay that much now. I've had a small but worth-while lesson in economy.

"It occurred to me one day that all tooth pastes are pretty much alike. If that was so what was the use of paying fancy prices? That led me to Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢. Been using it right along now, and figure I save myself about $4 a year. What's more, my teeth look cleaner and whiter than ever and my mouth feels simply great!"

That's the way a lot of men and women talk. Actually, more than a million people have rejected costly dentifrices for this modern one which sells for 25¢, the large tube. And while the price has been a consideration, the deciding factor in their selection was the outstanding quality of this tooth paste and the remarkable results achieved by it.

If you aren't already using Listerine Tooth Paste, do so at the first opportunity. Note how swiftly but how gently it erases discolorations and tartar. And how lustrous it leaves the teeth. Contained in it are new polishing and cleansing agents. They are harder than tartar and so remove it. But they are softer than enamel and consequently do not hurt it.

We are willing to wager that once you try Listerine Tooth Paste you will not return to soapy, gritty, or prettily colored dentifrices which accomplish no more. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

Buy slippers with what it saves you

Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ saves you about $3 per year per person compared to dentifrices in the high-price field. Spend that $3 as you please. Slippers are merely a suggestion.

Picturesque Modern Dutch Colonial Home

This substantial, Dutch Colonial home with its shingled sides, was once the commonplace house pictured in oval. The illustration gives a hint of the possibilities that await the owners of square, plain houses. The cost of modernizing was low.

REMODELING BROUGHT A COLONIAL HOME

Dutch Type of Colonial House Was Selected for the Model.

The possibilities of remodeling a modest small home into an attractive Dutch Colonial house are illustrated in the above pictures. One picture shows the house before the contractor started the modernization work. The other picture shows the delightful effects that were attained with a careful planning.

The Dutch Colonial house meets the needs of the moderate sized family. The exterior gives pleasing lines without waste of space or material.

In modernizing this house the old front porch with its ginger bread trimming was removed and a small stoop with a shelter substituted. The main entrance to the interior was placed at the right of the front elevation, the older entrance being enclosed.

The single window opening at the left of the old entrance was widened into a bay of three sliding windows. Below is a window box for flowers.

The front windows on the second floor were set off by wooden shutters painted in a contrasting color. New sash and trim were used, as the former tall narrow windows did not give that comfortable homey look that is typical with the Dutch Colonial. Over these windows in the gable is a semi-circular window with fan lights which affords daylight to the attic.

The roof lines of the house were changed to give the dormer effect. Broad dormers on each side of the roof break the roof to provide the necessary light and ventilation.

The former window openings at the side on the second floor were widened to a bay containing two double hung windows.

After the exterior of the house was transformed, painters, plumbers, carpenters, plasterers and interior decorators transformed the interior of the house into a real home.

REMODELING RESIDENCES

The architect requires all his insight to determine the relative importance of the various requirements of his clients in the light of what he believes that they, being the people they are, will find best suited to them when the work is done.

Home owners cannot be expected to rate the effectiveness and appropriateness of the various methods of construction and the various building materials and products.

It is the architect's trained ability to cope with these problems and to fit his expert knowledge to the ideas and the demands of his client that makes his services invaluable in remodeling a home.

An Important Reason.

Modernization is more than a matter of the exterior lines of the house. It goes deep into the lives of the occupants. It touches them in every phase of their existence. It adds to the richness and fullness of their lives.

UNSIGHTLY WALKS MAR A HOME PLACE

Touches of the Artistic Now Introduced Into the Garden Walk.

Springtime is the ideal season of the year to lay granitoid walks and pavements. Few exterior improvements of the minor type add more to the appearance of a place than neat walks.

A touch of the artistic may be introduced into the walk in the lawn by using stepping stones instead of the more formal concrete walks. Such walks are usually curved across the lawn and add a charming touch to the vista of lawn and shrubbery.

A formal concrete walk in the lawn is often avoided as being too prim for the treatment of the garden. Stepping stones made of irregular pieces of concrete or flagstones are used because of their artistic and informal atmosphere. Curving over the lawn with turf-surrounding each stone they lend a charming aspect to the vista.

Stepping stones are inexpensive. They may be purchased already cut to shape or may be made by paving contractor. These stones are irregular in design and may be colored with mineral pigments. Often the stones are left white, thus making a sharp contrast to the green of the lawn.

A common way to place such stones is to place them in the desired position on the lawn, cut around the edge of each stone with a sharp pointed knife or trowel, lift out the sod and remove sufficient dirt to allow the stone to set in place with a half inch clearance above the level of the lawn. After the stone has been tamped into place, fill in around the edges with loam.

Grass seed should be immediately sown so that in time the stones will be entirely surrounded by lawn.

Sanitary Basement Floors.

Many of the older residences still have dirt floors in the basement, or wooden platforms over the excavation. This is not only an unsanitary condition, but also an expensive one. Dirt floors hold moisture, which breeds microbes. Dirt is also tracked up to the main living floor, where it grinds into the rugs with resulting cleaning expenses.

Individuality of a House Marked by Color Scheme

Many Recently Modernized Houses Have Gotten Entirely Away From the Stereotyped Style of Exterior Decoration.

A little variation in the color trim will often endow a house with an amazing amount of individuality without in any way making it bizarre.

The personality and charm of the home often rests on the selection of the color of the house. Stereotyped color schemes are the curse of the American landscape.

The house, its setting and size must be considered when choosing the color.

For small houses of the Colonial type pure white, ivory or cream are suitable for the walls while the trim may be in sage green, light olive green or medium blue.

A house of the Italian or Spanish type looks well with walls of deep buff and trim of terra cotta.

Houses without any architectural individuality may be treated with body of old ivory and trim of sage green, light cream and pale olive green, colonial yellow and dark tan, ash-gray and warm drab, light blue and light brown and variations of these.

The purpose of painting the trim a different color is to emphasize the architectural lines.

If certain parts of the trim are out of keeping with modern practice, paint them like the body of the house and they are subdued.

Ginger-bread ornamentation found on the houses built 20 or 30 years ago may be subdued by painting this ornamentation the same color as the body of the house.

HOUSECLEANING INCLUDES CLEANING INTERIOR WALLS

Removing Dirt and Grime From Rough Walls Offers Quite a Problem.

How to clean rough walls is one of the problems that the modern housekeeper has to cope with, as the fad for rough walls has been popularized not only in California, where the Spanish type of bungalow has featured this attractive wall finish, but also in the newer apartment houses, hotels and private residences of this country, where the stylish rough plastered walls have been adopted on account of cleanliness and sanitary appeal.

It was generally taken for granted that walls so decorated had to be washed and then recoated, a tedious and expensive process to include in the semiannual housecleaning program.

Experiments were undertaken with a St. Louis made product remarkable for its wonderful qualities in cleaning wall paper, and it was found equally as effective with rough walls and just as easy to apply. The only difference is that a handful is "rolled" over the surface instead of "swiped," and the dirt is drawn out of the depressions as a magnet attracts metal. On the corners it is but necessary to "daub" along and they are cleaned as perfectly as the walls and disinfected as well.

It's surprising how much black can be extracted from the average rough wall, though it may only be noticeable around the radiators. Just a few "roller" motions make the cleaner look as black as midnight, but a little "working" brings new particles to the outside, and it can be used until the entire handful of what originally was a putty-like pinkish substance is transformed into a black mass.

Modern Home Lighting.

In the home the light must be adapted to the type of work or recreation for which it is needed, there must be an adequate amount of light; glare must be eliminated; the type of lighting should be in harmony with its surrounding, and the illumination should be well distributed.

Brick a Popular Medium.

Face brick is a popular medium for modernizing old homes. Often an attractive home is salvaged out of the old house at a fraction of the cost that a new dwelling of similar appearance would entail.

OFFICIAL ACTION ON TRACKLESS TROLLEYS SET FOR TUESDAY

Car Company Asks That Decision Be Deferred Until New Conveyances Are Tried.

The Board of Public Service is expected to act Tuesday on the application of the Public Service Co. for permission to substitute the trackless electric trolley for the gasoline bus on the Vandeventer line, although the company has requested the board to defer action until a demonstration of the trackless trolley could be arranged for city officials and users of the line.

Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks and Director of Public Utilities Rilliet are expected to report to the board, of which they are members, a recommendation concerning the company's application. The board has received protests from business men in the vicinity of Vandeventer avenue against the trackless trolley, the chief objection being against the overhead wires it would require.

In an announcement that it had asked that action be deferred, the car company declared it regarded the trackless trolley as "the most important vehicle for mass transportation developed in recent years."

'SKIPPY,' DOG THAT BEGGED AID FOR FELLOW HOUNDS, GONE

Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, His Owner, Thinks He Was Killed by Vandals.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, former ballroom dancer, today expressed the fear that her famous begging dog, "Skippy," had been killed by the vandals she suspects of burning her dog shelter near Deerfield, Ill., killing 90 animals.

Reward offers published today disclosed that the dog that solicited money for his fellow hounds with a tin cup and a bell has been missing for a week.

Mrs. McLaughlin discovered the dog's absence on her return from Florida Thursday. It is thought the dog is a victim of those opposed to plans for a new dog shelter on the site of the one destroyed.

"Skippy" took an active part in the subscription campaign for the original structure.

Kirkwood 6:46 Commuters Going to Lose 'Service Sam'

Conductor Bowers to Be Retired May 14, Leaving His Suburban Passengers to Shift for Selves.

The pinochle players on the 6:46 will have to bring their own cards with them when that train chugs out of the Missouri-Pacific station at Kirkwood on the morning of May 14, or they may spend the following half-hour gazing idly out the window. Their usual conductor, Sam Bowers, will have retired on that day after 52 years of railroading, and it is quite probable his successor will not at first realize that among his duties is the matter of providing cards in an emergency for forgetful pinochle players.

Sam Bowers has been punching tickets on suburban trains for 20 years, but he has never stopped with that. The hundreds who ride with him every day have come to expect all manner of extra services. He is "Sam" to them, and he can call most of his passengers by their first names. If a pack of cards is needed someone is sure to suggest "See if Sam's got a deck." If one of the regulars finds himself without a ticket he says, "Sam, punch one off of Hank's for me. He's back in the smoker." Or if Hank isn't riding that train the commuter may ask the conductor to wait until the next day for his ticket.

Daughters approach him at Union Station to inquire if their fathers are on board and usually Bowers can tell in what coach he is riding. Young sons who leave his train in the terminal yards to save the few minutes it takes to back into the station are liable to find themselves questioned about the incident at home. Bowers will have warned the head of the family of the danger.

Rule Requires That He Retires.

Tall, lean and clear-eyed, the veteran conductor appears much younger than he is and his retirement is not due to any disability, but to an inflexible rule which retires Missouri-Pacific employes on their seventieth birthdays. Bower's will be May 14, but he is not yet ready for the rocking chair. Those who have seen him in Kirkwood, when his train has finished a run, and the engine has been detached and placed on a turntable, can testify to that. Bowers and three others of the crew grasp levers and turn the ponderous engine around by man-power. And none of the crew is breathing more lightly than he when the job is done.

His pension would enable him to take life easy if he chose, but he doesn't. "I just can't sit down and go to seed," Bowers says. "I'm going to take a vacation for a year, and then I'm going on the road as a traveling salesman. Several of the men who ride with me have told me they can place me, and I figure the work will be easy for me. I like to travel and I like to meet people. I don't think it will be much different from what I've been used to."

Bowers began as a fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1878, and started with the Missouri-Pacific as a fireman in 1882. In 1898 he became a passenger conductor. In recent years he has made three trips out of Kirkwood in the morning and two trips out of St. Louis in the evening. That leaves him free for several hours in the middle of the day and in favorable weather he spends the time working in the garden of his home in Kirkwood.

Known as Uncle Sam.

Many of the men who ride his trains now started with him years ago, when as children they came to St. Louis to attend school. In those days the county territory served by the Missouri Pacific was sparsely settled, there were few schools, and the railroad made special rates for school children. That in some measure accounts for Bower's status as an intimate friend of many families along his run. There is one in Webster Groves in which there are six daughters, now married and living in other cities. When they return on occasions they make a point to ride one of his trains and recall old times. They know him as "Uncle Sam."

Some years ago he helped organize a syndicate to prospect for tin in Bolivia. Many of his associates were men who commuted on his trains, whom he persuaded to buy stock. The venture looked so good to a group of capitalists that later they bought a half interest with the agreement to spend $150,000 in two years to develop it. That was done, but the undertaking failed, and it cost Bowers $3000 to buy back the stock he had sold to his friends. He was under no obligation to do it, but he felt responsible for their loss, he says.

Bowers owns a home at 128 Clinton avenue, Kirkwood, where he lives with his wife. They have a grown daughter who is a music teacher in Seattle, Wash. Soon after his retirement, Mr. and Mrs. Bowers will leave for Seattle, and after a visit there he will continue on to Alaska. There is a Government owned and operated railroad in Alaska and he is interested in knowing how successfully it is operated. Next winter will be spent in Florida, and then Bowers is going to work again.

EUROPA AVERAGING 28 KNOTS

NEW YORK, March 22.—Unperturbed by the antagonistic elements, the North German Lloyd liner Europa today nibbled at the miles that stretched out before her on her maiden voyage to America. Her prow cutting smoothly through a heavy swell and sending spray a hundred feet into the air, the ship, despite strong headwinds, had covered 703 miles in the full day ending at noon, an average speed of 28.15 knots.

Her sister ship, the Bremen, which holds the record of 4 days, 17 hours and 24 minutes for the crossing from Cherbourg, made only 687 miles on the first full day's run of her maiden voyage last July, when the weather was much more favorable. Although the Europa will break the Bremen's record if she continues her present speed, officials of the line said she was merely "doing her best" on her maiden voyage and not attempting to establish a new speed mark. The Europa's course is 70 miles longer than the route the Bremen took.

HELD OVER LETTER TO A GIRL

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 22.—Virgil Hite, 43 years old, Little Rock automobile salesman and former convict, was arrested here today on a Federal warrant charging violation of a postal regulation in a message he sent by mail to a St. Louis girl. On the outside of a letter was written: "If people in your house know as much about you as I do they wouldn't allow you to live there."

Hite was convicted and served three years in Federal prison about three years ago for violating the banking laws relative to drafts he cashed on a Hot Springs banker.

Of This Amount, Robert Burkham, Counsel, Gets $1000; Rest Goes to Receiver and Aid.

Fees totaling $8500 in the receivership of the New Coliseum Co., former owner of the Coliseum at Jefferson avenue and Washington boulevard, were approved yesterday by Circuit Judge Hogan. The fees were determined out of court and were allowed as follows: Ben Philipson, receiver, $5500; Andrew R. Kauffman, co-receiver, $2000; Robert Burkham, of counsel for the receivers, $1000. It was shown the allowances were paid by the John R. Thompson Securities Co., for which the Coliseum building was purchased at foreclosure sale Feb. 5 for $198,000.

Richmond C. Coburn, also attorney for the receivers, has not asked for any allowance, but it was said he, too, would be compensated by the purchaser. The Coliseum is now operated under the name of the Coliseum Realty Co.

The receivership was instituted Nov. 8 last by the Mercantile Commerce Bank and Trust Co., representing bondholders. Judge Hogan, in approving the receivers' accounts, discharged them. The accounts show that the law firm of Thompson, Mitchell, Thompson & Young, attorneys for the complainant, received $17,375, which was paid by the receivers Feb. 12 pursuant to a decree entered Dec. 28.

LOAN BASIS ON MINNEAPOLIS WHEAT REDUCED FIVE CENTS

Chairman Legge Says Change Was Made to Conform With Present Prices.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 22.—Reductions of five cents a bushel in the loan value basis of wheat, effective probably Monday, were announced today by M. W. Thatcher, manager of the Farmers Union Terminal Association, a co-operative approved by the Federal Farm Board.

The price basis of Federal Farm Board loans, Thatcher said, would be reduced from $1.25 a bushel for No. 1 Northern Spring wheat at Minneapolis, to $1.20 a bushel, and the price for No. 1 Winter sold in the northern West will be reduced from $1.20 to $1.18 a bushel.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Chairman Legge of the Farm Board said today that the reduction of five cents a bushel in the loan value basis of wheat at Minneapolis was made for the purpose of bringing loan values there more nearly on a parity with those elsewhere. When the loan value schedule was fixed last Fall, he said, the Minneapolis cash price for wheat was 7 to 8 cents above the cash price in Chicago.

For that reason the schedule on wheat loans to be advanced on co-operative wheat at Minneapolis was set at $1.25 a bushel while the Chicago schedule was placed at $1.18. Recently, Minneapolis cash prices have been under those at Chicago.

UNION MOVERS AND PACKERS DEMAND 30-CENT INCREASE

Drivers Want $1 an Hour and Helpers Ask for 95 Cents.

Wage increases of 30 cents an hour are sought by union movers and packers, who have presented their demand to the Association of Van Owners and Warehouse Men. The expiration date of the present contract has been extended from May 1 to June 10 to permit negotiations.

Drivers of moving trucks and packers, who now receive 70 cents an hour, are demanding $1, and helpers, now paid 65 cents, want 95 cents an hour. There are 400 men in the union, Local 751, Furniture Movers, Packers and Helpers. They received their last wage increase three years ago.

A representative of the warehouse operators said employers are not inclined to grant the demands, but will negotiate with a view to averting a strike.

FIVE INJURED WHEN FIRE TRUCK HITS FARMER'S AUTO

Four of Them Suffer Fracture of Skull in Collision at Virginia and Koeln Avenues.

Three firemen and two farmers were injured yesterday in a collision at Virginia and Koeln avenues between a light produce truck and a Fire Department pumper truck answering an alarm.

Both drivers swerved to avoid a crash as they approached the intersection but the machines sideswiped each other and were hurled to opposite sides of the street. The engine crossed the curb at the northwest corner, breaking a fire plug and stopping on the lawn of Zion Methodist Church.

Capt. Joseph J. Schweiger of Fire Company No. 24, at 8227 South Broadway, and Pipeman Charles M. Kline suffered fractures of the skull and pelvis, and Pipeman John J. Fitzgerald a fracture of the skull and cuts. Samuel Oliver, driver of the pumper, clung to the steering wheel and escaped injury.

James Harris, truck farmer, 970 Dammert avenue, St. Louis County, suffered fractures of the pelvis and ribs, and his son, James Harris, Jr., 209 Mary avenue, St. Louis County, fractures of the skull and right leg. The younger Harris said he did not hear the fire siren until he reached the corner and then found it too late to stop.

NEW WAILING WALL COMPLAINT

JERUSALEM, March 22.—The Jewish Telegraphic Agency reports that Jewish worshipers praying at the wailing wall, scene of the disturbances that led to riots last summer, were again disturbed today by Arabs with the recently introduced musical religious ceremonies of Zikhar.

Last Saturday Jewish worshipers at the wall were interrupted by similar ceremonies. The Jewish population, protesting to the Government, was advised the administration would do nothing until the arrival of the League of Nations commission soon to be appointed to settle the claims of Jew and Moslem worshipers.

MIAMI, Fla., March 22.—"Wild Bill" Mehlhorn of Pensacola, Fla., snatched the $5000 top money in the 72-hole $15,000 La Gorce open golf tournament from Horton Smith, formerly of Springfield, Mo., now Pro at Cragston, N. Y., in a dramatic finish on the final hole here today. Mehlhorn's score for the 72 holes was 285, Smith's, 286.

Mehlhorn uncorked an eagle three on the 71st, while Smith ran into bad luck to take a par five to put the Pensacola shotster one in the lead after a nip-and-tuck battle throughout the day.

They halved the final hole with fives, Smith driving behind a palm tree and breaking his club on the second shot, the ball going into the gallery around the green. Mehlhorn pulled his second shot into a trap to the right of the green, but pitched out nicely. He played it safe and sank his fifth to halve the hole and gain the victory.

Smith's 286 was good for second money of $2500.

Tommy Armour, hard-hitting player of Boca Raton, Fla., pulled up in third place with 290, taking $1000 of the prize money. Armour shot consistent golf throughout the final 18 holes to take a pair of 37s and nose out Bobby Cruickshank, Purchase, N. Y., and Billy Burke, Westport, N. Y., who finished with 291 each to tie for fourth place. They divided fourth and fifth money to get $675 apiece.

Tony Manero, Elmsford, N. Y., provided the low score of the day when he burned up the course after the noon recess to score a 65, six under par. Manero's low score gave him the special $100 prize for the low on the final 18 holes and threw him into a four way tie with Whiffy Cox, Brooklyn, Willie Klein, Miami Beach, and John Golden, Paterson, N. J., for sixth place. They divided the prize money for the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth places between them, getting $475 each. They had scores of 292.

Manero counted a 30 on the outgoing nine, five under par, and a 35 on the homeward trip.

Ed. Dudley, Wilmington, Del., and Tom Raklets, Cleveland, scored 293 each to divide tenth place, which was worth $325 each. Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J., was next with 295 to get $250, while Al Watrous, Detroit, followed with 296 for $200.

Johnny Farrell, St. Augustine, Fla., winner of the first La Gorce open top money two years ago, and Gene Sarazen, Fresh Meadow, L. I., both favorites in this year's play, ran into the traps that mark the La Gorce course and finished far down the line. Farrell had a total of 298 to win $100 of the prize money, while Sarazen required 299 to win $60 along with Herman Barron, Port Chester, N. Y., Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., and Eddie Hassman, Cleveland.

Tilden Defeats British Star in Cannes Semifinal

CANNES, France, March 22.—Big Bill Tilden, the veteran American tennis star, reached the final round in the Cannes Lawn Tennis Club's tournament here today by defeating R. H. Kingsley, British star, 6—2, 6—0.

In the doubles, Tilden and his youthful partner, Wilbur Coen, advanced to the final gaining victory over Lyttleton Rogers and Tamio Abe. The scores were 6—7, 8—6, 6—4, 4—2.

J., for sixth place. They divided the prize money for the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth places between them, getting $475 each. They had scores of 292.

Manero counted a 30 on the outgoing nine, five under par, and a 35 on the homeward trip.

Ed. Dudley, Wilmington, Del., and Tom Raklets, Cleveland, scored 293 each to divide tenth place, which was worth $325 each. Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J., was next with 295 to get $250, while Al Watrous, Detroit, followed with 296 for $200.

Johnny Farrell, St. Augustine, Fla., winner of the first La Gorce open-top money two years ago, and Gene Sarazen, Fresh Meadow, L. I., both favorites in this year's play, run into the traps that mark the La Gorce course and finished far down the line. Farrell had a total of 298 to win $100 of the prize money, while Sarazen required 299 to win $60 along with Herman Barron, Port Chester, N. Y., Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., and Eddie Hassman, Cleveland.

Let's Go, Primo.

PRIMO CARNERA, fresh from a bloomer at Jacksonville, will be in St. Louis this morning en route for Kansas City and all points west. Object: All the kale he can gather!

His first stopping point will be Kansas City, where he meets George Trafton, a giant football star and the conqueror of the redoubtable Art Shires. Following that Carnera will oppose a long line of pushovers, on his way through the Rockies to the Pacific Coast region.

Up to Jacksonville, Carnera had not encountered a setback financially; but the Jacksonville show was a flop. There are indications that the public is about fed up on Carnera's fights with setups and will keep the dollars in the family sock until he opposes some capable opponent.

Carnera can cure any financial shrinkage that may seem impending by putting on a real fight against a real foe. The public will pay well to see him face a good man.

If Carnera were matched with Jack Sharkey, Von Porat or any of the title pretenders, there is little doubt that a gate of several hundred thousand would develop in case of a summer show.

Because fans believe he is the only man with punching power to hurt Carnera, Jack Dempsey is the fighter the public hopes will soon take a crack at the big Italian freak of nature.

Losing Prestige?

THE American Derby seems likely to displace the Kentucky Derby as the year's greatest racing event. In this it will be resuming the place it enjoyed in the days before the reform wave swept racing out of existence in practically all states except Kentucky and Louisiana.

Because Kentucky enjoyed a monopoly, the Churchill Downs event became a standout, although it really is scheduled too early in the season to furnish the best of seasoned horses and fillies.

This year the entries to the American Derby reached 164, 14 greater than for the Kentucky event. The entries include all the great ones who will be missing from the Kentucky Derby, namely, Whichone and Boojum, the standouts of last season's 2-year-olds, as well as Hi-Jack and Caruso, two other great stake winners.

The two stakes are of equal added money value; but because more 3-year-olds will have en-

HALL CAPTURES THREE CUSHION BILLIARD TITLE

By the Associated Press.

FRENCH LICK, Ind., March 22.—The National Amateur Three Cushion Billiard Championship has returned to the Pacific Coast. For the third straight time a Coast entry won the National Crown when Joseph Hall of San Francisco Pacific Coast Champion, clinched it here this afternoon by defeating Frank I. Flemming of Champaign, Ill., a former champion, by 50 to 37 in 78 innings. Hall's high run was three against runs of five and four for Fleming. It was Hall's sixth straight victory.

It was the same systematic style of play that marked his work in the previous games that carried Hall to the title. Fleming never seemed able to break through the effective safety of Hall and when points were needed Hall always seemed able to make the count.

In the final game of the tournament tonight, Hall defeated Max Shimon, 50 to 49, in 62 innings. Hall was trailing at 45 to 49 in the sixtieth and made three in the sixty-first and an unfinished two in the sixty-second. Hall won all

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., March 22.—Peoria Manual won the Illinois high school basketball championship tonight, defeating Bloomington 38 to 25 in a hard fought battle before 5000 spectators in the University of Illinois Gym.

The scrapping Peoria quintet led Bloomington throughout the game, flashing a deadly accuracy in basket-shooting and playing a great defensive battle.

Southern Illinois took a share of the honor when Olney's strong quintet defeated a crippled Beardstown team by a 27 to 18 score playing without Myers and Hager, regular guards who were ill, the Beardstown quintet fought a game battle but were unable to stop Olney's powerful attack.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 22.—The Springfield Elks scored a convincing victory over the Peetz girls basketball team of St. Louis here tonight, 29 to 17. The St. Louisans started with a rush, getting a 7 to 0 lead at the start but faded before the end of the first quarter. Jay Williams, forward of the Elks, led both clubs in scoring points with 15.

Catherine Dueker was the individual ace for the Peetz team. She counted eight points.

Springfield finished the first quarter with a 9 to 7 lead and led 15 to 8 at the half.

Margaret Bick, forward of the Peetz club, was put out of the game in the first half because of personal fouls.

The teams have divided four games this season.

MISS MAGUIRE SETS NEW MARK FOR HIGH JUMP IN A. A. U. MEET

FEWER THAN 500 SEE A. A. U. MEET

TRACK athletics failed to attract sport fans to the Coliseum last night, where the Western A. A. U. championships were decided, estimates of the attendance running as low as 200 and the most liberal placing the crowd at less than 500.

Catherine Maguire, former United States Olympic team member, broke her own record for the running high jump when she cleared 58 inches in the Western A. A. U. championship meet at the Coliseum last night. Miss Maguire's old mark was 57 inches.

Maryville Teachers' College carried off the team honors, with 16 points, nosing out Washington U. by two points. Other totals follow: Lincoln University, 11; University of Wichita, 10; Concordia Gym Society, 7; McKendree, 6; Bradley Tech, 5; Jewish Community Center, 2, and Downtown Y. M. C. A. 1.

A new champion in the 50-yard dash for women was crowned when Miss Annette Beinke of the Bly-Moss A. C. nosed out Miss Mildred Schworm of the Headlight A. C., last year's winner, in 6 4-10 seconds, equaling the record for the event.

Cecil Smith of Maryville College captured the corresponding race for men, but his time was not up to the record.

Smith finished first also in the $00-yard dash, but was disqualified for fouling on a turn and first place was given to Hudson Hellmich, an unattached runner.

Fewer than 500 persone were on hand to watch the meet.

Victorian Favorite In Today's $140,000 Agua Caliente Race

By the Associated Press.

AGUA CALIENTE, Lower California, Mexico, March 22.—Roads of the west led across the border into the Valley of Old Aunt Jane—Tijuana—today, where tomorrow a chosen group of 15 racing thoroughbreds will go to the post for the glory of the turf and gold prizes approximating $140,000.

Victorian, a 5-year-old with an impressive record of victories at his heels estimated at more than $150,000 in monetary considerations, continued to reign supreme as the outstanding horse among the bettors for this, the first running of the Agua Caliente Handicap.

While there was evidence of a wavering, ever so slight, toward the other contenders of importance, Dowagiac, Scimitar, Naishapur and Brown Wisdom, nevertheless the horse from the Lexington (Ky.) farm was standing an 8-to-5 favorite to go the mile and a quarter route and finish in front.

Fast Track Assured.

The desire for heavy going, which his handlers said was the only thing lacking to make Victorian a standout, apparently was doomed, for the weather man promised clear weather and a fast track.

One withdrawal was reported today, with Baron Long, San Diego (Cal.) horseman, withdrawing his Hatrick. This left 15 to go to the post tomorrow of the original list of 20 nominees.

Victorian, primarily a speedster with a particular liking for the mile nd a furlong route, may, in the opinion of numerous experts, find the mile and a quarter distance a bit far, but this also holds true for Brown Wisdom, whose strong point is speed.

The Warm Stable contender must bear the burden of a top impost of 126 pounds, however, against the 119 pounds for Brown Wisdom and 111 pounds each for Dowagiac and Naishapur. Scimitar will be called upon to pack 105 pounds.

With a $5000 prize awaiting the winning jockey, the contest will not only resolve itself into a stern battle of racing horseflesh, but a matching of wits of some of the country's best riders.

Naishapur is probably the most fortunate in the way of riders, with Johny Malben in the saddle,

MANUSH ALSO MAKES FIRST APPEARANCE; CALDWELL AND STEWART HURL WELL

By James M. Gould.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 22.—With the play of Ralph "Red" Kress, only one day in camp, featuring the game, the Browns this afternoon defeated the Buffalo club of the International League, 2-1, for their fifth victory in seven played on Florida fields. Kress no only played the entire game, but had two hits in three chances at bat and handled his five fielding chances as though he had been playing all winter. Two of these fielding chances started fast double plays.

Heinie Manush, with two days of work under his belt, went three innings and was credited with an infield hit in two times up. He had no fielding chances.

Caldwell Yields Three Hits.

The pitching for Killefer was done by the young right-hander Caldwell, and the veteran left-hander Stewart. Caldwell, in five innings, held Buffalo scoreless and permitted three hits while Stewart, in four frames allowed as many safeties and in the sixth, was peppered for all three hits and an earned run. Neither of the St. Louis runs was earned, errors permitting Brownie runners to cross the plate in the first and third innings.

Mangum and Leverett, both former major league right handers, performed for Buffalo. Both runs were charged to Mangum, who went six innings.

As has been the case, when the Browns have been facing veteran pitchers, there wasn't much to the team's attack. It took three hits and an error to count a run in the first and an error, an infield out and a double to count their final run which came in the third. Moreover 11 Brownies were stranded on the bases. The pitching also as has been the St. Louis rule, was excellent. Neither Caldwell not Stewart issued a pass. As a result only three Buffalo men were left. Only six got on throughout the game and two double plays, Kress to Melillo to Blue, erased some of these.

Manush Gets First Hit.

After Blue and Melillo were out in the first inning, Manush hit lightly toward the box and the ball hopped away from Mangum's glove. Schulte followed with a real single and the bases were filled when Kress beat out a high bounder in front of the plate. Hale then hit to Sax who fumbled and Manush scored.

In the third, with Manush out of the way on a roller to second, Schulte went all the way to second when Thomas let an easy grounder get away from him. He took third on Kress' infield out and scored when Hale punched a double to right-center. In the remaining five innings the Browns never were close to counting. They made only three hits.

The only Buffalo run came over in the sixth, the first inning that Stewart presided. He started nicely by getting the first two batsmen, but the next three in a row hit safely, the third hit sending Sax over for the counter. Then, Stewart forced the next batter to hit into a double play and nary a Bison got on thereafter.

Only one error was charged to the Browns. That was a fumble by Gullic of a hit in the fourth. This permitted a base runner to advance an extra step.

Roetz relieved Blue at first in the late innings, but it must be said that the regular inner works, while in there, looked mighty fast. Hale looked sweet in the field and, apparently, is out of his long hitting slump. Players, however, say Sammy never was a good spring hitter.

A second and final game with Buffalo is scheduled for tomorrow. Then after a Monday rest, the Browns will play the Bearded House of David team and follow this with a four-game series, split by a Friday layoff with Dear Old Milwaukee Brewers.

STREET GIVES OUTFIELDERS LONG SESSION OF THROWING TO INFIELD

CARDS LOOK LIKE TEAMS OF PENNANT YEARS, SCRIBE SAYS

By a Staff Correspondent.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 22.

THE writers with clubs from other major league cities are beginning to take the Cardinals seriously again.

A veteran New York scribe, who has been covering baseball games and championship series for 20 years, remarked after the Yankee-Cardinal series that the Red Birds looked as good as they did when they were winning the 1926 and 1928 pennants and that if they landed another infielder, the predictions which placed the Cards out of the ranks of dangerous contenders would have to be revised.

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 22.—After three weeks of spring training, the condition of the Cardinals is so satisfactory that Manager Gabby Street this afternoon dug up the old proverb about all work and no play tending to dull the wits of Jack the Ballplayer and declared a Scotch holiday.

If you don't know what a Scotch holiday is, it is one where you don't have to work any more after the work is all done and therefore there isn't any more to do.

"Some of the boys seemed to be getting tired," Street explained. "You know, you mustn't let them get to the point where they hate the sight of a uniform. When they feel that way you have a stale outfit and the boys can't do justice to their tasks. So that's why I got them out early this morning, cut down the lunch hour and hustled them until 2:30 o'clock and then told them they could have the rest of the day to themselves. They can go fishing, play golf or spend the afternoon at the beach.

"I'll be giving them some more afternoons off, too, if they continue to progress as well as they have done."

Plan to Use Strong Arms.

Street devoted the morning to a throwing drill for the infielders and outfielders. Following the plan outlined previously, Street used Bottomley to cut off throws and deputized Charley Gelbert as the strong-armed lad to relay from the outfield.

The Cardinals are unusually strong in the throwing department of baseball and Street wants to get all possible benefit from the strong arms. Hafey, Douthit and Orsatti constitute a trio of excellent throwers and Street doesn't expect to see enemy base runners take any liberties with the Red Birds on hits to the outfield. Gelbert can rifle the ball on a line and he will help to cut off many runners at the plate.

In the afternoon there was a batting session, followed by an infield workout and then a run around the park before the boys took their showers and the rest of the day off.

Street announced that he had postponed the first appearance of Frankie Frisch until Monday. Tomorrow's game with the Indianapolis club of the American Association will be played at Sarasota and the infield there is not any too good, and Street doesn't want to run the risk of starting the Fordham Flash on a soft diamond, where he may pull a muscle or a tendon.

Frisch at Third Tomorrow.

Monday's game with the Phillies will be played at Bradenton and the diamond here is better than the average Floridan field. As told this morning, Frisch will be at third base and Adams at second and Street will use that combination through the balance of the spring training season and into the regular National League season as long as it functions as expected.

This can be taken as an indication that the Cardinals are stronger than last year in the infield. Street was not in favor of any change, because Andy High, especially in the early months of a campaign, is a great little third baseman. Last year he was among the leading hitters until midseason. Moreover, when Street saw Adams at Pittsburg, Sparky was not going so good. He was having trouble with double plays and was below par in the field and at bat.

"The boy had a bad leg," Street said this afternoon. "You can't throw or bat when one of your legs is weak. I know, because when I was catching in the American League, the baserunners could run wild on me when I had a bad leg. It prevents you from striding and you have to throw off balance. A bad leg will handicap an infielder, pitcher or catcher so much that a person in the stand will think the player has a sore arm.

This was especially noticeable in Adams' case when he tried to pivot at second on a double play. He has shown me that he can pivot and throw all right now and it's all because his props are sound again."

With Andy High available for reserve duty, the Cardinals will be strong in every department as soon as Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey buy or find another infielder of major league experience and ability. The player desired won't have to be a whale of a hitter, but he will have to be able to step in at second, short or third without weakening the Cardinals defensively. When Breadon and Rickey get around to that little job of providing the needed player, the Red Birds will be well fortified to make a real bid for the pennant.

And if the pitching comes through and there are no accidents, the team might even carry on with five infielders and make it tough for the Cubs to repeat.

Longer Stretches for Hurlers.

Manager Street will start Bill Hallahan against Indianapolis in tomorrow's game and if Bill finds his arm is strong enough he will be allowed to pitch five innings, with Clarence Mitchell making his season's debut and hurling the last four frames.

Herman Bell will start Monday against the Phillies and he also will travel five innings if his arm is strong enough, with Bill Sherdell scheduled to relieve him and finish the contest.

For ten days Street will use two pitchers in each game and then he will let the boys try to go nine innings, in the last few games in the South.

An extra game with the Rochester club has been scheduled by the Cardinals to be played at St. Petersburg Wednesday.

Fred Myers, infield, has departed for St. Louis via Plant City to undergo an operation on a trick knee, to be performed by Dr. Robert Hyland, who made a new man out of Ray Blades after his friends had given him up.

Lacoste and Cochet, Amateurs, Better Than Kozeluh, Pro Star, Tilden Says

"Money" Tennis Players Lack Variety of Amateurs —Richards Given Third Rank by Big Bill.

By William T. Tilden, II.

CANNES, France, March 22—The professional tennis championship at Beaulieu gave me an opportunity to study the class of tennis played by the leading professionals of the world and compare it with the best amateurs. Only Vincent Richards, Howard Kinsey and Harvey Snodgrass were missing, each of these means' games I know well. Certain facts were clearly brought out. The first and outstanding one is the difference between the class of tennis played by the pros of Europe and those of the United States. Only the three men I mentioned above, of all the pros in the United States, could stand for a minute against the standard of play shown at Beaulieu.

The interesting angle to this is that Richards, Kinsey and Snodgrass attained their skill as amateurs and turned professional after their ability was proved. Such men as George Agutter, Jimmy Burns, McNeal, Heston and Wood, excellent teachers though they are, are not in the same class, as players, with the average professional in Europe.

It is my belief that the reason this condition exists is due to the professional tournaments, of which Europe boasts quite a few. There is a chance for competition for these professionals, which the United States pros lack. Then the European professional is a far more scientific, experienced individual than most of our American pros. The majority of the European pros have grown up in tennis as ball-boys, assistant instructors and finally graduated to professional teachers. Only a few such thoroughly experienced men exist in the United States. The only outstanding figures are George Agutter, McNeal, Burns and George Agutters' former assistant, Heston. One cannot place such men as Richards, Kinsey, Snodgrass and Wesbrook in this class because they bring to pro-tennis an even more valuable asset, the experience gained in match play as amateurs.

Professionals Lack Variety.

The second thing which was brought clearly to my observation is the lack of variety in the professional style. All these men stand behind the base line and swap long, clean and beautiful, but monotonously mechanical drives, in uninteresting rallies of many shots each. It is always beautiful stroke technique, but there is no thrill to watching it. One sees no flashes of inspiration, no play of the imagination such as makes the game of Cochet or Borotra so delightful. It is more like watching Lacoste, but without Lacoste's variety of direction, length and pace. Do not misunderstand me. These professionals are fine tennis players. They are in the same class with the leading amateurs, yet I doubt if they would often beat the best amateurs because of this lack of inspiration and imagination.

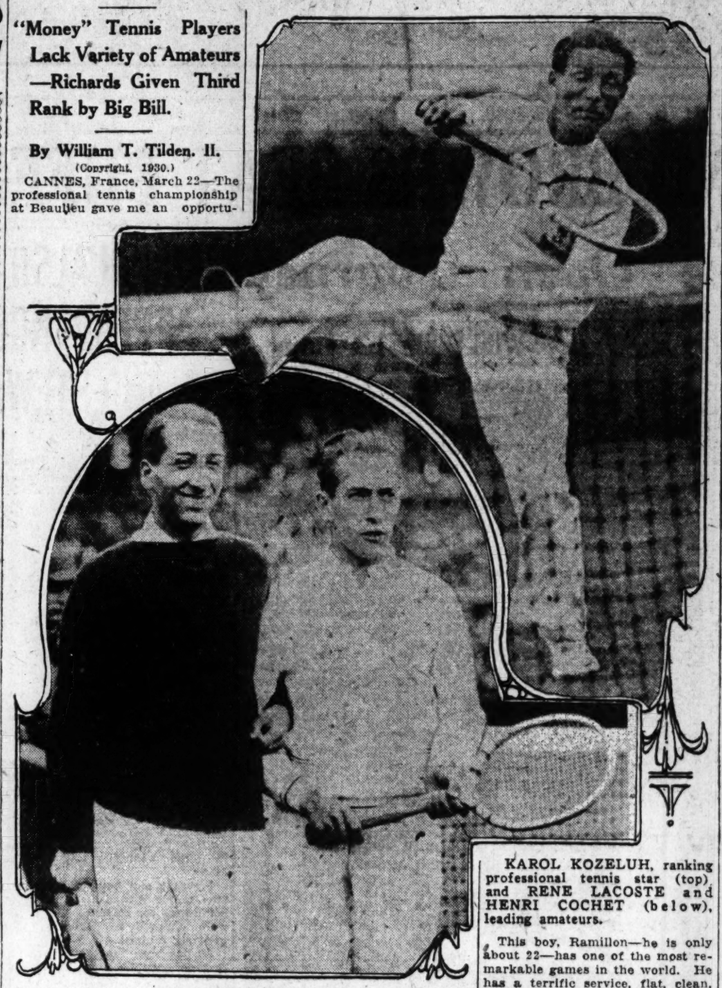
Karel Kozeluh is the outstanding player. Kozeluh is better than he has ever showed in the United States. Even so, he is not the best tennis player in the world. It is my opinion that Lacoste and Cochet are better, while Borotra, at his inspired best, would probably be so.

It is difficult to offer a sound ranking list for professionals, because of the fact that you have few direct comparisons in scores, and can only use your own judgment.

I am offering here a list based on my observation of the play of these men: 1, Karel Kozeluh; 2, Ramon Najuch; 3, Vincent Richards; 4, Ramillon; 5, Albert Burke; 6, Howard Kinsey; 7, Martin Plaa; 8, Harvey Snodgrass; 9, J. Burke; 10, A. Schmidt.

Ramillon Coming Player.

One cannot dispute Kozeluh's claim to first position. The next three men might almost be bracketed, but I consider Najuch slightly superior to the others. He has better ground strokes and his victory over Richards when they met some years ago must also be taken into consideration. Between Richards and Ramillon the records should give Richards a slight superiority, but after watching Ramillon's game I would pick him to beat Richards in a five-set match.



KAROL KOZELUH, ranking professional tennis star (top) and RENE LACOSTE and HENRI COCHET (below), leading amateurs.

This boy, Ramillon—he is only about 22—has one of the most remarkable games in the world. He has a terrific service, flat, clean, hard drives off both sides and can volley and smash with remarkable brilliancy. He has far more variety of game than any professional I have ever seen. His court covering is worthy of Kozeluh. Only in his match temperament does he lack. He is apt to blow up at the most unexpected moments, as he did when leading Kozeluh 3—0 and deuce in the first set at Beaulieu. However, Ramillon has only been playing tennis a comparatively few years, and his improvement is little short of phenomenal.

There is no way to justify my ranking list. I merely offer it as my opinion and not in any way to be considered as an accurate judgment of the ability of these men. Only I think it is.

Foreign Players for U. S. Open.

There is tremendous interest among all the professionals in the proposed open tournament. I had a long talk with Kozeluh about the United States open, and if it is held he assured me that he and his brother, Joseph, the Burke brothers, and probably Ramillon, Najuch and Plaa, will be over to compete. Should that group come and should Richards, Snodgrass, Kinsey and Westbrook play in the United States it will require the presence of Cochet, Lacoste and Borotra to give the amateur element a chance to hold back the pro invasion.

I watched the ethics of the tournament at Beaulieu closely and I have never seen finer sportsmanship shown throughout an event than that which characterized the professional meeting.

For the first time on all the many occasions I have watched pro tennis, I was convinced at Beaulieu that it can be and will be a real success. The open championship will be a step along the road of progress, and one which will meet public interest and approval; and I unreservedly state that I hope it will be held in the United States and that all this great group of European pro stars come to compete on our courts.

MRS. MIDA RETAINS FLORIDA GOLF TITLE

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 22.—Mrs. Lee Mida, Sterling Mount Plymouth, Fla., and Chicago golfer, will hold the Florida women's golf crown for at least another year.

She played through a steady downpour of rain today to defeat Mrs. John L. Holmes, Jacksonville, 5 and 4, in the final match.

Mrs. Mida, who will accompany Glenna Collett and her group of American golfers to England for the series of matches with English women stars, will not be able to defend her Florida crown next year unless she becomes a permanent resident of the State. This was brought about by action yesterday of the State's Women's Golf Association, which closed the tournament to all except residents of Florida.

HALL CLINCHES BILLIARD TITLE

seven games played and Shimon gained second place with four won and three lost, the tie in games won and lost being decided on the point basis.

J. N. Bozemen of Vallejo, Cal., won the National title in 1928 and Charles E. Jordan, was the winner in 1929. Jordan was disqualified for competing in the world's professional three cushion tournament and in the challenge match Max Shimon of Milwaukee was the winner.

Hall was born in San Francisco on July 7, 1886 and has been playing billiards for more than 30 years. He did not take competition seriously until nine years ago. In 1928 he finished second to Bozemen in the Pacific Coast Championship and last year was third to Jordan. He won all five games in the Pacific Southwest, qualifying tournament this year and took three more from Walter Lindsley of Mount Vernon, Wash., the Pacific Northwest champion, in the play-off for the Coast championship. Hall won by 150 to 125. He has won six straight here which brings his string of victories to 14 in a row.

WRAY'S COLUMN

joyed a thorough season by June 14 than by the middle of May, when the Kentucky Derby is scheduled, is a better race prospect.

A better test by better horses is the outlook for the Chicago feature.

A Wide-Open Race.

NOT in years has the Kentucky Derby presented such an uncertainty to the betting fraternity as this season's event, which sees three horses tied as favorites at 10 to 1. They are Gallant Fox, Dedicate and Desert Light. Gallant Fox receded from 8 to 1 into a tie with the other two named. Flying Heels, High Foot and Ned O are next choices at 12 to 1.

Spinach is at 15 to 1 and at 20 to 1 is Goneaway, with the others ranging on from 30 to 1 to 1000 in Tom Kearney's Big Store.

A 10-to-1 favorite is a rare bird in recent Derby-book history at any time, and this late in the campaign it is almost a complete novelty. Had Whichone entered he would be quoted at 2 to 1 and shorter, at this time.

Can't Blame Him.

PHIL BALL'S idea of the way to keep down the pernicious home run—namely by erecting screens in the outfield—failed to go over big with Jake Ruppert, of the Yankees. Having just signed a contract whereby Babe is to receive $160,000 to manufacture home runs for the Yankees, Jake could not reasonably be expected to do anything to handicap the Bambino. Might as well expect the owner of a string of race horses to vote for an anti-racing bill.

However, the 350-foot zone screen would do a lot to tighten up the ball game, and restore some of the features that have been gradually slipping out of the pastime, if that's the big idea.

It isn't such a sure thing that the public wants a return of 1—0 games. The tendency of popular appreciation is toward violence in smiting the opponent on the old apple. It is not likely that the fans of any sport will go back in the direction of science and skill, at the expense of the rough stuff.

Roughing the Rules.

"THE public wants the rough stuff," is a view expressed by Commissioner Seneca Taylor of the State Boxing Commission. And his view of the situation is endorsed by plenty of authorities.

But whether the public is entitled to have everything it wants, in this respect, is something else. There is no doubt that fans want thrills. Probably many persons would pay to see a machine gun duel between gang-land rivals, if one could be put on where admission could be charged.

Sooner or later violent exhibitions in sport lead to injury, disorder and even riot, with the eventual closing down of the game. Since the rules prohibit many of the practices seen in wrestling and perhaps in boxing bouts here, it might be well to head off trouble by making the events CONTESTS, and not exhibitions of the gentle art of mayhem.

Already the situation has developed one casualty—Referee Harry Sharpe, who has been under medical treatment for several weeks, the result of an assault following the Londos-Grobmeier match at the Coliseum. Sharpe was struck from behind, knocked down and struck across the face with a cane.

Such incidents seem to call for modification or repeal of the unlimited "rough stuff."

Basketball an Asset.

MISSOURI UNIVERSITY made more than $2000 on its basketball season, which puts this sport on record as the only other collegiate pastime except football to show a profit for the season. The profit is still small and will build no stadia for the universities of the country. But that the sport is self-sustaining is something.

The collegiate baseball season just opening will show only red ink on the balance sheet at its close. Strange as it seems baseball has never been a collegiate money-maker, although we still speak carelessly about baseball being our "national game."

Baseball has never fired the undergraduate nor the alumnus with the desire to travel long distances and shout himself hoarse from the grandstand. It lacks the electric thrill of the gridiron. College boys, their papas, mammas and sweethearts, seldom get excited about varsity baseball.

Japan Gets Excited.

AS a national game we are coming to believe that baseball belongs rather to Japan than to America. In Japan crowds of 50,000 turn out to see games when their Keio University nine plays Chicago or some other American University team. Try and get 50,000 Americans to view a game between Waseda and Chicago on the Maroons' diamond? Five thousand would be a turnout.

Better Manners.

IN Japan they not only produce the right kind of support for college baseball but they develop the right kind of sporting attitude among the spectators.

While American crowds at world's series games are not so partisan, prejudice still holds sway at many baseball contests played during the season.

In Japan the game's the thing. Good work is cheered no matter who delivers the goods. When an American college boy socked a home run with the bases filled to beat Keio, the 50,000 or so present gave the American boy an ovation.

In America they would probably cheer the Japanese boy, too, provided the home club had a safe lead.

STEIN AVERAGES 222 PINS, GAINS BUT 51 IN MATCH

Otto Stein Jr. shot 2229 in the fourth block of 10 games of his 60-game tenpin match with Joe Scribner of Detroit, at the Washington Alleys last night, but was able to pick up only 51 pins of the 982 lead which Scribner gained in the 30 games bowled at Detroit last week, so with but 20 more games to be rolled, Scribner has a lead of 931 pins.

Stein was in fine form last night, as his total indicates, but he had three rather poor games, at least poor for him, although seven of his 10 games were over the 200 mark. He reached his high mark in the eighth game when he shot 287.

Scribner totaled 2178, with a high game of 253 and a low mark of 187. Joe also had seven games over the 200 mark.

The pair will bowl 10 games at the Washington alleys this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and 10 more this evening at 8:30 o'clock, concluding the match.

Last night's scores:

SPRINGFIELD U. WINS MISSOURI STATE VOLLEYBALL TITLE

CARTHAGE, Mo., March 22.—Springfield Y. M. C. A. won the Missouri state volley ball championship tournament here tonight, defeating Kansas City, 15—12 and 15—10 in the final, after Kansas City had won the first of the three-game series, 15—6. The Kansas Cityans had gone through the tournament undefeated until the final and had defeated Springfield in a first-round preliminary.

Kansas City and Springfield both defeated St. Louis North Side Y in the semi-finals.

Downtown Y. M. C. A. of St. Louis, Sedalia, Joplin and Carthage were eliminated in preliminary play today.

State Pin Meet Closes Tonight

F. Dormstaedter and C. Puster bowled 1215 in the two-men event of the Missouri State Bowling Tournament last night at the Wellston Recreation Alleys. They are tied for fifth place. Dormstaedeter shot games of 227, 236 and 179 for a total of 642, while Puster got games of 165, 231 and 177 for 573. The pair had 860 at the finish of the second game but ran into splits galore in the final game.

K. Koforn and E. Baker were second high for the night with 1202, which placed them in eighth place. Koforn shot 573 and E. Baker 629.

Ray Newton did best in the singles, turning in a score of 647, which put him in eighth place. His games were 221, 179 and 247. F. Dormstaedter scored next high, 623, his scores being 191, 221 and 211.

The bowling in the doubles and singles will continue today, starting at noon and running all day until the final squad takes the drives at 9:15 tonight.

At noon the members of the Wellston Auto team will bowl their doubles and singles. They finished third in the five-man event with 2926. At 3:15, the Flints, with Fred Krems and Bus Wilson, will bowl. At 4 o'clock the members of the state champion five-man team, the South Side Chevrolets, will bowl doubles and singles.

BRUINS WIN SECOND STANLEY CUP GAME FROM MAROONS, 4-2

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, March 22.—The Boston Bruins won their second Stanley Cup series game from the Montreal Maroons here tonight by a 4 to 2 score. The champions of the American and Canadian division of the National Hockey League played a scoreless first period, but the Boston sextet scored three times in the second and once in the final. Both of the Montreal scores were made in the third period.

DE LA SALLE HIGH TO PLAY INDIANA FIVE IN CATHOLIC BASKET FINAL

De La Salle High, Chicago, 39, Bishop England High, Charleston, S. C., 20.
Jasper (Ind.) Academy 29; Spalding, Peoria, Ill., 18. (Overtime).

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 22.—De La Salle High of Chicago will defend its national Catholic basketball championship against Jasper (Ind.) Academy, in Loyola University gymnasium tomorrow night.

De La Salle, striking its best gait of the seventh annual championship tournament, tonight overwhelmed Bishop England High of Charleston, S. C., 39 to 20, while the scurrying band of Hoosiers earned a place in the championship game by defeating Spalding Institute of Peoria, Ill., 20 to 18, in a thrilling overtime encounter, for the other semi-final game.

Bishop England had established itself as a team likely to give De La Salle all kinds of trouble, but outmatched in size and all-around effectiveness, failed to get started against the Chicago team.

De La Salle led by 9 to 2 at the close of the first period, and was in front by 23 to 6 at the half. Big Ed Krause, a six-foot two running guard for De La Salle, set a new individual scoring mark for the tournament, 23 points, with 11 field goals and one free throw.

The Jasper five, playing any kind of basketball necessary, started with a delayed offensive, switched to a running game and finally went back to the delayed style in overcoming a fine Spalding team. Tiny Oscar Aubin, again was a big factor in Jasper's victory. He played most of the second, third and fourth periods, and contributed a field goal and a free throw in the scoring.

B. Joslyn 11—15, 18—15, 15—12 and 15—12 in the finals of the Class A squash racquets championship.

BASS ARRIV

BENNY WILL GO THROUGH FIRST LOCAL WORKOUT THIS AFTERNOON

Jack Tippett Put on Inactive List as Promoter

JACK TIPPETT, boxing promoter, has been placed on the inactive list by Commissioner Seneca Taylor until such time as Tippett has taken care of all outstanding financial obligations growing out of the promotion of boxing bouts here. When Tippett can show Taylor that this has been done, that he has a good card in prospect and has sufficient finances to handle it, Tippett will again be allowed to operate.

The March 25 date for the Coliseum which Tippett held and over which there has been some controversy has been canceled by Taylor and Tippett's April 8 date for the Coliseum transferred to Tommy Sullivan. The money which Tippett had advanced for rent for those two dates has been refunded to him.

By W. J. McGoogan.

Phil Glassman, Bass' manager, has been here for several days and has arranged for sparring partners for the champion, who is to go right to work with them today at the National Gymnasium. Bass is always in good condition, so about all he will have to do will be to sharpen up that powerful right hand.

Shea is to continue his work in the gymnasium today. Eddie has been busily engaged for several days, scuffing some of the local featherweights around in getting ready for Benny. Six rounds a day in the ring, in addition to other exercises, have been on Shea's program and he plans to keep up that clip until the day of the battle.

Eddie believes that he can knock the junior lightweight crown off Bass' head. Then he wants a shot at Battling Battalino, the featherweight title holder.

"I know Bass is a great fighter," Shea said yesterday as he was filling on his street clothes after boxing with Paul Steadman and Eddie Ghnouly at the gym. "But I think I can beat him, and of course I'll beat him, I mean knock him out."

Shea's Injured Hand Healed.

Shea went through a slump some time ago which caused many ringsiders to believe that he was through, but he blames the slump on a poor left hand, which had been hurt badly enough to require an operation. The big knuckle on the first finger was opened and the bone scraped. Shea claims the surgeon found a big bone splinter which had been giving his great chin every time he tried to use the hand. The removal of this trouble has made the hand strong again and has restored to Shea his best weapon, a powerful left hook.

Eddie has thrown enough left hooks at his sparring partners in the gymnasium here during the last few days to convince everyone that he has no fear of using the hand.

Promoter Tom Packs yesterday announced the card supporting the championship fight. All of the contestants will be in the featherweight or junior lightweight class. Davey Abad is to meet Marty Fields, of Chicago, in the semi-windup; Midget Mike Moran of Pittsburg and Johnny Kaiser are scheduled for ten rounds in the third event, while Augie Pisano of New York and Billy Wallace, Cleveland, are down for ten rounds in the second bout. Packs plans to match Joe Ghnouly with an opponent for a six-round curtain raiser. He had determined upon Mattie White but White is not in condition to fight just now.

Card Creating Interest.

The crowds that throng the gymnasium each day to see Shea go through his paces, indicat the interest which the title bout has attracted.

While the Bass-Shea bout has occupied the minds of boxing followers in St. Louis for the past month, even during the Carnera-Wiggins fight, it will not be the last here this season, for already Commissioner Seneca Taylor has awarded three dates for April which may develop important programs.

One of them has been allotted to Packs for The Arena, April 18, another to Mique Malloy about April 21, and another to Tommy Sullivan for April 8, the date formerly held by Jack Tippett.

DE LA SALLE HIGH TO PLAY INDIANA FIVE IN CATHOLIC BASKET FINAL

De La Salle High, Chicago, 30, Bishop England High, Charleston, S. C., 20.
Jasper (Ind.) Academy 20; Spalding, Peoria, Ill., 18. (Overtime).

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 22.—De La Salle High of Chicago will defend its national Catholic basketball championship against Jasper (Ind.) Academy, in Loyola University gymnasium tomorrow night.

De La Salle, striking its best gait of the seventh annual championship tournament, tonight overwhelmed Bishop England High of Charleston, S. C.; 32 to 20, while the scurrying band of Hoosiers earned a place in the championship game by defeating Spalding Institute of Peoria, Ill., 20 to 18, in a thrilling overtime encounter, for the other semi-final game.

Bishop England had established itself as a team likely to give De La Salle all kinds of trouble, but, outmatched in size and all-around effectiveness, failed to get started against the Chicago team.

De La Salle led by 9 to 2 at the close of the first period, and was in front by 23 to 6 at the half. Big Ed Krause, a six-foot two running guard for De La Salle, set a new individual scoring mark for the tournament, 23 points, with 11 field goals and one free throw.

The Jasper five, playing any kind of basketball necessary, started with a delayed offensive, switched to a running game and finally went back to the delayed style in overcoming a fine Spalding team. Tiny Oscar Aubin, again was a big factor in Jasper's victory. He played most of the second, third and fourth periods, and contributed a field goal and a free throw in the scoring.

BENNY WILL GO THROUGH FIRST LOCAL WORKOUT THIS AFTERNOON

Jack Tippett Put on Inactive List as Promoter

JACK TIPPETT, boxing promoter, has been placed on the inactive list by Commissioner Seneca Taylor until such time as Tippett has taken care of all outstanding financial obligations growing out of the promotion of boxing bouts here. When Tippett can show Taylor that this has been done, that he has a good card in prospect and has sufficient finances to handle it, Tippett will again be allowed to operate.

The March 25 date for the Coliseum which Tippett held and over which there has been some controversy has been canceled by Taylor and Tippett's April 8 date for the Coliseum transferred to Tommy Sullivan. The money which Tippett had advanced for rent for those two dates has been refunded to him.

Benny Bass, Philadelphia, world's junior lightweight champion, is scheduled to arrive here this morning to finish his training for the defense of his title at The Arena Friday night against Eddie Shea of Chicago.

Phil Glassman, Bass' manager, has been here for several days and has arranged for sparring partners for the champion, who is to go right to work with them today at the National Gymnasium. Bass is always in good condition, so about all he will have to do will be to sharpen up that powerful right hand.

Shea is to continue his work in the gymnasium today. Eddie has been busily engaged for several days, scuffling some of the local featherweights around in getting ready for Benny. Six rounds a day in the ring, in addition to other exercises, have been on Shea's program and he plans to keep up that pace until the day of the battle.

Eddie believes that he can knock the junior lightweight crown off Bass' head. Then he wants a shot at Battling Battalino, the featherweight title holder.

"I know Bass is a great fighter," Shea said yesterday as he was pulling on his street clothes after boxing with Paul Steadman and Joe Ghnouly at the gym. "But I think I can beat him, and of course by 'beat him,' I mean knock him out."

Shea's Injured Hand Healed.

Shea went through a slump some time ago which caused many ring followers to believe that he was through, but he blames the slump on a poor left hand, which had been hurt badly enough to require an operation. The big knuckle on the first finger was opened and the bone scraped. Shea claims the surgeon found a big bone splinter which had been giving his great pain every time he tried to use the hand. The removal of this trouble has made the hand strong again and has restored to Shea his best weapon, a powerful left hook.

Eddie has thrown enough left hooks at his sparring partners in the gymnasium here during the past few days to convince everyone that he has no fear of using the hand.

Promoter Tom Packs yesterday announced the card supporting the championship fight. All of the contestants will be in the featherweight or junior lightweight class.

Baby Abad is to meet Marty Fields, of Chicago, in the semi-windup. Midget Mike Moran of Pittsburg and Johnny Kaiser are scheduled for ten rounds in the third event, while Augie Pisano of New York and Billy Wallace, Cleveland, are down for ten rounds in the second bout. Packs plans to match Joe Ghnouly with an opponent for a six-round curtain raiser. He had determined upon Mattie White but White is not in condition to fight just now.

KRESS STARS IN 1930 DEBUT AS BROWNS WIN, 2-1

York, Chicago and Washington of the American League.

Manush, first time at bat scratched a puny hit off Mangum's glove, the ball rolling almost to the shortstop.

There was a peculiar force-play in the Browns' second. Caldwell was on first when Blue lined straight to Tucker in right. Tucker muffed the ball but his throw caught Caldwell, who had pulled up, easily at second.

When Sammy Hale doubled to score Schulte in the third, it was the ex-Philadelphian's first hit in 21 times at bat.

Manush retired after three innings of play, Bennett replacing him in left. Schulte also was rested, Badgro being his substitute.

Killefer instructs his young pitchers constantly. Every time Caldwell came in between innings, the Browns' leader was giving the kid hints on what to and what not to do.

Kress made a mid-season play in the first of the fifth. Barrett sent him a slow, mean roller which he took at full gallop and then threw underhanded to get his man.

Only three hits were made off Caldwell, who went five innings. One came in the first, and the other two in the fourth. He issued no passes.

Two of the first four Buffalo hits were made by Ollie Sax, who once wore a St. Louis uniform. He leads off for the International Leaguers and is said to be a fixture at shortstop.

For the second of the series tomorrow the announced pitchers are Johnny Ogden for the Browns and Fred Fussell, the southpaw who worked both for the Chicago Cubs and Pittsburg Pirates, for the Bisons.

Planski, the Buffalo outfielder, was a star fullback at Georgetown and also the winner of the United States decathlon championship.

Professional Golfers to Vote on Boosting St. Louis Open Prize Fund to $10,000

Art Longworth, president of the Missouri Professional Golfers' Association, who recently returned to the St. Louis Country Club from his winter vacation, announced yesterday that he would call a meeting of the professionals of the district soon to map out a program for the coming season.

Just what the program will include has not been determined but Ben Richter, Triple A professional, is to propose the formation of a professional league in the district to play a regular schedule each Sunday. Richter would have two foursomes play each week at a different club, have each player match cards with the other seven, award two points for a victory, one for a tie and keep a league standing until the end of the season when the player with the greatest number of points would win the professional championship of the district.

$10,000 St. Louis Open.

Another proposition which the professionals will consider, is the plan to provide a $10,000 purse for the St. Louis open tournament. The District Association, the amateur body, is known to be in favor of supporting such a plan in cooperation with the professionals.

Those in close touch with golf affairs are confident that if a date soon after the national open tournament, which is to be held at Minneapolis, is selected for the St. Louis open that many of the outstanding players of the country will be attracted by a $10,000 prize fund.

The District Association will hold its annual meeting in April, about the 15th, for the election of officers and the adoption of a program.

John J. Nangle, under whose direction the association had an active season last year, is almost sure to be re-elected president, while the other officers are also likely to be re-elected—Sid Le Gear, vice president, Abe Landecker, treasurer and Clarence Wolff secretary.

Wolff Recovering.

Wolff is recovering from his recent serious illness and it probably will be some time before he is able to take charge of the secretarial work himself, but C. W. Schnecko who is employed in Wolff's law office and who has worked with Clarence for some time on golf affairs, is prepared to carry on until such time as Wolff is ready to resume.

Regular greens are in use at most of the clubs in the district at this time, probably the earliest this has been true in many years.

Some slight changes have been made in the St. Louis Country Club course, a deep trap has been added to the left of No. 1 green, while No. 2 tee has been reduced in size.

Triple A has added aprons some 15 feet deep to its bent grass greens and has been experimenting with bent grass in its fairways.

Algonquin in Readiness.

Algonquin, always one of the best groomed courses in the district, appears as though it were the middle of June. Col. Goetz, who has charge of the course, also is experimenting with bent grass in the fairways.

Sunset Hill opened its regular greens on March 6, the earliest in its history.

John Manion, Sunset professional, returned this week from Florida.

Mrs. Margaret Ross has been appointed manager of Midland Valley Country Club to succeed her husband, Robert C. Ross, who died last year. Mrs. Ross had been an active assistant of her husband in the management of the club for a number of years.

Normandie is remodeling its clubhouse to provide more space and more facilities for the increase in membership expected under the new plan which the members recently voted permitting each bond-holding member to sign a playing member at $150 a year.

SHARPE AND TAYLOR SETTLE DIFFERENCES

Harry Sharpe, veteran boxing and wrestling referee, made peace with Seneca Taylor, Missouri boxing commissioner for the St. Louis District, yesterday. The two met and in cordial conversation misunderstandings arising from the rather hectic winter boxing season were swept away.

It is not certain that Sharpe will referee any bout at The Arena Friday night, as he is still suffering from an infection due to the whack he received from a spectator at a recent wrestling match, but as soon as he is physically fit he will resume his duties.

Ralstons Defeat Memphis Team

The Ralstons, St. Louis Industrial League champions, defeated the Memphis Light & Power team, industrial champions of Memphis, at the Armory last night, 25 to 20. It was the second successive victory for the Ralstons as they also won a game played at Memphis last week.

Two field goals, one by W. Huntington and the other by Linder, clinched last night's game for the Ralstons in the last minute of play for at that point the Memphis five was with na point of catching the St. Louis quintet.

Hedden led the scoring for the visitors with 13 points, scoring five field goals and three free throws. He was also high man for the game as Crider led the Ralstons with eight points, scoring four field goals.

In a preliminary game the Laclede-Christy five defeated the Quick Meals, 30 to 11.

St. Adelbert won the right to meet St. Edward by nosing out Visitation, 18 to 16. Snerek, left forward for St. Adelbert, scored 13 of his team's points, with six field goals and a free throw.

The finals will be played this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, after the consolation game between Holy Innocents and Visitation.

Basketball Netted Profit of $2000 At Missouri U.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 22.

FOR the third successive year basketball at the University of Missouri paid its own way and showed a profit, C. L. Brewer, director of athletics, announced today. Receipts from basketball in the season just closed were $10,437 and expenses were $8,126.

The profit of more than $2000 was the greatest in basketball history at the university. The receipts were divided almost equally between home games and those away. The games in Brewer Field House drew $5342, and for those away the Tigers received $5094. The largest home receipts were from the Kansas game and Field House dedication Feb. 21.

Attendance at basketball games here more than doubled, Brewer said, pointing to the increase in receipts, although the admission price was reduced one-half.

6th Corps Area Athletic Meet Opens Tomorrow

Sixty army athletes have gathered at Jefferson Barracks for competition for honors in the Sixth Corps arena athletic meet, which opens tomorrow and continues until Saturday night. More of the fighters and basketball players will arrive today for the premier athletic event of the year for the corps. The meet will be in session all this week with fighting and basketball sharing the limelight on alternate evenings, beginning with the first round of the basketball game on Monday evening.

Tuesday, preliminary bouts for the championships in eight classes of fighters will get under way. Several fighters known to fans of St. Louis and vicinity will display their wares. Three men who captured their weights in the championship bouts of last year will be defending their crowns, while some 40 other lusty pummelers will engage in a lively scramble for honors. Among the more prominent of the leather pushers are to be found Corporal Cummins, who has fought several fights in and around the city here, and is the present incumbent of the corps area middleweight class championship.

The first bout will start at 8:30 Tuesday evening. Arrangements have been completed to care for more than 3000 fans. Tickets can be purchased at the door.

Hill, Flyer Star, Is Named As Spare on All-Star Team Selected by Hockey Coaches

By the Associated Press.

DULUTH, March 22.—An all-star hockey team, selected by coaches and managers of five of the six teams of the American Hockey Association for the Associated Press, is made up of two players from four clubs, one each from Duluth and St. Louis, with two Duluth players tied for honors for the eleventh position, necessitating an aggregation including 12 men. Kansas City and St. Paul teams both had their two selections on the "starting" lineup.

No vote in the poll for the all-star team were submitted by the Tulsa club. Officials of the Kansas City, St. Paul, Duluth, St. Louis and Minneapolis teams each submitted eleven players for the all-star aggregation, with first and second choice for defense and forward positions. A tie for the seventh forward player resulted in a dozen men being placed on the mythical sextet.

A total of 26 players were named by the coaches and managers in submitting their choices, including three for goal, seven for defense, three for center and 13 for wing posts.

Goheen Gets Highest Vote. . .

Frank "Moose" Goheen, the veteran defense star for St. Paul, was signally honored in the selections by receiving the highest number of first choice votes, getting four ballots for the defense post. The selection of Goheen was made on the strength of his participation in games only at the three Northern rinks, as he did not play in games at Tulsa, St. Louis or Kansas City.

Paddy Byrne, the husky guardian of the Kansas City club, was picked as goalie on the all-star team, getting three votes, while Verne Turner of Duluth was second, with one first and two second choice votes. Joe Stark, the nimble custodian of the nets for St. Paul, polled a single first choice vote.

Bob Davis, captain of the Duluth club, was given the second defense position, with Burr Williams, the youthful Tulsa star, ranking third. Davir received two first-place votes, while Williams polled one first and four second choice ballots. The two star defensemen of the Pia-Mors, Burt McCleod and Slim Halderson, were tied for fourth place, each receiving one first and one second place vote.

While coaches and managers placed the name of Pete Mitchell, the clever stick-handler of the Pia-Mors, in a center position, getting two first and two second votes for that position, he is rewarded with a wing post, ranking second in the balloting among forwards. Vic Des Jardins, the "spark plug" of St. Paul's team, copped the center position honor with a total of three first and one second choice ballots.

Hill Is Spare Forward.

Gus Marker, whose play during the season was one of the outstanding features of the Tulsa champions, polled the largest number of votes of any of the wing candidates, getting three votes for first selection and one for second choice. A tie existed for second honors among the wings between Bobby Burns of Minneapolis and Billy Hill of St. Louis, both of whom are listed as "spare" forwards on the all-star team. Burns and Hill each received two first choice votes and a second.

Another tie existed when the selection was made for "spare" forwards. "Red" Green and Laurie Scott, both of Duluth, each being given two second choice votes for forward berths. "Red" Stuart, manager of the Minneapolis Millers, ranked next to Burns and Hill in the "spare" list. The extra "spare" player for the all-star team was necessitated when Scott, whose position is center, polled two second choice votes for that berth.

Others who were given one vote each for forward posts included Campbell and Scott, Kansas City; Wakeford, Tulsa; Wilson, St. Paul, and Merrill and Forslind, Duluth. Mike Goodman, Duluth, received one first choice vote for wing, while Ray Powley, St. Louis, had one second choice ballot. Charley Langlois, Duluth, got one first choice vote for defense while Andy Mulligan, the big St. Paul player, was given one second place selec-

GATES IS NAMED GOLF DICTATOR BY "PRO" BODY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Baseball has its commissioner; the movie industry has its general director, and now comes the golf dictator.

Albert R. Gates of Chicago, long a leader in official golfing circles, today was made administrator of golf by the Professional Golfers' Association, an organization of 2202 leading golf instructors who govern the play on nearly half of the 5649 golf clubs in the United States. The organization under the administration of Mr. Gates, plans to enroll all the 3158 professional golfers in the country and to seek a voice in all affairs of the game.

Commissioner Gates and his cohorts, far from planning any revolt from the constituted authorities of golf, such as the United States Golf Association, will work hand-in-glove with those bodies in keeping the game clean and sportsmanlike.

Was President of W. G. A.

The new arbiter has the qualifications gained in heading the Western Golf Association four times as president, in 1907 and 1908 and again in 1921 and 1922, as well as in being secretary in 1906. He has been a prominent lawyer for many years and is now a director in three banks. He was president of Calumet Country Club 25 years ago, but is now connected with Skokie Country Club, on whose links Gene Sarazen won the national open title several years ago.

While head of the W. G. A. Gates often found himself in opposition in a friendly way with the United States Golf Association, but several of the ideas he fought for were later adopted by the national body and one of them recently by Great Britain. This was authorization of steel shafts for golf clubs. When the metal shafts were first produced the U. S. G. A. and St. Andrews turned thumbs down on them, declaring them mechanical aids.

W. G. A. Has Progressed.

But Gates said he would find out before condemning the innovation. So he and the Executive Committee of the W. G. A. took Bob MacDonald, Jock Hutchison, Chick Evans and a few other expert golfers to Edgewater Club and had them drive several balls with both hickory and steel shafts. The results convinced President Gates and members of the Executive Committee that the steel shafts were not great to produce good shots from poor swings, and they were admitted to tournament play. Later, the U. S. G. A. accepted the metal shafts and more recently the British removed the ban.

Queerly enough, the metal shafts were opposed at first by the professionals, who have now chosen Gates as their dictator. They felt that part of their professional work would be supplanted by using metal shafts, but it did not turn out that way, as they were able to sell just as many clubs without having to make them by hand. Many professionals and such amateur stars as Bobby Jones still prefer hickory sticks for feel and distance.

The Professional Golfers' Association has been progressing for many years, especially of late under the presidency of Alex Pirie of Old Elm Club, Chicago.

NEW ORLEANS, March 22.—Over a heavy track, Klingstone, with Cimerak up, scored in a gallop in the Proteus Handicap, which featured the card here today. The Reuter Stable's Galahad, favorite, was second and By Product third. The result of this race caused the small crowd to boo Palumbo, who rode Galahad, as he returned to the scales.

Galahad is a superior mudder, but the boy allowed him to drop far back in the first seven furlongs. He was at one time fully ten lengths back of the leader, Klingstone, but when it was too late Galahad came with a rush and was fast wearing Klingstone down. However, Klingstone won by five lengths while Galahad beat By Product one and a half lengths for the place. The winner paid $8 for $2.

Favorite II Wins First.

Favorite II made a show of his field in the opening event when he galloped in front from the start and won by five lengths. Sweepstakes was second and Bunthorne third. Ball Gee, the favorite, ran a good race under poor handling and finished fourth. Favorite II never left the result in doubt after the rise of the barrier, leading by five lengths from the start. The track was again a sea of mud. Favorite II paid $17.60 for a $2 ticket.

Laura Negley, well played and showing improvement over recent races, led home a fair field of juveniles in the second event at 3½ furlongs. Rare Charm was second and Right Now third. Laura Negley ran right to the front and, making the pace, won by a length. Rare Charm beat Right Now one and one-half lengths for the place. The time was :45.

VICTORIAN

RAIN OR SHINE OUTLASTS MUD TO WIN SPRINT

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 22.—Rain or Shine, carrying the silks of Mrs. T. W. O'Brien, upset the well laid plans of the form pickers today, when he won the Elks' Club Handicap over five and one-half furlongs at St. John's track, near here.

The popular little Jockey "Buddy" Dainty was in the saddle with the result that the 3-year-old son of Pluvious only paid $3.35 for one dollar, being the third choice in the wagering. In a typical Dainty ride, the mite of a Canadian rider brought Rain or Shine up from behind in the stretch to defeat Mud from the Justa Farm Stable by a half length. The latter led the speedy Jack Howe by a length and a half. False Pride, the favorite, was sixth in the field of seven.

Ken Williams Is Unconditionally Released by Yanks

By the Associated Press.
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 22.

THE New York Yankees today gave Outfielder Ken Williams his unconditional release. The 37-year-old veteran, who was picked up at the close of the 1929 season from the Boston Red Sox by the waiver route, plans to return to his home in Grant's Pass, Ore., and hopes to make connections with a Pacific Coast League club.

training well. His speed tests have been good and he appears to be a colt of some class.

Alex Gordon is going along carefully with the Fair Stable pair at Douglas Park. Desert Light and Sarazen II have had no mishaps in training to date. Both have done the half mile in around :50, and three-quarters in 1:16.

Gallant Knight, the Audley Farm Stable's Derby hope, showed in a move at the Downs that he had been "legged up" well at the Virginia farm of his owner before shipment. The veteran trainer, Kay Spence, who is handling Gallant Knight, considerers his chances of winning the classic very good.

By Dent McSkimming.

Denied the honor of calling themselves city champions, since they met defeat at the hands of Tablers, the Kolster soccer team today will endeavor to become at least amateur champions of Missouri. The Sueme team of Kansas City is here to dispute the title in a game at Fairground Park. A second match will be played at Kansas City.

The admission charge will be 50c to see today's game. Under the law, admission can be charged only three games each season, and the quota has already been exhausted, leaving the choice interesting game open to a free gate.

Kansas City has tried for many years to wrest the State amateur championship from St. Louis, and last three years ago raised the colors of its football to a point where St. Louis is no longer a sure-thing winner. The Sueme team played here last season, losing to the South Sides.

No changes are contemplated by Manager Jim Fitzgerald in the Tabler lineup. There were glaring weaknesses apparent in the Tabler game last Sunday, but it is questionable whether any marked improvement could be made by switching players at this late date. Willie Miller, who has been a field official in the Municipal Soccer League since the first year of the organization, 1912-13, will referee today. He will have as linesmen Willie Brady and Nick Reidy, both former professional league stars.

The play will start at 2:30 p. m. and the halves will be 45 minutes each.

SPORT SALAD by L. D. Frisch

The New Planet.

TWINKLE, twinkle little planet,
Though no naked eye can scan it.
Up above the world so high,
Wonder if you're wet or dry.

Wonder who is living there,
Wonder what they eat and wear;
In that new discovered place
Wonder if there's parking space.

Wonder what the people think,
Wonder if they ever drink;
Are the people casting straws
On the prohibition laws?

Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
Now we know just where you are;
Still we wonder more and more
Where you kept yourself before.

Show Us.

If they're seeking a name for the new planet, why not call it "The Mysterious Stranger?" Being from Missouri, we'd like to see it.

The name of Percival has been suggested in honor of the founder of the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, but doubtless there would be a tendency to cheapen the new member of the planetary family by calling it Percy.

But why worry over a name. Just refer the matter to the gents who name the sleeping cars and apartment buildings, and they'll give it a label that will stick.

If John N. Willys had been named Ambassador to England instead of Poland he might have been Knighted.

Bowing to Casey Jones.

"Senate Begins Inquiry Into Unemployment."

THE situation had become intense,
The U. S. Senate, sparing no expense,
Then formed a committee to investigate
And started out at a terrific rate.
They called for witnesses and facts galore,
And kept on probing for a year or more
While the unemployed heaved a sigh and said:
"We're going to get employment, but we'll all be dead!"

Say It With Flowers.

The man on the sandbox says when Thomas Edison perfects his process for making rubber out of goldenrod, he'll turn out a tire that's not to be sneezed at.

We wouldn't be surprised some day to see dog fennel used for some other purpose than flying kites.

We don't doubt that if Mr. Edison put his mind on it, he could make a pretty fair weed chain out of jimson weeds.

Those optimistic gents who are sending in their orders for cases of beer for future delivery should bear in mind that straw votes change no laws.

Kojac Equals Two Collegiate Swimming Marks

By the Associated Press.
NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 22.—Record-breaking performances by George Kojac, Rutgers, and Capt. John Howland of Yale and the upset defeat of the Rutgers' Flash in the 50-yard event by Howland and Messimer, also of Yale, today marked the finals of the twenty-fourth annual individual championships of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association held in Carnegie pool.

Howland successfully defended his title in the 50-yard sprint against his teammate, Messimer, and Kojac by clipping two-fifths of a second off the national intercollegiate record of 23 3-5 seconds. Kojac, however, partly made up for his surprising defeat in this event by winning the titles in the 100-yard swim and the 220.

The only man to capture two championships, the Rutgers' star, equalled the national intercollegiate record of 52 4-5 seconds in the 100-yard sprint to take that title away from Howland. Kojac also established a new intercollegiate Swimming Association record in winning the 220-yard event, covering the distance in 2:18 3-5. The old Association record of 2:22 2-5 was made by Howland in winning the title last year. The Eli captain did not defend his title in this event.

The finals produced another surprise in the defeat of Brooks, Princeton, defending champion in the dive, by Grundy of Pennsylvania, who won first place, and W. Manuel of Yale, who won second place.

Moles of Princeton retained his title in the 220-yard breast stroke, while Wohl, Syracuse, and Ruddy of Columbia succeeded to the titles in the 150-yard backstroke and the 440-yard swim, respectively. Both these titles were held by Kojac, who did not participate in the events.

Spring Exhibitions Do Not Give Real Line on Strength Of Clubs, McGraw Declares

By John J. McGraw
Manager New York Giants.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 22.—If practice ball games in the spring were conducted and played on the same principle as those in the championship season it would be possible to get a fairly good line on league prospects before the gong sounded in April. Such, however, is not the case.

A number of corresponding fans or friends have asked me why it is that a big league ball club may win or lose a big majority of its exhibition games and then get a result almost directly opposite, once the regular season starts.

John J. McGraw

All managers and all players like to win, of course. In fact, that is a most necessary spirit to cultivate. The wise manager, however, pays more attention to rounding his team into form as a machine than to the actual score of the practice games. For example, you will note that in the early games the regular star pitchers are beaten with more consistency than the youngsters. That is because the experienced pitcher is more intent upon getting his wind and his control perfected than in trying actually to fool opposing batters. The youngster, on the other hand, is so eager to make a good showing that he forgets the future entirely and puts everything he has on the ball. Each appearance means a lot to him. It is his one chance to attract attention.

Will Not Use Speed.

A successful season means so much to the regular player, financially and otherwise, that he will take no chances on getting hurt or straining a muscle before he has to use them in a game that means something. In a game between the White Sox and Giants the other day, for illustration, there were an unusual lot of double plays. Several writers pointed this out as a big feature. As a matter of fact, several of these double plays would not have been possible had the hitters elected to put on speed in running out his hit. They knew that a jerked muscle or a pulled tendon might put them out for weeks when the immediate double play meant nothing. It is rare that a veteran player will use speed until he has been in training for at least a month. That is why these early games give the fans back home so many wrong impressions.

Reading the telegraphic reports of an exhibition ball game, the fan back home often gets a picture that is often out of focus. Many runs are scored that would be impossible in mid-season. The one thing a regular outfielder has to guard against is injury to his throwing arm. Until a player is in good physical condition an attempt at a long throw to the plate might hurt his arm so that it couldn't be used for a month or so. Consequently, a runner is usually allowed to score from third on a long or short fly, and a single will send most any man home from second.

How It All Works Out.

Just the same, we all know that the fans are impressed by the results of these exhibition games. They want to see their own team win all the time, just as I do. But they will make a mistake in picking pennant winners on the games in the South.

One spring, if you will remember, the Boston Braves won something like eight out of 10 of the first games from the Yankees, and were heralded as a coming outfit. When the veteran players of the Yanks got set, however, they went right ahead and won their pennant, while the Braves finished far down.

Here is an illustration of how it works out: In a game against the White Sox recently, Fred Fitzsimmons was pitching for us. He had enough control to get the ball over the plate, but he couldn't work the corners, nor could he use his best stuff, on account of a chilling wind. He was hit for enough line drives to net the Sox seven runs in an inning. Even so, I sent him right back the next inning to see if he could work out the trouble. Eventually he did.

Now, in the regular season, I would never have kept him in that long. The working out of his arm, however, was of more importance than winning the game. That is what teams are down here for.

By the way, the White Sox seem to be a very much improved ball club. Donie Bush has given them a real fighting spirit. He has made a masterful move to in putting Cissell at second. The fans of the South Side of Chicago are very apt to have a team for which they can really root this season. Bush has a line-up of hitters that will give any pitcher trouble.

Catcher Wilson Rates Frisch Best Man in League and Says Adams Will Help Cardinals

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 22.—Confidence in their own ability is one asset that the Cardinals will have when they start their drive for the 1930 National League pennant. Many baseball men have conceded the championship to the Cubs in advance but the Red Birds believe in themselves and consider the Chicago organization as just another good club that must be beaten in the race for the honors.

It is as easy to understand the Cardinal confidence as it is to see why the many baseball experts have relegated the Red Birds to fourth place at best or possibly a berth in the second division. Taking the pessimistic view first, it is true that the Cardinals finished a bad fourth last season and that they have not added any outstanding stars to the roster. Therefore the critics may be excused if they figure that the Cards can't possibly do better than fourth in the next struggle.

But that isn't the way the St. Louis athletes look at the situation. They remember that as late as last June 27 they were out in front, ahead of the Cubs and ahead of the Giants and ahead of the Pirates, and they think that if it had not been for a collapse of the pitching staff, they would have stayed out ahead of those teams and would have engaged the Athletics in the world series.

Pitchers Will Be Better.

"They're just silly if they count us out of this race," Jimmy Wilson told the Post-Dispatch correspondent. "I've seen a lot of weak teams and a good many strong ones and believe me, the Cardinals look like the money to me. Our pitching staff just wasn't in shape last year, we got a few bad breaks and first thing we knew we didn't have a pitcher we could depend on. But we still had a great ball club.

"Now we've got Adams to protect us in the infield and he's a great help. He's a sure fielder and a dangerous little batter. Then our outfield is stronger. Last year we didn't have enough outfielders. This season it's going to be tough for Gabby to decide which men to keep.

"Watch the pitching staff, too. The boys are in the best shape I ever saw a staff four weeks before the start of a race. The pitching power is there and I can't see how we can miss getting it with all the good men available. I look for Haines and Sherdel to come back strong and we'll get a lot of help from the new pitchers.

"Frisch is going to have a great year, too. He was handicapped during the late weeks of 1929, but he had a couple of operations and just watch him. Say, I consider him the greatest ball player in the league. There isn't anything he can't do. He's the best base runner in the league, the best fielding second baseman, the best man in either league at pop flies, the best turn-around hitter in either league and he is a great team man. Frisch and Gelbert form the best infield combination in either league and you'll see all the experts singing a different song along toward midseason. They'll be saying that they hadn't counted on the great improvement in Gelbert and that they didn't figure our old pitching staff would show so much life."

Needs More Infielders.

Manager Street also insists that his team is sound and of real championship timber. He admits that he needs more infield strength, even if only in the firm of reserve material. And he indicates that every effort will be made to obtain another infielder, an experienced man. But even with that admitted weakness, Gabby refuses to see the Cards as anything but a great team.

"I'm not saying that just as a matter of policy," Street told the writer. "You know I talk straight from the shoulder and I'll never feed you any bunk or baloney. If I thought we were a second-division club I certainly wouldn't tell you I thought we might win a pennant. And I really believe we have an excellent chance. If we don't run into accidents or sickness, the Cards will be in the race right down to the finish."

It really is an asset for Street and the Cardinals to feel that way. Ask any manager and he'll tell you that he would like to have his men believe they're good.

It All Helps the Club.

Ask Burt Shotton. William Baker, owner of the Phillies, complained to Burt that never before had he had so many holdouts.

"No," Shotton told him. "And that's because never before did you have so many good ballplayers."

"I'm glad that some of my boys held out," Shotton told newspaper men. And he went on to explain that it showed that they realized every effort will be made to obtain every effort will be made to obtain another infielder, an experienced man. But even with that admitted weakness, Gabby refuses to see the performances.

ST. LOUIS U. HIGH TO HAVE VETERAN BASEBALL TEAM

With the official opening of the Prep League baseball season set for April 16, all teams in the circuit, with the exception of Country Day, already have started practice. Country Day probably will swing into action late this week.

Of the various league outfits, St. Louis U. High seems best supplied with veteran material. Coach Ed McCarthy will have three experienced moundmen, Hanson, "Babe" Connors and Hummell, and one veteran receiver, Krygiel. Stiebel, a squad man of last year, will also be available for the catching job. Lee Murray, shortstop, Schultehenrick, third base, Tom Haririck, second base, and Joe Connors, Pat McCann and "Port" Minette, outfielders, will be filling positions which they held down last season. If he can find a good first sacker, and possibly an extra pitcher, catcher and outfielder, McCarthy should be set for a big season.

McBride, the defending champions, suffered their severest loss when Emmet Mueller, all-star shortstop in 1929, quit school to play professional baseball. The veterans who will don uniforms again this year are Powell, all-star catcher, "Took" Durbin, all-star pitcher, Jim Durbin, second base, and Kaveney and Berger, outfielders.

At C. B. C. Coach Jack O'Reilly lost an excellent battery in Murphy, hurler, and Lamb, receiver. John Duvic will again twirl for the Brothers, but O'Reilly will have to find a new catcher. The infield, with the exception of Rust, second base, will be back. Lou McHenry will work at first base, with Kelly at short and McDonald at third. Paul Braudrick will probably get an opportunity at second, as will Foley. Bob Fuchs and McKeone will handle their garden posts again this season.

Coach Holmes has had his men out for several days but the prospects are somewhat uncertain. Capt. Smith, pitcher and outfielder, Silva, outfielder, and Bruno, second sacker, are the only men back from the 1929 squad, and no new men of outstanding ability have yet shown themselves. At Country Day examinations will prevent Coach McAllister from giving his charges their first workout until the end of the month.

The league schedule:
April 16—Western M. A. at McBride.
April 18—C. B. C. at St. Louis U. High.
April 19—Country Day at Western M.A.
April 22—McBride at C. B. C.
April 23—Western M. A. at St. Louis U. High.
April 26—Country day at St. Louis U. High; C. B. C. at Western M. A.
April 29—St. Louis U. High at McBride.
May 2—Country Day at C. B. C.; McBride at Western M. A.
May 6—McBride at Country Day; St. Louis U. High at C. B. C.
May 9—St. Louis U. High at Country Day.
May 13—C. B. C. at McBride.
May 14—Western M. A. at Country Day.
May 17—St. Louis U. High at Western M. A.
May 20—Country Day at McBride.
May 21—Western M. A. at C. B. C.
May 23—McBride at St. Louis U. High.
May 27—C. B. C. at Country Day.

PESEK'S COLLAR BONE DISLOCATED, TWO PHYSICIANS ASSERT

By the Associated Press.
LINCOLN, Neb., March 22.

AFTER undergoing an examination here with State Boxing Commissioner Ira Vorhies present, John Pesek, "Nebraska Tigerman" wrestler, today was found by two examining physicians to have a dislocated collar bone.

Pesek suffered the injury in a fall from a horse while training for his April 9 match at Columbus, O., with Jim London, Greek champion. Pesek left immediately afterward for a visit in Excelsior Springs, Mo.

Commissioner Vorhies conducted the examination at the request of Stanley Isaacs, president of the National Boxing Association, who suspected Pesek of trying to "run out" of the match. Pesek will not forfeit his $5000 bond, Commissioner Vorhies said.

29 SKATERS ENTER ICE MARATHON, APRIL 1

The entry of Ford Hatfield of the Stoners Athletic Club, Detroit, brings the total number of entrants for the Missouri State ice marathon to be held at the Winter Garden April 1, up to 29. Chief among the local entrants are Harry Furman, Otto Brands and Harry Lang.

SOCCER TEAMS IN REPLAYS IN TITLE SERIES

Soccer clubs in the East and West will make another effort this afternoon to decide the divisional championships in the United States Football Association race. In the Eastern sector, Fall River and Bethlehem will meet in a return match at New Bedford, Mass. The Western battle will see the Bruella Hungarian-Americans of Cleveland and Holleys of Detroit play at Cleveland.

The four teams met last Sunday with each contest resulting in a 1-to-1 draw after overtime periods had been played. According to reports from Detroit, where the Western match was played, the contest was a poor exhibition of soccer. The Eastern tilt, which drew a crowd of 15,000 persons, was hard-fought and well played from start to finish.

Arsenal Held to A Tie in British Soccer Semifinal

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, March 22.

THE semifinals of the English Football Association cup competition were played today, resulting as follows:

Sheffield Wednesday, 1; Huddersfield Town, 2 (at Manchester).

Arsenal, 2; Hull City, 2 (at Leeds).

The Arsenal eleven, held to a tie in its match with Hull City, is scheduled to make an exhibition tour of the United States in May and June and will without a doubt visit St. Louis. In defeating Sheffield Wednesday, Huddersfield Town eliminated the "bookies" favorite to capture the British championship.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

WHAT EAGLE SCOUT CANDIDATES MUST DO

Required to File Applications Before Tuesday Evening, Then Appear Before Board.

Candidates for advancement to the rank of Eagle Scout must file applications at boy scout headquarters, 505 Chemical Building, before next Tuesday evening if they wish to receive their promotion, and obtain the badge of their new rank, at the Spring City Court of Honor April 19, according to William Puffer, educational director of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council. In addition, the applicants must appear before the Eagle board of review, which will ascertain if they have met the requirements at headquarters, either April 7 or 8.

Applications for Star, Life and Eagle Palm badges to be awarded at this court also must be filed this week, Puffer continued, next Saturday noon being the latest time they will be accepted. All candidates, including those for Eagle Scout, also must file a special form containing the names and addresses of four references at the same time their applications are turned in. These forms may be obtained from headquarters.

The spring court, which will award only the badges mentioned, plus any merit badges necessary for a scout to obtain the higher rank, will be held at the Scottish Rite Temple.

Applications for troop courts of honor, at which the troop itself presents second class, first class and merit badges, also are being received now at headquarters. To hold a troop court, it is necessary to file notice in advance, together with a list of the awards that are to be presented, and a certification that the necessary requirements for a court of honor are carried out.

Among the latter are the attendance at the court of at least three members of the troop, district or city court of honor, and the personal attendance of the scout at the presentation. Badges for these troop courts may be obtained from headquarters at the time of filing the application.

More Than 100 Enrolled in Leaders' Training Course.

More than 100 scoutmasters, troop committeemen and other Boy Scout officials enrolled in the three classes of the St. Louis Scoutleaders' Training Course started by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council last week, according to William Puffer, educational director of the council. Of this total, 63 are members of the "Elements of Scoutmastership," the class for men inexperienced in scouting; 24 are in the First Aid class, and 17 are enrolled in the Swimming class.

The training course is one of a series conducted by the council to train men both in the principles of troop leadership and in the different scouting activities. The courses are held twice yearly, in the spring and early winter, certificates being awarded to men completing the requirements.

The second meeting of the Elements class will be held at the Michael School tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock. Field Executive M. N. Leavitt, who is scoutmaster of the course, will still accept enrollments tomorrow evening. He has issued a warning that members of the course must be on time, or their patrol will lose points in the inter-patrol contest that is being carried on.

The second meeting of the first aid course will be held at the Washington University Medical School also tomorrow evening. As the membership limit of this class has nearly been reached, no further registrations will be accepted after tomorrow.

The course in swimming will hold its second meeting at the Principia pool Tuesday evening, under Commodore Flint, former field executive of the South District, who has been lent to the class by the Red Cross. New members will be accepted in the class at this meeting, but as attendance at five sessions is required for a certificate, and the course consists of only six, no additional members will be enrolled after this meeting.

A course in Crafts, which was scheduled to be held at the Boy Scout Handicraft Center in the Missouri Theater Building, has been discontinued, as the enrollment at the first meeting last week was too small to justify giving the course.

Scout leaders who were members of former training courses but who failed to obtain certificates because they had not attended the required number of meetings, are privileged to recoup by attending the meetings they missed in the former course. In this way they will become eligible for certificates.

Troop Notes

South District.

Definite plans for a Deputy Commissioner organization for the South District were made at a meeting of the prospective members at local Scout headquarters last Tuesday. Final details have not been arranged, but 10 men have been selected so far as Deputy Commissioners: Emil Hegwood, O. F. Semon, Joseph McNamee, B. N. Edmondson, E. A. Kleykamp, Homer H. Schroeder, R. T. Shepherd, J. C. Metzger, E. A. Mikiseck and Robert L. Spohr.

Troop 27, of the Grant School, reregistered with 18 scouts last week. Scoutmaster J. E. Lantz, who has been absent some time because of illness, has returned to leadership of the troop. Plans for participation in the Camparall, and for a spring and summer program, were made at the meeting.

Troop 34, of the Shenandoah School, will hold a Parents' Night at the school Tuesday evening. A number of scout demonstrations will be given, and a talk on camp will be made by Field Executive C. H. Laemmli. An invitation to attend the meeting has been extended to all scouts in the neighborhood, in addition to the parents of scouts Troop 34.

A reorganization meeting was held by Troop 41 of the Clifton Heights Church last Thursday evening. Eighteen scouts were present, and all signified their intention of reregistering with the troop this month.

The new scout troop being organized at Jefferson Barracks under Scoutmaster E. P. Humphrey and Chaplain Trett of the post is now meeting regularly. This troop recently held its first Parents' Night, to which fathers and mothers of the prospective scouts were invited.

North District.

A new patrol, composed entirely of recruits, has been organized by Troop 1 of the Benton School. The entire remainder of the troop is working to assist the new scouts' advance in rank. The Mothers' Auxiliary of the troop met at the home of Mrs. R. B. Deason last Monday afternoon. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. E. Freeman April 14.

Scoutmaster Simons gave a talk on "Merit Badges" to the scouts of Troop 3 of the Grace Holy Cross Church, at the meeting last week, while Assistant Scoutmaster Morris and Senior Patrol Leader Thompson spoke on "Passing Tests." Instruction in tenderfoot and second class tests and in patrol hikes was given and several scout games were played.

An Older Boys' Club has been organized among the older scouts of Troop 122 of Sherman Park Community Center, under the sponsorship of the Troop Mothers' Club. To join the club, a scout must be at least 15 years old, be of Star Scout rank or higher, and have accomplished the Junior Leader standard. Eight scouts are charter members of the club.

Suburban District.

Patrol Leader Wayne Harrish's Lion patrol is tied with Patrol Leader John Moore's Eagle patrol for first place in an inter-patrol contest conducted by Troop Marvin Park 1. This is the first inter-patrol contest this troop has ever held. The scoutcraft of the troop has improved noticeably since the start of the contest, and the troop is planning to take part in an inter-troop contest that will be held in the Overland district soon.

Troop Richmond Heights 1 has a new scoutmaster, K. B. Buchanan. This troop meets at the West Richmond Heights School on Wednesday evenings.

West District.

A rope-tying contest between troop members and a talk on First Aid by Frank Birge were events at the meeting of Troop 2 at Pilgrim Congregational Church last week. A number of Tenderfoot tests were passed at the old tourist camp in Forest Park the next day, on a hike which was attended by about half the membership. Each scout cooked his own dinner at the camp.

Scouts Bob Gartside and Bob White won a contest in string burning held by Troop 26 of Delmar Baptist Church while on a hike to Happy Hollow last Sunday. Two of the troop officials, Scoutmaster Carleton and Troop Committeeman Moss, have enrolled in the Scoutmasters' Training Course started by the Scout Council last week.

All officers of Troop 49 of First Presbyterian Church were re-elected for the coming year at the meeting last week. They are: Scott Donaldson, junior assistant scoutmaster; Victor Hermelin, senior patrol leader, and James Redman, Harold Palkas, Robert Diebel and Marc Donahue, patrol leaders. An announcement was made that work would soon begin on the troop camp, Camp Matson, a 27-acre tract of woods. A swimming pool will be made under a waterfall in a creek running through the land. The Ranger patrol won a stunt contest at the meeting two weeks ago by forecasting, in burlesque, the future of troop members.

Troop 54, of the Temple Israel, had as their guest former Provincial Governor Dinwiddie of the Philippine Islands, at their meeting March 13. Gov. Dinwiddie, who held office during the administration of President Taft, related a number of his experiences with head-hunting and dog-eating Igorotes. He also told of long hikes, nature pow-wows, and of a unique method of making fire without matches. This troop has held 52 hikes in the last two weeks, 12 of them being an overnight camp.

Four scouts of Troop 60, of Union Avenue Christian Church, are members of the Soldan High School Aero Club, the first club in the city to build and fly a glider. A flight in the glider was made a week ago yesterday afternoon, the craft performing in a highly satisfactory manner. G. C. Pe[illegible], former scoutmaster of the troop, who now lives in Chattanooga, has notified the troop that he will attend a dinner being given by the scouts next week. He is coming to St. Louis especially for the dinner.

Protectionism an Econo[mic] Of Imperialism, Herri[ot] Again Urging Eur[ope]

grees with British Minister Conference Would Force a Tariff Armame[nt]

By EDOUARD HERRI[OT]
Former Premier of Fra[nce]
(Copyright, 1930)

THE presence of customs walls throughou[t] of Europe is one of the most serious pean political tranquillity today. The eva customs truce negotiations cannot the peace movement to which the nation secrating their energies.

The ministerial crisis in France deflected for a time public at- tion from the grave events ch have taken place at Gene- in the course of this customs ce conference. Let us recall cisely the problems of the con- ence since they are connected ely with the general problem the creation of an economic eration of Europe, besought nestly by all lovers of peace. The conference opened in the ddle of the month of February. nce was represented by her nisters Flandin and Serot, and Jules Grantier and Serruys. stria sent her Minister of Com- rce Hainisch, Germany entrust- her interest to Ministers Die- ch and Schmidt, as well as Hil- ding. Much discussion had en place on the eve of the con- ence concerning the declara- ns made in Belfast by Mr. Stan- Baldwin. The chief of the glish Conservative Opposition ght vigorously the participa- n of MacDonald's government the Geneva negotiations with professed intention of conclud- a customs truce with the Eu- pean nations. "As for me," d the former Prime Minister, do not believe in the possibil- of this accord. Such an at- pt is madness."

vents lent aid to Stanley Bald- n's resistance. The French nisters found themselves pre- ated by the fall of their chief om taking part in the deliberа- ns. However, William Graham, e British Minister of Commerce, pressed himself with courage d decision in behalf of an onomic entente of European oples. He begged the constant llaboration of the various min- ters of commerce with the ague of Nations and pointed out gnificantly that the true cause the failure of the 1927 confer- nce was the fact that it had been nducted by experts without po- tical responsibility.

Notwithstanding the menace of aldwin, Graham declared himself favor of a customs truce for e economic welfare of Europe, nd proceeded to propose practi- al methods. "The failure of the nference," he declared, "would rce the peoples of Europe into course fatal to them—that of ariff armament." Praise and anks are due to Graham on his ecision and foresight.

The German Minister of Na- tional Economy Schmidt, showed himself neither less resolute nor ss positive in his principles. Un- questionably, he traced the dis- al picture of the present econ- mic state of Germany. He de- plored the inadequacy of capital, he agricultural crisis, the great mber of unemployed—2,300,- 000—and the formidable compe- tition of American wheat. Despite hese unfavorable conditions, the German minister recommended he economic union of Europe nd tariff disarmament, or at least the renunciation of constant levation of tariff walls.

Urges Liberals to Rally.

Thus, as early as Feb. 18, Schmidt defined the problem which in my estimation ought to be well understood by every in- formed and foresighted European; the safety of the continent lies in uniform European condition nd not in a tariff war. All lib- rals should rally to this princi- . It seems to me. In truth, the talian Minister, Bottai, can scarce- be said to have upheld this

Protectionism an Economic Form Of Imperialism, Herriot Declares, Again Urging European Union

Agrees with British Minister That Failure of Conference Would Force a Fatal Course, Tariff Armament.

By EDOUARD HERRIOT,
Former Premier of France.

PARIS, March 22.

THE presence of customs walls throughout the length and breadth of Europe is one of the most serious single menaces to European political tranquillity today. The present deadlock of the Geneva customs truce negotiations cannot but retard the progress of the peace movement to which the nations of the world are now consecrating their energies.

The ministerial crisis in France has deflected for a time public attention from the grave events which have taken place at Geneva in the course of this customs truce conference. Let us recall precisely the problems of the conference since they are connected closely with the general problem of the creation of an economic federation of Europe, besought earnestly by all lovers of peace.

The conference opened in the middle of the month of February. France was represented by her Ministers Flandin and Serot, and by Jules Grantier and Serruys. Austria sent her Minister of Commerce Hainisch, Germany entrusted her interest to Ministers Dietrich and Schmidt, as well as Hilferding. Much discussion had taken place on the eve of the conference concerning the declarations made in Belfast by Mr. Stanley Baldwin. The chief of the English Conservative Opposition fought vigorously the participation of MacDonald's government in the Geneva negotiations with the professed intention of concluding a customs truce with the European nations. "As for me," said the former Prime Minister, "I do not believe in the possibility of this accord. Such an attempt is madness."

Why 1927 Conference Failed.

Events lent aid to Stanley Baldwin's resistance. The French Ministers found themselves prevented by the fall of their chief from taking part in the deliberations. However, William Graham, the British Minister of Commerce, expressed himself with courage and decision in behalf of an economic entente of European peoples. He begged the constant collaboration of the various ministers of commerce with the League of Nations and pointed out significantly that the true cause of the failure of the 1927 conference was the fact that it had been conducted by experts without political responsibility.

Notwithstanding the menace of Baldwin, Graham declared himself in favor of a customs truce for the economic welfare of Europe, and proceeded to propose practical methods. "The failure of the conference," he declared, "would force the peoples of Europe into a course fatal to them—that of tariff armament." Praise and thanks are due to Graham on his decision and foresight.

The German Minister of National Economy Schmidt, showed himself neither less resolute nor less positive in his principles. Unquestionably, he traced the dismal picture of the present economic state of Germany. He deplored the inadequacy of capital, the agricultural crisis, the great number of unemployed—2,300,000—and the formidable competition of American wheat. Despite these unfavorable conditions, the German minister recommended the economic union of Europe and tariff disarmament, or at least the renunciation of constant elevation of tariff walls.

Urges Liberals to Rally.

Thus, as early as Feb. 18, Schmidt defined the problem which in my estimation ought to be well understood by every informed and foresighted European; the safety of the continent lies in a uniform European condition and not in a tariff war. All liberals should rally to this principle, it seems to me. In truth, the Italian Minister, Bottai, can scarcely be said to have upheld this theory, to which the Rumanian Minister, Dagearu, also offered important conditions. It was even announced that Bottai opposed the creation of a committee of research proposed by Graham.

The eminent Dutch economist, Henri Colyn, did all in his power to re-establish by upholding at the same time the principles laid down by Briand and the practical propositions of Graham. With his habitual breadth of view, he pointed out the peril of failure of the conference with its subsequent condemnation of the entire work of the League of Nations. Albert Calmes indicated with equal strength the responsibility of the great states whose bad examples had led the smaller nations into deplorable imitations.

In a debate of this amplitude and this gravity, what was France going to say—the France which through Briand and several other men in good faith has preached so much on behalf of peace. Her word was awaited with impatience. She was counted upon to contribute to the creation of this vast market which would include so many regional markets. Everyone had confidence in the power of her traditional liberalism to combat protectionism, that economic form of imperialism. Everyone expected she would aid in smoothing out the difficulties between industrial states.

France Killed Conference.

France spoke, but against the truce. In her name Serruys refused to adhere to the proposition upheld by Graham and Schmidt. Immediately there were cries on all sides that the conference had been torpedoed. Great astonishment was expressed at this event for heretofore Serruys had wholeheartedly collaborated in the discussions preliminary to the conference.

France had apparently killed the conference; I must admit it frankly. Flandin on his return from Geneva, confirmed his refusal of the proposed preliminary accord, announcing at the same time the provisional settlement made of the various propositions. The compromise arrived at consists in the prolongation for one year of the existing commercial treaties; during this period those countries fettered by treaties would promise either to refrain from raising new barriers or at least give warning of their intentions. Flandin likewise proposed the establishment of a vast system for the investigation and creation of a gigantic mechanism calculated to regulate economic litigations. In other words frankly spoken, the conference is bewilderingly marking time in the makelike entanglements of its own making. Granted even if it actually does go forward, it is only to lose ground on the main issue.

I have often defended our national governments against unjust reproach when the question involved reparations or military disarmaments. This time, however, when the issue at stake is the European solidarity I have so often begged, I must say frankly that the Ministers of Great Britain and Germany have shown themselves more internationally minded than our French delegates.

The 'Serruys' Incident.

Notwithstanding the personal ideas of certain of its members, the French Democratic Party does not accept responsibility for this attitude which will henceforth be

The Prospective New President Of Missouri State University

Never Went to College Except to Teach—A Newspaper Editor Before He Was Old Enough to Vote, He Established the School of Journalism at Columbia and Has Been Its Head for 22 Years—Personality and Anecdotes Told About Him.

By Carlos F. Hurd
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

DON'T tell the ambitious senior who is toiling for his A. B. in this tempting spring weather—but Walter Williams, prospective choice of the University of Missouri curators for acting president of the University, hasn't a college diploma to his name.

The high school at Boonville, his home town, is the only Alma Mater of Dean Williams, founder and for 22 years head of the School of Journalism, and scheduled to succeed Dr. Stratton D. Brooks as "prexy" to the University's whole student body. He is not without degrees, for two institutions have made him Doctor of Laws. And through the years he has been piling up titles, positions and designations, none of which is needed to identify him in any corner of Missouri, or in any one of thousands of American and foreign newspaper offices.

They were paying printer's devils 75 cents a week when Walter Williams, 15 years old and just out of school, took the job on the Boonville Topic in 1879. Before he was old enough to vote, he was editing the Boonville Advertiser, oldest Democratic weekly in Central Missouri, in the exciting Blaine-Cleveland campaign of '84.

DEAN WALTER WILLIAMS

Bookkeeper, Then on Newspaper for 18 Years.

He was president of the Missouri Press Association before he left the Advertiser in 1889, to take a job tendered him by Gov. Francis as bookkeeper at the Penitentiary. A few months at Jefferson City satisfied any craving he may have had for a place in State officialdom.

From 1890 to 1908, Williams was editor of the Columbia Missouri Herald. E. W. Stephens, proprietor of the Herald, still regards the venerated and getting-to-be venerable Dean as one of his boys. In his 18 years' association with Stephens, Williams was president of the National Editorial Association for a year, edited the St. Louis Presbyterian for two years, directed the Daily State Tribune at Jefferson City four years, ran a monthly, the Country Editor, and wrote for St. Louis and Kansas City newspapers.

Within this period, also, came the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, the St. Louis World's Fair of 1904. Williams wrote "The State of Missouri" for the State's Board of Commissioners to the Fair. The 600-page book, packed with facts and pictures about Missouri, its history, resources and institutions, was distributed to all parts of the world, and is still a valued reference work.

When Senor Williams Purchased Louisiana.

Williams was sent in 1902 as Commissioner to the European press, in behalf of the Fair. Visiting Cadiz, Spain, he called on the editor of the principal newspaper and told him of the coming exposition and the event which it commemorated, the purchase of Louisiana territory from France in 1803. The next day, the Cadiz paper informed its readers that "Senor Williams of St. Louis has just purchased 17,000,000 square miles from France, has named it Louisiana, and is going to hold a fiesta to which the entire world is invited." Williams called on the editor again and endeavored to make matters more clear to him. This resulted in the publication of a correction stating that "Gov. Francis of Missouri has purchased Louisiana, instead of Senor Williams."

As part of his work for the Exposition, Williams presided over the North American section of the International Press Congress at Berne, Switzerland, in 1902. He visited more than 1000 newspaper offices.

In his stay-at-home years, Williams became known as teacher of the State's largest Bible class, which grew to 400 members and overflowed from the Columbia Presbyterian church into a storeroom.

At the Exposition itself, Missouri editors drifted into a discussion of the teaching of journalism, then an academic subject. Joseph Pulitzer, founder of the Post-Dispatch, had written an article for the North American Review, outlining the plans which, years afterward, were carried out at Columbia University, New York.

The State editors indorsed the idea of such a course of instruction at the University of Missouri. Williams, a member of the University Board of Curators by appointment of his former Boonville townsman, Gov. Stephens, talked with the other members of the Board about carrying out the idea.

The Curators decided that a chair of journalism should be added to the professorships of the University, and asked Williams to take such a chair. He told them that a chair was not enough—that it was time for journalism, as a profession, to have its own department, with facilities for training its workers.

Early in 1908, the Board voted to create the new department, and elected Williams to be its head. He accepted, resigning from the Board of Curators and severing his connection with the Herald.

That summer, the new Dean organized his faculty of two instructors, outlined his four-year Journalism course and correlated it with the regular instruction in English, history, economics, and other branches, arranged for getting out the daily University Missourian as a laboratory for the school, and waited for the students to come.

His Classes Successful and Popular From Start.

They came—the School of Journalism had no difficulty, from the start, in getting students. The first year 72 were enrolled and one received the degree of Bachelor of Science in Journalism, since shortened to Bachelor of Journalism. The first few months were the hardest for Williams and his little faculty. The paper had to come out every day, and had to be newsy, and the work fell on the instructors, until they were able to train a staff to gather and assemble the matter.

The St. Louis and Kansas City dailies—the Dean's chief assistant was an old Kansas City Star man—were the chief models and subjects of study for the embryo journalists; but Walter Williams considered and called himself a country editor, and his school was a training place for the makers of county-seat weeklies and of trade journals, as much as for the workers of metropolitan dailies.

Nor did he promise to turn out full-fledged newspaper men and women, though it afterward appeared that he sometimes did so. "To train for journalism, not to make journalists," was his modest statement of the school's aims. His definite purpose was to ground his graduates in principles, and to this end he laid emphasis on his creed, which many of the school's students still know by heart. It follows:

Dean Williams' Creed of the Newspaperman.

I believe in the profession of journalism.

I believe that the public journal is a public trust; that all connected with it are, to the full measure of their responsibility, trustees for the public; that acceptance of lesser service than the public service is betrayal of this trust.

I believe that clear thinking and clear statement, accuracy and fairness, are fundamental to good journalism.

I believe that a journalist should write only what he holds in his heart to be true.

I believe that suppression of the news, for any consideration other than the welfare of society, is indefensible.

I believe that no one should write as a journalist what he would not say as a gentleman; that bribery by one's own pocketbook is as much to be avoided as bribery by the pocketbook of another; that individual responsibility may not be escaped by pleading another's instructions or another's dividends.

I believe that advertising, news and editorial columns should alike serve the best interests of readers; that a single standard of helpful truth and cleanness should prevail for all; that the supreme test of good journalism is the measure of its public service.

I believe that the journalism which succeeds best—and best deserves success—fears God and honors man; is stoutly independent, unmoved by pride of opinion or greed of power, constructive, tolerant but never careless, self-controlled, patient, always respectful of its readers but always unafraid; is quickly indignant at injustice; is unswayed by the appeal of privilege or the clamor of the mob; seeks to give every man a chance and, as far as law and honest wage and recognition of human brotherhood can make it so, an equal chance; is profoundly patriotic while sincerely promoting international good will and cementing world comradeship; is a journalism of humanity, of and for today's world.

Establishes New Connections in Round-the-World Tour.

The school, now in its twenty-second year, has a faculty of a dozen, and sends out nearly 100 graduates annually. From the first, Dean Williams has been able to place the most promising of the graduates in positions in various parts of the country, and even in the narrow field of American periodicals in foreign lands. Several of the Dean's former students have obtained positions in Japan, and men from the school have served in Australia and Latin America.

Every time Dean Williams has made a foreign tour, he has established new connections for his school and its graduates. He went around the world in 1913-14 on an educational mission. For several years he was president of the World's Press Congress, presiding over this body at its meetings in Honolulu and Geneva, Switzerland. He aided, a few years ago, in establishing the first Asiatic school of journalism at Yenching University, Peiping, China.

Journalism Week, held at the school every May, has become a press congress for the State's editors, and a home-coming time for graduates of the school. The graduates, in 1926, presented to the University a portrait of Dean Williams, which hangs in Neff Hall, home of the school.

Leading editors and noted public men are guests of the school in each Journalism Week. Dean Williams is the host. The visitors are on exhibition before the school, and any value they may have in practical counsel or general encouragement is drawn upon freely. The school and its dean are also on exhibition, and the impressions formed by these writing men have spread the fame of both the school and the dean.

If the visitors travel by rail, over either of the small spurs which run into Columbia, they are likely to get an impression of isolation about the town. They are the more impressed by the cosmopolitan outlook of the Dean.

Combination of Sage and Stage Director.

He can often discuss with a visitor the papers and the government of his own city, and he can tell the most traveled person of things which that person has overlooked in foreign countries, which the Dean's association with the men of his craft has helped him to find.

He can compare the London dailies with those of England's dominions, and can tell of the vicissitudes of the European press in pre-war days, when no European nation gave the press the freedom which it had in America." He can explain the difference be-

Sidelights on the Naval Conference in London

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, March 22.

IT has been amusing and somewhat instructive to note the way in which our naval experts, making the best of what to them (in their hearts) is a bad bargain, have begun to proclaim the merits of the 6-inch gun cruiser. At the Geneva conference of 1927 our delegates and experts could see little good, for American purposes, in any cruiser smaller than the 10,000-ton "treaty" type, mounting 8-inch guns. It was our insistence there upon the right to build as many of these big cruisers as we pleased, within a general cruiser tonnage limitation, that helped to smash the conference. Now that we have agreed at London to limit ourselves to 18 big ones and use the balance of our 327,000 cruiser tonnage quota in the construction of smaller vessels, our experts have shifted their emphasis to the Navy's requirements in the latter type. Virtues hitherto unknown to the layman are found to reside in the 6-inch gun ship. The 6-inch gun, it appears, is loaded by hand and hence can be fired faster than the 8-inch gun, which must be loaded by machinery. Actual tests have shown we are told, that at certain ranges the 6-inch gun ship is superior to the other. Our naval experts are now envisaging a new "small" cruiser type of about 3100 tons, able to deliver from its 6-inch guns within a given time a weight of metal twice as great as that which can be fired from the 8-inch guns of a 10,000 tonner. We shall presently be told, no doubt, that we shall need vessels of this class, rather than more of the 7050-ton Omaha type, properly to "round out" our Navy.

No criticism of our naval officers at the conference is here intended. They are among the best and most conscientious men in the service. They are experts in their line—but that line is fighting, not the making of treaties to stop fighting. If they seem at times to lack a sense of humor, the deficiency arises out of a single-minded devotion to the duties they have been trained to perform. It does not disparage them to say that no naval limitation conference would ever get anywhere if the final decisions rested with naval men. Geneva proved this, and events at London, where the officers are on the sidelines, have proved it anew. As an American newspaper paragrapher has written, asking an Admiral to give up a warship is like asking a Bishop to give up a cathedral.

OF course, our naval officers are not unique in trying to squeeze the last possible fighting machine out of whatever policy may be formulated. The British Admiralty and the heads of all the other navies think in precisely the same terms. Nor is the shifting of emphasis from one kind of ship to another a new thing. In response to fresh inventions, fresh commitments, fresh expediencies, naval opinion as to what makes up an efficient navy is constantly changing. Our navy men are not nearly so prone as they once were to regard the big submarine as a menace; they would be glad, indeed, to have the other Powers use up their submarine tonnage in large craft rather than distribute it over a greater number of small vessels. Jutland upset a lot of preconceived notions about fighting ships, and the next war, if there is one, will do the same. All the talk we are hearing about the relative values of this and that ship is of course purely theoretical; the only way actually to find out what a ship will do is to put it to the test of warfare. Meantime, the endless argument goes on, and the highly extolled vessel of yesterday becomes material for the scrap heap of tomorrow.

"PARITY" as an abstraction has served the useful political purpose of allaying the ill feeling that sprang up between Britain and the United States after the failure of the Geneva conference. The trouble comes when the attempt is made to reduce parity to concrete terms. Obviously there can never be an exact parity between any two fleets or any two ships. If the expected battleship holiday becomes a reality, Great Britain and the United States will be on an equality as to number to ships. The United States, however, will have superiority in gun power and Britain will have superiority in speed—facts which will let the militarists on each side say that the other side got the better of the bargain and that something must be done about it. It was a German humorist, I believe, who suggested that the United States and Britain have their ships built to a standard pattern in German yards, and manned with robots. It might also be suggested, in the interest of exact maintenance of the five-three ratio between the United States and Japan, that steps should be taken immediately to decrease the size of our sailors' hands, or, conversely, to give the Japanese sailors bigger hands. At present, the Japanese are using 5½-inch guns on some of their cruisers, where we use 6-inch guns, because their seamen find it difficult to handle the larger shells.

ONE of the palpable fallacies heard in naval discussions is that some ships should be classed as offensive and others as defensive. Every ship is an offensive ship to the nation in front of it and a defensive ship to the nation behind it.

ANOTHER kind of scrapping than that of warships is being done by Great Britain. Fortunately for her, no question of parity with the United States is involved, for in this field the United States is not only not scrapping but is executing an extensive building program. England is cutting down the number of her prisons. The total now is only half of what it was 30 years ago, and a further drastic reduction has been decided upon. Twenty-four prisons, including the Reading gaol immortalized in the ballad by Oscar Wilde, have passed out of their old use, and some of them are expected shortly to go on the auction block. J. R. Clynes, the Home Secretary, explained in a recent interview that the reduction was made possible by a steady decline in the prison population. "We are able to pull down prisons," he said, "partly because we have fewer wrongdoers and partly because we keep people out of such places unless it is absolutely necessary." Edward Shortt, a former Home Secretary, added his testimony that the British people had become more law abiding and the courts were increasingly disinclined to send persons to jail for small offenses.

NOT all the Americans who are dealing with international affairs in London at the moment are connected with the naval conference. Over the desk of a young American in the Bank of England goes every scrap of paper concerning the bank's manifold relations with international finance. He sits at the center of a web whose fine threads of policy reach over the world. Twenty years ago he was a newspaper reporter in St. Louis.

The young man is Walter W.

Thinks Real Estate Owners Bear Undue Proportion of Public Expense.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN I hear the statements of how necessary it is to keep the 85-cent tax for schools, I wonder if people realize where the money comes from that they so volubly state must be got. The property owner of this city is the payer and the volunteer organizations of citizens are thoughtlessly burdening the property holders when possibly some other more equitable and lenient way could be arranged.

Real estate carries an enormous burden of taxes maintaining the municipal expense, policemen, firemen, the schools, and inasmuch as practically 75 per cent of real estate is mortgaged, it is evident the owner is under a burden.

Again it would be well to note that the proportion of real estate owners to the general citizens is about one to four, so by mathematical precision, one-fourth of the population is paying the great majority of the taxes. But in the voting of measures such as the 85 cents for the schools, all have equal votes to keep the taxes on the minority one-fourth. This means that many real estate owners are paying for the education of the children of other citizens who do not own real estate and therefore pay very little taxes, but get full benefit of city privileges.

The Stoddard School has been functioning for 70 years, an example that schools educate many generations which makes the average thinking person feel that taxes should be leveled out over years so that generations could pay their proportion and not have it concentrated. This could be done by a bond issue for necessary purposes.

There is no argument but that all children must be educated. There is a serious argument as to how the money should be got and as serious an argument as to how and by whom it should be disbursed. EDWARD K. LOVE.

No News From Houdini.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

BEFORE Harry Houdini, the magician, died, he and his wife agreed upon a signal whereby he would communicate with her from the other world if it were possible. Mrs. Houdini now announces that after three years' effort she has been unable to get that signal though she has worked with several of the greatest of spiritualistic advocates. I am inclined to believe that proves something or other. I submit that if Houdini couldn't do it, it can't be done. K.

Put the Free Bridge to Work.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE "free bridge problem" has long engaged the time and study of the tax-paying public, which is called upon each year to put up $500,000 for interest, maintenance, sinking fund, taxes and other charges. And now that the matter of getting the railroads to use its facilities is before the Board of Aldermen in concrete form, it would seem wise counsel to urge some speedy action. The railroads are willing to use it providing adequate approaches are built and furthermore are ready to give the bridge sufficient traffic to pay this $500,000 and even more. With such an assurance, the city should quickly consummate the agreement and thus convert this white elephant into a going concern. Besides, it would take passenger trains out of the tunnel, which would be a genuine blessing and a forward step for St. Louis.

By all means, let us do something for the town and get this bridge to work to the end that it will pay for itself and take the load off the necks of the taxpayers. M. R. L.

The Digest Poll.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CERTAIN leaders of the dry forces are shouting from the house tops that the Literary Digest poll on the prohibition question is very unfair and point out that many members of the W. C. T. U. and similar organizations have not received a ballot from this magazine.

Why do these drys take it upon themselves to criticise this poll when as a matter of fact these same organizations pointed to the accuracy of such a poll when the Literary Digest felt the people's pulse on the last presidential campaign? It was, at that time, favorable to their cause.

I am for repeal and have not received a ballot, nor has any member of our family and there are 10 all told, three women and seven men, all for repeal. Then why not be fair about this thing? Is it not reasonable to assume that the Digest poll will reach the average, just as it did during the presidential campaign?

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, if these W. C. T. U. members or members of the Anti-Saloon League fear the Digest poll is not fair, then why not make a fair test and that by a nation-wide vote at the polls? The drys fear that method. Why? L. E. H.

THE DOMINANT ISSUE.

Former United States Senator Williams of this State, in a recent address, predicted that both the Republican and Democratic parties would split over the issue of prohibition. He foresaw a new alignment of parties—prohibition and antiprohibition.

We hope that his prophetic vision is true, at least so far as the issue of Federal prohibition is concerned. We can think of nothing better for the country than a congressional election on the single issue of prohibition, in which every citizen, without regard to party affiliation, would vote his conviction on Federal prohibition. We would then get a Congress representative of the sentiment and will of the majority of the people on this all-absorbing issue. It would be the first definite step toward a permanent, satisfactory solution of the question.

We call prohibition the all-absorbing issue because it is the uppermost issue in the minds of a large percentage of the voters. It obscures and confuses every other issue. By reason of the blind zeal of a minority of voters it determines elections with utter disregard of the character and capacity of the candidates or the will of the majority of electors. As the late Chief Justice Taft wrote in his memorable, prophetic letter, "The ever-present issue (prohibition) will confuse and prevent clear and clean-cut popular discussions on the most important national questions." And further, "A minority like this (prohibitionists) conceiving that it is moved by a moral issue, loses its sense of proportion and sacrifices other issues, no matter how vital to the nation. Such a minority visits with condign punishment all public servants who oppose it on this issue, however useful they may be. * * * It does awaken one's protest to note the manner in which the ordinary type of politician becomes a prohibitionist because he fears the balance of power that an active political minority may wield against his political fortunes."

We have seen this balance of power, to which Mr. Taft referred, work. By threats of defeat the Anti-Saloon League, controlling the votes of groups of fanatic prohibitionists, has induced candidates frequently against their convictions to pledge their votes for prohibition measures. Fear of defeat has made elected legislators and officials subservient to the dictates of the Anti-Saloon League. It has worked effectively in both state and Federal elections and governments. It has been a sword above the heads of all legislators and officials, from the highest to the lowest. It has worked secretly and openly—secret pledges and open threats.

We saw the balance of power by secret pledge drive the Missouri Legislature to ratify the eighteenth amendment in the face of two overwhelming popular votes against prohibition, one in 1910 (425,406 to 207,281) and the other in 1916 (416,826 to 294,288). This is one of many instances. The power is a menace to good government, a bar to the election of honest and capable men. It is the mother of political demagoguery, deceit and hypocrisy. It has demoralized politics and made elections a tragic farce.

Parties have split on the issue of prohibition and overthrown the balance of power. Senator Reed split the Republican party of this State; so did Senator Hawes. There have been similar cross-currents of voting in many elections, including presidential elections. The Boston Transcript is now warning the Republicans of Massachusetts that if they nominate a dry senatorial candidate they will divide the party and elect an antiprohibition Democrat. But the divisions of party votes on the prohibition issue are sporadic and uncertain. The average voter is inclined blindly to vote his party ticket. The bulk of the Republican voters vote the Republican ticket and the bulk of the Democrats vote the Democratic ticket. Thus the minority's balance of power is effective. The party divisions are not dependable for results. Candidates fear to speak their convictions and vote their convictions because they are not sure of the support of the voters of other parties who agree with them.

This vicious balance of power wielded by a minority can be overthrown by the people. The majority can control every election by voting for conviction instead of party. The moment voters demonstrate their intention to vote their convictions on the prohibition issue the whole political situation will change. Candidates would openly express their opinions and if elected would vote them. The majority, whether for or against prohibition, would control elections. Congress and state legislatures would represent and put into effect the will of the majority. The present turgid political atmosphere would clear up and the country would be on the road to a settlement of the disturbing issue.

The concentration of votes on the prohibition issue in one congressional election would work a wholesome change in government. Probably it would be necessary to concentrate in two or three congressional and a presidential election to accomplish the desired object and sweep out the false representation, demagoguery and hypocrisy that now afflict us.

If citizens would think straight and vote straight on this issue we would get a straight Government; we would stop the destructive warfare now raging, settle the issue and reunite the divided country. Let us have a straight vote on prohibition in the next congressional election.

THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.

Whatever misgivings William Gillette may have had, when the farewell tour in "Sherlock Holmes" was proposed to him, have long since vanished. City after city has welcomed him, experienced again the spell of his enchantment, paid him its tribute in the rare coin of sincere admiration and affection. He has found this America of 1930 an Appian Way.

The critics say that the years have left no scar. At 74 he is the same Sherlock Holmes the shivering, fascinated audiences saw so long ago. That imperturbable indolence which snapped nerves is still his, and also that rapier swiftness of action which foiled the deadly minions of the underworld under the lethal command of Prof. Moriarty. And still he can tell his love with the persuasive tenderness and gentility that charmed "the turn of the century."

To the age that paid him its homage in his heyday Mr. Gillette was more than an actor, more than the combination of playwright, producer and actor. His distinction was more than professional. He was a personage with something of a royal aura. The improbables of melodrama were by his genius translated into realities.

That skill achieved its apogee, we suppose, in Sherlock Holmes. When the final curtain fell one did not feel he had witnessed the portrayal of a fictional character. One had seen the incomparable detective in real life. One knew that that tall, slight, steely figure was not William Gillette. He was Sherlock Holmes. One knows that still. Conan Doyle was simply the biographer who narrated the exploits of a super-sleuth. William Gillette incarnated the master of observation and deduction.

St. Louis will be happily privileged this week to honor the artist who has come out of his Sabine retirement to present an immortal of the theater.

THE SUPREME COURT AND THE PEOPLE.

Apropos the vacancy in the Supreme Court caused by the death of Justice Sanford, and prior to the appointment of Judge Parker, Senator Glenn of Illinois has remarked that his State has not had a representative on that Court for 20 years. Commenting on that fact the Peoria (Ill.) Transcript recites that Missouri, Indiana and Wisconsin have never been honored with a Supreme Court appointment and ventures that, while such nominations should not be made on "territorial or political grounds, yet other things being equal, a larger recognition of the Western states would serve to allay some of the prejudice against the Court."

It seems to us that "prejudice" is not a happy word in this connection. Public opinion has, to be sure, dissented from some of the decisions of the Supreme Court, but it has done so with propriety and decorum. Moreover, there is nothing unprecedented in that. Rather it is the normal situation. And high authority has approved and encouraged that attitude. Thus the late Senator Beveridge, in his essay, "Common Sense and the Constitution," quoted David Josiah Brewer, whom he described as "one of the ablest and most learned—yes, and most 'conservative'—Justices that ever sat upon our national Supreme Bench":

> It is a mistake to suppose that the Supreme Court is either honored or helped by being spoken of as beyond criticism. On the contrary, the life and character of its Justices should be the object of constant watchfulness by all, and its judgments subject to the freest criticism.
> The time is past in the history of the world when any living man or body of men can be set on a pedestal and decorated with a halo. True, many criticisms may be, like their authors, devoid of good taste, but better all sorts of criticism than no criticism at all.
> The moving waters are full of life and health; only in the still waters is stagnation and death.

A wise, sane formula and thoroughly in accord with the fundamental principles of our American democracy.

HUMORESQUE.

There is something inspiring in the simple faith of Antonin Dvorak, grandson of the composer of "Humoresque," who toils in an Ohio coal mine that his daughter, 16 years old, may have violin lessons and so keep in the family the brilliant genius that was her great-grandfather's. There is something pathetic, too. No doubt the girl will be ennobled and made a better girl by her music, but prankish fate seldom lets the lightning of genius strike twice in the same line. It is considerably more than probable that Miss Olga Dvorak will turn out to be a so-so boop-boop-a-doop fiddle player.

To doubt the Literary Digest poll is to doubt the dryness of Kansas, and nobody does that.

A HAPPY ENDING.

A jury has said that Edward L. Doheny did not bribe Albert B. Fall. Those good men and women have heard, and believed, the oil man's version of the $100,000 he sent in the little black bag to his old-time friend. They had been partners down there on the border, had toiled and hoped and dreamed together under desert suns and nights of stars. Their paths diverged. Law and politics beckoned Fall and led him to high places—the Senate and, at last, a Cabinet office, but worldly fortune eluded him. Doheny went on searching for gold and at last struck oil. So the rich man came to the poor man's aid, in an act of generosity in romantic alignment with the chivalrous traditions of the desert.

There were sordid facts, sodden circumstances, legal pronouncements of faithlessness and corruption to mock the princely story, but the men and women of the jury thrust them aside with sentimental finality. There was the lease of Elk Hills which the law had found to be tainted with fraud and had voided. There was the lie Fall had told about the $100,000—the explanation that he had borrowed it from another person, in which falsehood Doheny had silently acquiesced until the pressure of impending exposure compelled avowal. There was the verdict of a jury which found Fall guilty of accepting a bribe, when he received Doheny's $100,000 in that identical little black bag. There was the hierarchic scandal of the pitch-black, malodorous oil orgy, with its interminable ramifications and sardonic tragedies.

There was, and is, a climax of infamy.

But the aged Doheny whose dimming vision must have shuddered at the specter of a prison sentence walks out of the dreary drama into an epilogue of freedom by order of the jury.

A happy ending.

THE FALSE FACE OF GLORY.

History continues to be, as someone has said, a collection of myths agreed upon. Let researchers uncover the original documents and first-hand source material, let learned scholars weigh and come to judgment, still to the generality pretty fables inhere in the mind to the exclusion of less pretty facts.

The charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava will ever be remembered as a feat of gallantry, not as a piece of monumental stupidity. The feature of Gettysburg will continue to be Pickett's charge which Pickett's division made with Pickett himself well in the rear in a barnyard. And now the United States is to erect a monument to the charge of Roosevelt's Rough Riders up San Juan Hill, about the only thing, exclusive of Dewey's victory at Manila Bay, for which the Spanish-American War will ever be remembered. Of course, the gusty T. R. charged up the wrong hill, Kettle Hill; of course, the Rough Riders charged like "a lot of schoolboys," as regular army officers later declared; of course, in trying to rectify his mistake, T. R. charged across the valley between Kettle Hill and San Juan Hill and got his command under crossfire, from which the Negro troopers of the First and Tenth cavalry regiments, dismounted, had to rescue them, but, still, it was somehow glorious.

Let the spot be marked. There is little enough glory in the world—even if it has a false face.

We doubt that anything definite will be known about the new planet for some time, as Admiral Byrd probably will want to rest for a while.

RED PROPHECIES FOR AMERICA.

From the Paris L'Humanite (Communist).

AMERICAN capitalism pretends to be able to weather the present crisis by lowering wages—as has already been done in the textile industry—by introducing worse working conditions, and by conquering foreign markets; in other words, by war. And this policy will, of course, go hand in hand with a still more ferocious repression of the laboring class. The electric chair is utterly indispensable to its fulfillment, and workers in France should know and understand what America is doing. For our part, we know how to comport ourselves. Powerful forces of evil thought they could confound us by contrasting prosperous America with agonized Soviet Russia, but the workers have made their choice between the America of the Wall street crash, the America of Gov. Fuller's justice, the America of unemployment, and the Russia of the five-year plan of economic development.

THE SPOILED AMERICAN CHILD.

ANNA T. LEITICH in Vienna Neue Freie Presse.

REALLY and truly I believe—that the young people, the boys and girls, are better in America than anywhere else in the world. American parents have always tried to give their children better opportunities than they themselves enjoyed, and thus they live their own youth over again. This is splendid up to a certain point, but things must not be carried too far—and in America they are.

I remember three boys I saw in a subway. At first they sat still, but presently they began cuffing each other—good-naturedly to be sure—and soon a strenuous fight had developed, accompanied by Indian war cries. And what did the older people do? They drew back to give more room to youth. They laughed and did not utter a word of protest.

But the most wonderful thing about all this is that these undisciplined, untrained children grow up into brave, industrious money-makers and that the wildest tomboys often become peaceful mothers by the time they are 20 years old.

GOOD-BY, NEW YORK!

H. J. GREENWALL in the London Daily Express.

GOOD-BY, you city of lovely paradox. I am going home. I am going back to a continent where you believe bathrooms are novelties; where, so you say, we freeze to death because we have no steam heat. Oh, New York, don't you swallow gallons of ice water just because your steam heat dries up the very marrow in your bones?

I am going back to London, where Sunday newspapers appear on Sunday morning, and not on Saturday night, and where drug stores are chemist shops, and not places for the purchasing of sandwiches, coffee, ice cream sodas, books and haberdashery. Good-by, New York. I shall miss those delicious sandwiches, though.

I think a can opener should be emblazoned on the American national shield. You have achieved the supreme art of packing every article of foodstuff into a tin. I am returning to countries where we are still so behind the times that we actually enjoy food that is cooked freshly for us. Think of that, New York.

BRITISH LABOR LOOKS AT FORD.

From the London Daily Herald (Labor).

IT appears that employers in Europe are concerned over Mr. Ford's declared intention to apply his gospel on an ever-increasing scale throughout the Old World. Messages from Berlin contain forecasts of trouble, because other employers will be faced with demands that they copy Mr. Ford's example. A campaign has been started to prevent the International Labor Office from proceeding with its investigation into the rates of wages that should be paid in European towns to be equivalent to those prevailing in Detroit.

People who take this attitude are certain to be worsted in the struggle for trade. Increased consuming power in the home market is one of the most urgent needs of industry in Europe, including Great Britain, and the only way to secure that increase is to advance wages.

A SPANISH VIEW OF CULTURE IN U. S.

CARLOS SOLDEVILA in Revistade Occident (Madrid).

AT first sight the immensity of the United States, its infinite thrust, and its commanding position in the world might seem to excuse it from the necessity of trying to develop a personality of its own. But this is not really the case. Americans are not satisfied with having developed an original rhythm of life, and with having made a new language from an old one. Not content with influencing the whole world with their movies, they are still suffering from a terrible kind of homesickness, and their best brains are seeking furiously to free their arts and literature from the European trademark. Some despairing spirits even reach the almost laughable extreme of envying the Central and South American countries, whose Indian blood may help them to formulate a message of their own that is original and not European. Oh, Mexico! You are becoming more Aztec every day!

A MONUMENT TO ROOSEVELT.

From a Bulletin of the Panama Labor Party.

AS citizens of Panama we consider a monument to Theodore Roosevelt in Panama derogatory to our national dignity, since it simply hails as benefactor a man who prided himself on grabbing our country for the Yankees. We still remember the words, "I took Panama," uttered by President Roosevelt to justify his annexation and exploitation of our country. As active members of the Labor party of Panama we are firm and frank anti-imperialists and we cannot, therefore, consent to the perpetuation in bronze or marble of those who, in one way or another, bound our Republic to the oppressive chariot wheels of the capitalistic imperialism of the United States. We should not justify, much less applaud or glorify, a man who embodied the economic and political machinations of the country that once bred Lincoln and Washington.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, March 22.

IN the cloakroom of the House of Representatives the other day sat four or five Congressmen. As they smoked and exchanged pleasantries, their conversation drifted into a favorite topic—campaign experiences. They told stories of their political past—methods they had employed to get votes, moves to which they had resorted to bring opponents into disfavor in the eyes of the electorate, humorous things that had occurred in campaigns.

An unusual incident was related by a man now serving his fourth term in the House. A veteran campaigner, he described the experience as the most peculiar in all his career.

The last time he came up for re-election he had the strongest opposition he had ever encountered, he said. In the closing days of the campaign he was forced to extend himself to the utmost.

RETURNING to his home well after midnight after addressing a rally in an adjoining town, he was forced to drive through a wooded and an almost uninhabited section. He was alone. Near the end of the lonely stretch he saw a prostrate figure almost in the middle of the road. There was nothing to do but stop and lend assistance.

He had hardly reached the spot where the man was lying when from out of the darkness came the command to "put 'em up." The prostrate figure came to life and was joined by his companion from the darkness. The two soon relieved him of everything he had. The highwaymen went to his car, preparing to take that also.

The eyes of one spied some campaign posters lying on the front seat. Picking one up and looking at it, he turned to the victim and demanded to know his name.

"I am Congressman Blank," he replied, "on my way home from the rally at Centerville."

The two holdup men conferred for a moment. Then one turned to the victim and said: "Here, take your money back. You got a pension for my mother a few years ago. We can't rob you—go on and forget it."

FROM another came a story of how a slip on the part of a city directory census taker helped him defeat an opponent.

"My opponent was visiting his son in a town outside the district when the city directory was being compiled. By some quirk his name was printed in the directory instead of that of his son. In my speeches throughout the rural districts, I carried several of the directories and pointed out that my opponent was not even a resident of the district—and here was the proof."

But it seemed there were people who knew nothing of city directories.

"For I learned later," the Congressman went on, "that some of the people thought I was carrying a list of all the inmates of the city jail. I carried whole precincts on the strength of that belief."

60 PER CENT OF BROWN U. STUDENTS ADMIT DRINKING

Poll Taken by School Paper; 61 Per Cent for Dry Law Modification, 19 Pct. for Repeal.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 22.—Brown University students have voted wet by an overwhelming majority in a poll conducted by the Brown Daily Herald, which says editorially, "We must take a stand as common sense directs and throw ourselves into the so-called wet camp." The complete ballot, taken in the Central Congregational Church, after Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, president of the university, had urged the students to vote thoughtfully and honestly, showed:

Sixty per cent admit they drink. 61 per cent favor modification of the law, 19 per cent favor repeal, 18 per cent favor strict enforcement, and only 1 per cent favor retention of the present law.

Nine hundred and eighteen ballots were cast. There are 1275 undergraduates in the school.

Four questions were asked: Do you drink? Do you ever get drunk? If you do not drink, is it because of personal taste, family or legal restriction? Do you favor the retention of the present prohibition situation, a strict enforcement, modification or total repeal of all liquor legislation?

WILL RUN AGAINST SHEPPARD

Texan as Wet to Oppose Author of 18th Amendment for Senate.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 22.—Advocating repeal or modification of the prohibition amendment, former Congressman R. L. Henry of Houston late today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate. He will oppose Senator Morris Sheppard, author of the 18th amendment. Henry served in Congress 20 years.

"In my judgment," Henry said, "the national prohibition amendment should be repealed or amended. The time has come for action by the American people. The dismal farce of prohibition as it now nexists should be terminated."

For Mrs. Emily Newell Blair.

JOPLIN, Mo., March 22.—The name of Mrs. Emily Newell Blair of Joplin, former vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and writer, has been submitted by the Joplin League for inclusion on the national honor roll of the League of Women Voters. Mrs. George Gellhorn of St. Louis is the other Missouri woman proposed for the honor.

Tariff Is Form Of Imperialism, Says Herriot

characterized as "Serruys' incident." We remain faithful to the resolutions arrived at in the economic conference at Geneva in 1927. The French Committee of Research for a European Customs Union, whose honorary president is M. Briand, and whose director is Senator Le Trocquer, has put before the Geneva delegations a proposition a part of which is devoted to recollection of the fact that the economic reconstruction of Europe has been retarded and even compromised by the continue delevation of customs tariffs, and the committee proclaimed vigorously that an end should be made of the tariff armament race which is characterized as a generator of an increasingly expensive standard of living. The idea of a customs truce is declared in keeping with this necessity if a state of economic peace is expected to supplant the present state of tariff war. Even a period of respite is impossible if the present conditions continue to prevail, remarked the committee.

Certainly the multiplication of ententes and cartels already represents an important result. But it is the towering customs barriers that remain the essential condition in the economic reconstruction of Europe. This committee asked, therefore, that "if it seems impossible to establish from now on concerted action of all the states represented at Geneva that the movement be at least toward the formation of groups constituted by people equally sensitive to economic development.

The French Democratic party will not renounce this theory of customs disarmament. This theory is an integral part of the system it has conceived for the establishment and maintenance of peace. With Richard Cobden we believe in the essential connection between the idea of peace and that of free trade.

Will Keep Up Fight.

We will not cease to pursue throughout Europe and in our own country a determined propaganda. Recently "The Customs Union" published an "economic atlas of Europe" the contents of which are well worth careful study. This economic Europe is at present composed of 35 states, amongst whom economic interdependence is manifest but who persist in ignoring the fact and who refuse to allow themselves entrance into a vast market of 5,400,000 square kilometers in area and with a clientele of 363,000,000 inhabitants without counting colonies.

Recently Joseph Caillaux in a notable article pleaded eloquently for the formation of this union. He cited the example of the United States of America who were wise enough to write into their Constitution clauses forbidding the erection of interior tariff walls. He invites us to recall the vigorous maxims of Cobden and Bastiat who describe free trade as "the great peace-maker." The present situation of Europe, wrote the former Premier, is a hopeless hubbub, an insult to common sense, a paradox which unaided is capable of shattering the coalition of all those possessed with high mindedness and foresight. Evidently emancipation from this condition necessitates condemning to death industries which have been artificially installed in various regions and numberless plethoric exploitations. Certainly such proposed changes will entail more than a mere shifting of wealth. We know that. But as Caillaux courageously said, "The suffering of human beings is the inevitable price of all progress. Europe is faced with an inexorable dilemma; to unite or dis appear."

The French Democratic party, ashamed as it is about the Geneva failure, will continue therefore its struggle against economic nationalism in Europe. It will defend the ideas of Briand against the policy of the Government to which our Minister of Foreign Affairs belongs today. Its ideal is the organization of one group of nations. The organization of Europe is only a step; it is the result of a historical process by which provinces have been welded into nations and which should now form Europe into one federation, as the United States, to whom we are indebted for so many examples, have formed in North America.

$50,000 REPAIRS TO 21ST ST. VIADUCT BY TERMINAL ROAD

City Probably to Pay for New $18,000 Deck; Work to Start April 1.

The Terminal Railroad has asked the city to remove the decking from the Twenty-first street viaduct over the Mill Creek valley rail yards, to make it possible to carry out necessary repairs to the steel structure. Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks said the removal work would start this week and that the city probably would have to bear the cost of a new deck—about $18,000. He expects the steel work to be started about April 1.

The Terminal and Missouri Pacific railroads agreed recently to pay for the reconstruction of the steel, estimated to cost $50,000, and made necessary because of corrosion of some parts under the blasts of years from locomotive smokestacks. The steel work beneath the roadway is to be given a protective coating of concrete, it has been planned.

HEARING ON PLANS FOR NEW REFORMATORY

Welfare Workers Invited to Attend Meeting of State Penal Board Wednesday.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 22.—A hearing on the location and design of the State Intermediate Reformatory for young first offenders will be held here Wednesday afternoon before the State Penal Board and members of an advisory committee appointed by Gov. Caulfield to aid the board in construction of the new institution. An appropriation of $750,000, made by the 1929 Legislature, was released by the Governor last month, and now is available for construction work.

Invitations to attend the hearing are being issued by Frank B. Jones, chairman of the State Penal Board, to representatives of various welfare organizations which have advocated establishment of such an institution, others interested in penal institutions, and to groups interested in sites proposed for the reformatory. The hearing will be held in the lounge of the House of Representatives in the Capitol.

The 1927 Legislature authorized establishment of the intermediate reformatory. The 1929 Legislature passed the appropriation for it to be used only if the money became available.

Transfers From Prison Possible.

The reformatory law provides that the institution shall be built on a site to be selected by the State Penal Board, and shall be for the confinement of first offenders, between the ages of 17 and 25, who have been convicted of felonies. The State Penal Board will have authority, subject to consent of the Governor in each instance, to transfer from the penitentiary to the intermediate reformatory, first-term convicts who were between the ages of 17 and 25 when convicted.

In addition to providing an institution for separation of young first-term convicts from hardened criminals, the intermediate reformatory, when completed, will aid in relieving over-crowding in the penitentiary. Of 3552 convicts committed to the penitentiary in 1927 and 1928, 1702 were between the ages of 17 and 25.

The law provides that the penal board shall obtain all possible information on the design of similar institutions in other states and the experience of those states with such institutions.

Gov. Caulfield appointed Hugh Stephens of Jefferson City, former vice chairman of the State Highway Commission, and Assistant Attorney-General Walter Sloat of Trenton, Mo., a former secretary of the Penal Board, as members of an advisory committee to work with the Penal Board on the reformatory plans.

Dozen Sites Inspected.

The Governor has said he believed the institution should be near Jefferson City, so that it could be more closely supervised by the Penal Board. About a dozen suggested sites have been inspected by the board and advisory committee in the vicinity of Jefferson City, Fulton, Kingdom City, California and Elden. All of the sites are within 40 miles of the penitentiary. So far none of the towns seeking the reformatory has offered a free site. On the contrary, the board believes the prices asked for the sites inspected are somewhat excessive. One tract of hilly land, little of which was under cultivation, was priced at approximately $100 an acre, which is higher than the price of nearby cultivated farm land. One site under consideration by the board is on one of the prison farms, already owned by the State, east of Jefferson City.

tween "hard" and "soft" news in the newspapers of Japan, and can tell of the part which the "jail editor" has played in the periodicals of various nations.

Seen in the daily discussions of Journalism Week, or at the social gatherings where local hospitality reinforces his welcome, Dean Williams appears a mixture of the Oriental sage and the modern stage director. As a speaker, on the platform or at the dinner table, he has the skill of the entertainer, and the charm of natural and universal friendliness. Few who hear him know of his long fight, in early years, to overcome a vocal disability.

Considered for Senator to Succeed Stone.

At nearly every election in recent years, someone has been impressed by the idea that Dean Williams should run for Governor, or for United States Senator, and suggestions of that nature have been printed from time to time. The man not only has not sought the office, but he has dodged the office when it sought him. He had enough of political life, he relates, in his brief stay at Jefferson City, in the period of experiment and transition between his Boonville and Columbia editorial positions.

A senatorship became vacant in 1918, when Senator Stone died. Dean Williams was one of three to whom Gov. Gardner, a Democrat, offered the short-term appointment. Judge Graves declined because he wished to remain on the State Supreme Court; David R. Francis could not leave his post as Ambassador to Russia; and Dean Williams decided that he could be of more public service, and could get more personal satisfaction, in the Dean's chair than in the Senate. The fact that the place had been offered to him did not become publicly known until several years later.

He was for years a member of the Columbia School Board, and mention of this fact completes the list of his public positions.

Dean Williams' first wife died in 1918, leaving a son and a daughter. An older son died in 1912. He was married in 1927 to Miss Sara Lockwood, a graduate of the School of Journalism and later an instructor there.

To the expressed regret of the governor of the Bank of England, Stewart is soon, for personal reasons, to retire from his post and return to New York. His successor will be O. M. W. Sprague, a professor of banking at Harvard.

Stewart was born 44 years ago. He went to the University of Missouri from Neosho, Mo., and received his A. B. degree in 1909. He did newspaper work for a year and then returned to the university as a teacher of economics. In 1916 he joined the economics faculty at Amherst, where he remained till the famous Meiklejohn upheaval of 1922

LAYMEN APPARENTLY LIKE MODERN CUBISM

Absence of Freakishness Impresses Visitors to Carnegie Exhibition.

Visitors at City Art Museum since the Carnegie International Exhibition of modern paintings opened two weeks ago who have expected to find amusement in regarding extreme examples of modernism such as the one which won second prize at a New York exhibit last winter although it was accidentally hung sideways, have been impressed with the absence of such freak pictures in the present exhibition.

Of futurism, a technique popular a few years ago, there is not a trace among the 253 canvases, and cubism influenced the work of not more than a half dozen of the painters whose works are shown. Three English artists make the most outright use of cubism, but even these paintings are intelligible to the layman.

Particularly is this true of the pictures of C. R. W. Nevinson, England's official artist during the World War. In his "Soul of a Soulless City," a view from the rear platform of a New York L,"" grain, effective use of planes and angles is made to create the illusion that the scene shown is rapidly receding. William Roberts used cubism to strip the characters of his pictures of all personal characteristics so that they become symbols of strata of society rather than individuals, and Paul Nash, in several landscapes, resorts to that method to achieve the greatest simplicity.

Laymen in fact seem to be giving popular approval to modified cubism in their apparent liking for the paintings of Tamara Lempicka, the Polish artist. Although no count of ballots has been made attendants have noted a seeming preponderance of votes have been cast for her pictures, in the contest to determine the most popular canvas. In each of her three pictures cubism appears in the background and in the painting of the garments worn by her subjects.

Senator Nye Introduces Resolution of Tribute.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The naming of a mountain peak in Mount McKinley National Park in Alaska, in honor of Carl Ben Eielson, has been asked in a resolution introduced today by Senator Nye (Rep.), North Dakota.

RAPHAEL SOLD TO CHICAGOAN

NEW YORK, March 22.—Raphael's "Portrait of the Parmesan," secretary of Pope Julius II, has just been sold by a New York dealer to an anonymous Chicago connoisseur. The painting is expected to be placed on loan exhibition at the Chicago museum.

The price paid for the picture was not disclosed, but Dr. Robert B. Harshe, director of the Chicago Museum, said yesterday by telephone: "I understand that Baron Rothschild offered $500,000 for this portrait some time ago and his offer was refused." The picture is said to come from the collection of an Austrian nobleman.

Artists Guild Has Costume Ball in Alhambra Setting

Model of Castle of Moorish Kings Is Scene of Brilliant Party; Red and Yellow Color Scheme Used.

"A NIGHT in the Alhambra" was the title given the annual costume ball last night at the Artists Guild at which the artists and their guests were transported from their workaday world to a model of the famous castle of Moorish kings of Spain, which was built into the guild structure.

Entering through the main doorway the guests, attired appropriately as turbaned Arab shieks, gay Spaniards and gypsies, found themselves in a luxurious room of the castle, overlooking a court yard of fountains. Twelfth century Moorish architecture was exemplified in huge gilded archways with colorful supporting pillars, through which the tops of Mohammedan mosques and temples could be seen in the distance, with myriads of stars overhead.

Color was added by strips of red and yellow, the colors of the Morroccan flag, which diffused the ceiling lights.

The pageant began with the appearance of the Sultan, E. Oscar Thalinger, the Sultana, Mildred Bailey Carpenter, and their entourage, who, after greeting their guests, seated themselves on a balcony converted by means of Persian rugs and shawls into a royal box where they viewed the entertainment provided for them. At one end of the room an arrangement of rugs and draperies afforded an Oriental background for the performers.

In a prologue and epilogue, spoken by Eric Applewhite, the story of the advent of the Moors into Spain from their native Arabia was told, and their subsequent departure when the last King of Granada gave up the keys to the fortified castle and returned to the desert, asserting that "Those dogs, the Christians, are making a pig-sty of Spain."

Then in turn there appeared bands of gypsies in frenzied dances, playing wild music on queer native instruments; a fire dance by a native Algerian imported for the occasion, garbed in burnoose, tunic and baggy trousers; a comic modern version of Othello with Noel Grady as the Moor, and Percy Ramsey as Desdemona, and Gordon Sommers and Dr. Downey Harris, as Nubian slaves, in a pantomime of wooden soldiers in battle.

Preceding the pageant a supper was served in the rathskeller of the club transformed into an old Spanish inn. The natural stone arches of the room lent themselves well as a setting for refrectory tables covered with red checked cloths, on which stood old Spanish brass candelabra filled with red tapers and brass bowls of red tulips and yellow lilies.

Flags of Morocco and Spain were hung under the arched windows and the pillars were wound with red and yellow material in the same tones. A corner of an old Spanish garden, with its stone well surrounded by pots of flowering geraniums was arranged at one side, and to the left of it stood a part of a wall covered with trailing vines.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

Dandy Way to Tint Gray Hair

By MONA EVERS

I don't blame any woman for wanting to do something about gray, faded or streaked hair because there is nothing that makes one look older

Whenever I am asked for a method of restoring gray hair I invariably recommend nothing more or less than a mixture of good old sage tea and sulphur. Common garden sage, when properly brewed and mixed with sulphur and a little alcohol, makes a wonderful recolorer of gray hair. You can either prepare the mixture at home yourself, or more conveniently, buy it already prepared and ready to use. All druggists carry it in the form of Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur, and since the cost is only 75c a bottle, there is really no need to prepare it yourself.

You simply moisten a comb or soft brush with it and draw it through your hair, one strand at a time. One application banishes the gray and one or two more completely restores your hair to its original color, so evenly so naturally that no one can possibly tell you have used it. Everyone who tries Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur tells me he, or she, gets perfect results, so I don't hesitate to pass the secret on to others.

Healthiest!

"My little daughter is about the healthiest girl I know," says Mrs. H. Mitchellette, 4030 Chouteau Ave., St. Louis. "And I want to give credit where it is due.

"Kathryn was constipated several years ago and I gave her California Fig Syrup. It helped her so wonderfully that I have used it ever since for all her upsets or as a laxative during colds. It has kept her strong, energetic, rugged."

Children suffer when bowels aren't regular. Breath becomes unpleasant, tongue coated, eyes dull. When these symptoms are neglected, biliousness, feverishness, lack of appetite invariably follow.

The first dose of California Fig Syrup relieves these symptoms and activates sluggish bowels. Successive doses help tone and strengthen weak bowels; improve appetite; encourage digestion and assimilation. Try it with a bilious, headachy, constipated child and see how it helps!

The pure vegetable product, endorsed by doctors for 50 years, always bears the name California. So look for it when buying.

Only My Maid has seen me Use a Lipstick

—says film famous Myrna Loy, renowned for the exquisite perfection of her lips. "Before I used Kissproof, I always carried a lipstick with me and seemed to be fussing with it every few minutes. How that used to irritate my director! Now no one ever sees me make-up my lips because I only use lipstick once a day."

Miss Loy is one of the 5,000,000 Kissproof users who do not make-up their lips in public. See for yourself how unnecessary it is to constantly retouch your lips, by trying Kissproof today. It will instantly tint them with youth's own glow—give them a loveliness that lasts and lasts. At all toilet counters.

PROMOTER'S WIDOW WINS ESTATE FIGHT

Move to Oust Mrs. Dorothy Hyland as Administratrix Overruled.

Mrs. Dorothy Hyland, 7112 Westmoreland drive, University City, will continue in charge of the estate of her husband, "Marty" Hyland, promoter of the Madison Kennel Club and other dog tracks throughout the country.

A motion demanding her removal as administratrix was overruled yestreday by Probate Judge Hodgdon at Clayton. The motion had been filed by Hyland's sisters, Mrs. Mary Martin and Mrs. Catherine McClurkin, who asserted the widow was concealing assets to defraud them of their rightful share of the estate.

Although the widow inventoried the estate at $64,000, it is worth at least $213,500, the sisters alleged. Mrs. Hyland in her inventory omitted mention of dog track holdings because she declared Hyland had transferred them to her prior to his death.

Mrs. Hyland was receiving dividends of $30,000 a week from the Madison Kennel Club, near Collinsville, and $25,000 from the Hawthorne Kennel Club, near Chicago, the sisters avered. To which Mrs. Hyland retorted: "They don't know what they are talking about. They don't seem to know how much money that is." The Hawthorne track was closed at the time, last July, and the Madison track later closed, but preparations are under way to reopen it this spring.

Probate Judge Hodgdon told reporters he understood Hyland's sisters did not present their full case before him as they plan to take an appeal to the Circuit Court.

Stations on KSD's Wave Get Power Increases

Cincinnati and North Dakota Transmitters to Use 1000 Watts "Experimentally" — WOS Asks for 5000 Watts and Channel Change—WBBM Hits at Cleared Wave Lengths.

WKRC, Cincinnati, which for months has been reported as causing interference operating with KSD on the 550-kilocycle channel, has been given a license by the Federal Radio Commission to cover a construction permit for an increase in power from 500 to 1000 watts experimentally and to install new equipment.

KFYR, Bismarck, N. D., which also operates on 550 kilocycles, has been granted an increase in power from 500 to 1000 watts experimentally. If interference results, the Radio Commission says, KFYR must return to using 500 watts.

Attorneys for WBBM, Chicago, have filed a brief with the Federal Radio Commission, asking the board to duplicate stations on 10 of the cleared channels. The brief was in connection with an application by WBBM to operate full time, instead of share time, as now, with KFAB, Nebraska. The WBBM lawyers contend that, because of Chicago's geographical location, the city is entitled to as many high powered stations as may be permissible under law.

WHP, Harrisburg, Pa., and WCAH, Columbus, O., have been authorized to attempt synchronization, or simultaneous operation, on 1430 kc. in the early morning hours.

The Federal Radio Commission is informed that J. N. Kincaid, a wealthy San Antonio cattleman, plans to erect a 5000-watt station in Mexico, just across the border. The commission could do nothing about it, though it could prevent a studio from being operated in this country.

KSTP, St. Paul, Minn., has been given a permit to build a 16,000-watt transmitter, but must operate it at only 10,000 watts.

A hearing has been set on an application in behalf of WOS, Jefferson City, Mo., to increase power to 5000 watts, change from 630 to 860 kc. and put its transmitter six miles out from Jefferson City.

A hearing has been set on the application of WDOD, Chattanooga, Tenn., to increase power from 1000 to 10,000 watts and to shift from 1280 to 970 kc.

WSAI, Cincinnati, is seeking an increase from 500 to 1000 watts. This station, which operates on 1330 kc., has a 5000-watt transmitter, which was operated with that power until the Nov. 11, 1928, allocation cut it to a tenth of its rating.

Programs From Canada on Chain Twice Weekly

On Sunday, April 6, a two-program-a-week schedule from the studios of CKGW, Toronto, Canada, will be broadcast through stations in the NBC chain headed by WJZ.

Both programs will be sponsored by the Canadian Pacific Railways, and each will be half an hour long. They will be unlike in type, although designed for popular appeal.

Programs in the two international series will be presented on Sunday and Wednesday nights. The Sunday night series will bring favorite ballad operas presented by a group of the Dominion's best vocalists. The Wednesday night programs will consist of modern dance music by Fred Cully's Royal York Hotel Orchestra.

The program for Sunday, April 6, will be composed of selections from Frederick William Wallace's sea-chantey opera, "Bound for the Rio Grande." Each broadcast in this series will begin at 8:15.

Alfred Heather, a noted Canadian musician, has been engaged to direct the presentations in this series. Among the ballad operas scheduled are, "The Beggars' Opera," popular for 200 years; the first act of "Hugh the Drover," and "'Round the Campfire," in which old trail-rider songs will be incorporated.

Attorneys for WBBM, Chicago, have filed a brief with the Federal Radio Commission, asking the board to duplicate stations on 10 of the cleared channels. The brief was in connection with an application by WBBM to operate full time, instead of share time, as now, with KFAB, Nebraska. The WBBM lawyers contend that, because of Chicago's geographical location, the city is entitled to as many high powered stations as may be permissible under law.

WHP, Harrisburg, Pa., and WCAH, Columbus, O., have been authorized to attempt synchronization, or simultaneous operation, on 1430 kc. in the early morning hours.

The Federal Radio Commission is informed that J. N. Kincaid, a wealthy San Antonio cattleman, plans to erect a 5000-watt station in Mexico, just across the border. The commission could do nothing about it, though it could prevent a studio from being operated in this country.

KSTP, St. Paul, Minn., has been given a permit to build a 16,000-watt transmitter, but must operate it at only 10,000 watts.

A hearing has been set on an application in behalf of WOS, Jefferson City, Mo., to increase power to 5000 watts, change from 630 to 860 kc. and put its transmitter six miles out from Jefferson City.

A hearing has been set on the application of WDOD, Chattanooga, Tenn., to increase power from 1000 to 10,000 watts and to shift from 1280 to 970 kc.

WSAI, Cincinnati, is seeking an increase from 500 to 1000 watts. This station, which operates on 1330 kc., has a 5000-watt transmitter, which was operated with that power until the Nov. 11, 1928, allocation cut it to a tenth of its rating.

WWAE, Hammond, Ind., asks for an increase from 1000 to 5000 watts.

Programs From Canada on Chain Twice Weekly

On Sunday, April 6, a two-program-a-week schedule from the studios of CKGW, Toronto, Canada, will be broadcast through stations in the NBC chain headed by WJZ.

Both programs will be sponsored by the Canadian Pacific Railways, and each will be half an hour long. They will be unlike in type, although designed for popular appeal.

Programs in the two international series will be presented on Sunday and Wednesday nights. The Sunday night series will bring favorite ballad operas presented by a group of the Dominion's best vocalists. The Wednesday night programs will consist of modern dance music by Fred Cully's Royal York Hotel Orchestra.

The program for Sunday, April 6, will be composed of selections from Frederick William Wallace's sea-chantey opera, "Bound for the Rio Grande." Each broadcast in this series will begin at 8:15.

Alfred Heather, a noted Canadian musician, has been engaged to direct the presentations in this series. Among the ballad operas scheduled are, "The Beggars' Opera," popular for 200 years; the first act of "Hugh the Drover," and "Round the Campfire," in which old trail-rider songs will be incorporated.

Where Engineers Are Building World's Highest Automobile Route

MOUNT EVANS, 14,260 feet in altitude, is the snow-covered peak just at the left of the center of this photograph. The view is from the "Window Ledge" along the highway to the summit. When completed, this road will be the highest in the world, exceeding the height of the famous Pikes Peak highway out of Colorado Springs. By next June motorists will be able to drive from Denver, Colo., to the top of Mount Evans in about two hours and a half, traversing Denver's widely known mountain parks system.

'Connie' Mack in Broadcast

Will Be Featured With De Wolfe Hopper on KSD—Bori in Radio Concert Thursday.

CONNIE MACK, manager of the world series champion Athletics team; De Wolfe Hopper, star on the American stage for half a century, and Graham McNamee, announcer, will take part in the General Motors broadcast over KSD tomorrow night. Mack is to make his radio debut with a talk about baseball. Hopper will recite "Casey at the Bat." McNamee is to recall noteworthy incidents and plays.

The part that Thomas Jefferson played in drafting the Constitution will be portrayed in an American School of the Air broadcast over the Columbia chain at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon.

A special version of "The Violin Maker of Cremona," adapted by Jerome K. Jerome from the French of Francois Coppee, is to be broadcast in the Eveready period over KSD Tuesday night. Public interest in Cremona is centered on a contest to decide who shall succeed Taddea Ferrari, master maker of violins. Ferrari has offered the hand of his pretty daughter to the apprentice who shall fashion "the sweetest violin in all Cremona." The play has a striking denouement.

Allyn Joslyn, stage associate of John Barrymore, will play the role of Filippo, the hunchback with lofty soul and the fine integrity of the true artist. Rosaline Green will play Ferrari's daughter. Frederick Forrester will be the Ferrari, and Charles Warburton will play Sandro.

Grace Hayes and Jeanette Loff, two of the better singers in the motion pictures, are to be featured with Paul Whiteman's orchestra on KMOX Tuesday night.

Alfred O'Shea, an Irish tenor, who has won fame in opera abroad, is to be soloist in the Libby concert over KWK Tuesday evening.

Lois Bennett, soprano, and Lewis James, tenor, are to sing in the Mobiloil concert over KSD Wednesday night. Trowbridge Callaway, president of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, is to be the speaker in the Halsey Stuart broadcast over KSD Wednesday night. The Sunshine Boys, a widely known radio team, are billed for the Van Heusen broadcast over KMOX Wednesday evening.

Maj. C. E. Russell, U. S. intelligence officer during the World War, and a special company of actors will broadcast "The Sunken Road," a play based on happenings in the Chemin des Dames salient in France, in the Philco period over KMOX Wednesday night.

A national high school chorus of 300 pupils will sing in an American school of the air program, dedicated to the Music Supervisors' National Conference, at 1:30 Thursday afternoon. The program is to illustrate music of the 18th, 19th and 20th centuries.

Lucrezia Bori, the Spanish star of the Metropolitan Opera, is to be soloist in the R.C.A.-Victor Hour over KSD Thursday night. She will sing an aria from "Louise," the Strauss waltz, "Tales of the Vienna Woods," a song by Grieg, one by Edward German and four songs from Spain.

Road Up Mt. Evans, Highest In World, Nears Completion

DENVER, Colo., March 22.

A DRIVE over the highest automobile road in the world, a one-day round-trip from Denver, will be a new thrill that visitors to Colorado will be able to enjoy during the coming summer. The last mile of the highway, which reaches the summit of Mount Evans, will be finished this spring by the Colorado State Highway Department. As soon as completed it will be opened to the public and visitors will be allowed to traverse the final, crowning stretch.

Construction of this amazing scenic road, which ascends two miles above the capital of Colorado in a continuous series of loops, curves and hairpin turns, was begun 10 years ago by the State Highway Department and the city of Denver. It is a continuation of the Denver Mountain Parks system and branches from the circle trip through the Mountain Parks to Bergen Park, 30 miles from the city. Its total length is 66 miles.

Construction of the last few miles has been accomplished in the face of many difficulties. Because of the high altitude the workmen could only labor slowly in the rarefied air. The granite formation of the mountain required considerable blasting with powder and the moving of quantities of rock. Then, too, the working season was short. The building of the last mile of roadway was begun last September, but early heavy snows compelled cessation. This will be resumed early in the spring and probably will be finished by June.

The road will end in a saddle just below the mass of granite blocks that top the summit of the peak, the altitude of which is 14,260 feet above sea level. Heretofore the highest automobile road has been that up Pikes Peak, 14,110 feet in elevation.

The drive to Mt. Evans, named

Pungent Odor of Burning Brush and Leaves in Air As Annual Seasonal Cleanup Occurs.

LONG ribbons of flames are racing across the Ozark hills, there is the pungent odor of burning leaves in the fresh spring air, but these forest fires do not portend danger. Closely guarded, they have been set purposely to sweep the forests clean of dead leaves and debris accumulated through a long hard winter. This annual spring cleanup of the Ozark country removes obstructions for a fresh growth of grass and flowers.

The first call of spring in the Ozarks is not the clarion chorus of the red-breasted robin. It is not the redbird who perches in the highest treetop to send a note across to his mate on the adjacent ridge, nor the skimming thrush on the ground, nor even the barefoot boy who goes down the winding road with fishing pole and bucket of worms, that foretell the coming of spring in the Ozark hills.

The Ozarkian goes in for more spectacular things to announce the return of green grass and growing things; of dogwood trees bursting white on the steep slopes, and redbuds coloring the hills and hollows, fading out the cedars and pines that stood out so prominently in otherwise naked winter forests.

Travelers along the Ozark highways in March and April are provided with an inspiring view of a great outdoor ritual—this annual burning of leaves and undergrowth. It is an event shared by every man, woman and child who lives in the hills. To them it is a work of love. It is a message they send to the outside world that another season the ridges and hollows have their usefulness, and masters of this domain aim to see that it is duly and truly performed.

In the autumn, when the oaks are covered with their fiery leaves and the forests are alive with brilliant hues, it would seem a pity that such splashes of color should pass from view. But leaves will fall and limbs will clutter up the ground, and grass will not grow unless the barriers are burned away.

So by a mutual agreement, a time is set when the first winds from the south sweep across these low-lying hills for fires to be set on ridges and in valleys; for families to assemble to guard these lines of rapid moving flames, protecting houses, barns and livestock by fighting fire with fire. And only after the country has been seared and blackened has the job been finished.

Often these fires will be miles in length and hundreds of men and women armed with wet sacks, pitchforks and other crude fire fighting equipment will follow behind these walls of flame. Wild animals of the forest have a hard time of it making their escape, more especially the rabbits who live in old logs and under low hanging cedar bushes. Foxes and coons make for the river bottoms and hide close to the water's edge; birds leave the country for a time, and livestock must be kept in barn lots and fed.

But then the spring rains will

States Plan To Increase Expenditure For Roads

Plea of President Hoover to Help in Reduction of Unemployment Causes Rise of $250,000,000 in Program for 1930—Total to Be Spent Is $1,601,167,455, Covering 32,532 Miles of Highways.

Co-operating with President Hoover in his plea to enlarge all construction programs as much as is practicable, to ameliorate the unemployment situation, the states and their counties will spend in their road building programs for 1930 at least $250,000,000 more than they spent in 1929.

Reports received from State highway departments and compiled by the United States Bureau of Public Roads, show that State and local authorities plan to spend $1,601,167,455 for highway improvement in 1930.

The planned expenditure by State highway departments for construction and maintenance of State highways is $937,500,455; the balance, $663,667,000, will be spent, according to estimates, on local roads and bridges. Highway officials of 45 States estimate the total length of roads to be improved by them in 1930 as 32,532 miles, an increase of 2126 miles over the 1929 programs. Three states failed to report contemplated mileages for 1930.

The various highway departments will control the maintenance of 281,393 miles of highways this year, an increase of 32,381 over the mileage under State maintenance in 1929. Gradually, the states are taking over into their systems for maintenance the more important county and local roads of the country.

Eastern States Lead.

The states of greatest population and industrialization in which unemployment, naturally, is greatest, show the highest contemplated expenditures. The Middle Atlantic states, comprising New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, plan to spend $374,835,310 on improvement of state and local roads; the East North Central states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, plan to spend $303,696,000.

The West North Central states, including Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas, rank third in their contemplated expenditure of $236,461,727, and the South Atlantic states of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, with an expenditure of $182,872,418, rank fourth; the West South Central states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas, rank fifth, with an expenditure of $154,100,000; and the Pacific states, comprising Washington, Oregon and California, rank sixth, with an expenditure of $121,590,000.

Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi, making up the East South Central group, plan to spend $101,992,000 on state and local road improvement; Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut in the New England group plan to spend $75,430,000; and the mountain states of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Nevada, $50,190,000.

Declares Skidding Not So Serious in Front-Drive Cars

In answer to the question as to whether front-wheel-drive cars will need chains to prevent skidding, P. M. Heldt, speaking before the Society of Automotive Engineers, said:

"There has been much discussion as to skidding and the relative difficulty of driving with front-drive and rear-drive cars. In my opinion, the front-wheel skid is not nearly as serious as the rear-wheel skid. A front-wheel skid can occur with front-wheel-drive cars if the engine is throttled while making a turn. That is the usual thing to do and it works all right with rear-drive cars, but it must not be done with front-drive cars, because it makes the engine ace as a very powerful brake. The momentum tends to carry the car along at a certain speed, and the front wheels cannot revolve so fast because the engine is holding them back. The result is a front-wheel skid; the front wheels, instead of moving in the direction in which they are deflected, will slide at an angle thereto. The front-wheel skid can be corrected by opening the throttle or releasing the clutch, and the clutch should not be engaged again quickly. A rear-wheel skid, once started, is hard to correct."

Graham Enters Lower-Priced Field With '6

Four-Window Sedan Sells at $845, Factory; Other Models Range to $895.

Graham is entering a lower price field, with new body models on the standard six chassis. A four-door four-window sedan at a list price of $845, and a four-door six-window sedan at $895, both five-passenger cars, are to be known respectively as the town sedan and the universal sedan. The former is $150 lower in price than any four-door sedan previously available on the new Graham chassis. Other new body models of the standard six line are the business coupe at $845, and the rumble-seat coupe at $895, prices f. o. b. the factory.

The new models share with all other Graham sixes and eights the safety feature of laminated shatter-proof safety glass in every door and window, as well as in the windshields.

The last three years the Graham brothers have perfected their manufacturing processes—engineering, chassis construction and body building, and acquired the manufacturing volume afforded by more than 160,000 owners.

The Graham quality evidenced in the town sedan is the culmination of the ideals which have guided the Grahams throughout their manufacturing career of a quarter of a century. In the town sedan they offer, on a 115-inch wheelbase, a full five-passenger car with four wide doors and a roomy, sturdy, Graham-built body in which are incorporated many exclusive features of construction that insure long life.

Develops 66 Horsepower.

Both cars are powered by a six-cylinder motor which develops 66 actual brake horsepower. The power plant is the sturdy and economical Graham motor perfected and refined. Its more prominent features are the seven-bearing crankshaft, interchangeable bronze backed main bearings, pressure lubrication, four-point suspension and the cushioning of the rear engine mountings on rubber.

All main, connecting rod and camshaft bearings, as well as the timing chair, water pump shaft and valve tappets are lubricated from a submerged gear pump. A guarded flat tube and fin radiator of ample size cools the water, which is circulated by a chain-driven centrifugal pump. The cylinders are water-jacketed the full length of the bores and the cooling system includes a thermostat.

Speedy getaway in traffic has been provided for by an expanding vane type carburetor with built-in accelerating pump, which automatically insures a proper fuel mixture at all times. The fuel pump is mechanically driven and mounted on the engine. Before entering the carburetor, all gasoline passes through a filter, and all air passes through an air cleaner, while special intake and exhaust manifold provide even distribution of properly mixed fuel to all cylinders.

The most important mechanical change is the adoption of an advanced form of manifold heat control which regulates the temperature of the fuel mixture. This heat control was developed by Graham engineers and was first shown on the new Graham eight-cylinder cars this year. It proved so advantageous in use that it has been adapted to both six-cylinder engines in the standard three-sped chassis and the special four-speed chassis.

Four-Wheel Hydraulic Brakes.

Instantaneous control is afforded by extra large hydraulic four-wheel brakes of the internal type, which function smoothly at all speeds and which require little servicing. Adjustment, when it does become necessary, is readily effected from the outside, and since the brake mechanism is fully enclosed, it is not affected by water, dust or ice.

The interior trim and fittings of both the town sedan and the universal sedan have been worked out to accord with Graham closed car standards in every respect. The upholstery of the backs and seat cushions is in broadcloth. The side walls and head lining match in color. The interior equipment includes a moire curtain at the rear window, carpet-covered footrest, wind cord around all door openings, shirred pockets on the right front and left rear doors, dome light and robe rail. The instrument board is in black lacquer, finished with an embossed panel in blue, and the garnish moldings and wainscoting panels are of metal with black eggshell finish.

In common with all Graham cars, the new bodies are equipped with adjustable front seats, and with two-position rear seats. The clutch and brake pedals also are adjustable. The combination of adjustable pedals and movable front seat permits one to obtain a comfortable driving position.

The exterior appearance of Graham's latest offerings is strikingly new and graceful. Radiators retain the V-shaped contour which has always been a distinguishing feature of Graham cars, but their outline is new. The chromium-plated shell sweeps across the front at top and bottom in harmonious curves. The tie bar supporting the front lamps enhances the general effect, since it is arched, and at its center has been placed the Graham emblem.

Farmers Own Many Autos.

Of the 6,500,000 farmers in the United States, 5,500,000 enjoy the advantages of town life because of automobiles. One-fourth of the total number of cars in the country are owned by farmers.

S. W. Gross Discusses Quality Embodied in New Graham 'Six'

Distributer Declares New Model Offers Numerous Exclusive Features.

In offering their new town sedan, universal sedan and business and sport coupes, the three Graham brothers are going further in giving the public quality at a price or less than $1000, delivered in the St. Louis territory, than any other manufacturer has so far attempted, according to Sol W. Gross, president of the Gross-Butler Motor Co., local Graham-Paige representative.

"When it is considered these cars have a 115-inch wheelbase and weigh 3175 pounds—several hundred pounds more than any other automobile at or near its price class—one can realize the sturdiness and riding qualities which are built into the car," Gross said.

"In the matter of bearing area, cooling surface and capacity they have equipped these cars far more generously than would appear necessary, but long life and absence of owner repair bills, resulting in very low operating cost and high resale value, are the several objects of these unusual precautions.

"In a little more than two years the products of the three Graham brothers have made enviable records in the foreign fields, where owners, especially in Europe, buy with the idea of driving their cars at least four or five years. High quality materials and superior individual workmanship are the greatest factors in producing long life in an automobile, so it is little wonder that the Graham brothers have made the great strides in export which they have."

The Grahams, according to Gross, feel that American buyers, like those in Europe, are now seeking higher quality in the lower-priced motor cars—cars that will run 75,000 to 100,000 miles.

"To accomplish this," he added, "it is necessary to build with a high degree of precision, to furnish larger bearings, sturdier frames and axles, stronger bodies, more generous lubrication and cooling—in short, to build a bigger, stronger and finer quality of vehicle than has heretofore been offered to the public in the less than $1000 price field.

"This they have done in these new cars in a great degree—in a degree that only the Graham would or could do because of their complete financial and operating control of their business, a willingness to make less profit per car and a real determination to forge ahead in the industry on the principle of quality automobiles in the low-priced field."

Low-Priced 'Delivery Roadster'

Roadster Delivery Model Introduced By Chevrolet Co.

In order to meet the requirements of its commercial car business, the Chevrolet Motor Co. announces a roadster delivery model to supplement its present line. It is now in production.

Designed to satisfy the needs of every variety of pick-up work, the roadster delivery makes an added form of transportation available to the users of commercial cars and provides some features new to this field.

Powered by the six-cylinder valve-in-head Chevrolet engine, the new delivery unit has the advantages of passenger car comfort, economy and dependability, according to officials. It has internal-expanding brakes on all four wheels, an easy ball bearing steering mechanism and a bigger, sturdier rear axle.

Extra large carrying capacity has been provided through the use of the full length channel steel frame and four unusually long semi-elliptic springs. It allows for the use of a 66-inch loading space, without excessive overhand. It is a pick-up 45 inches wide, 14 inches high and 24 cubic feet in capacity.

From a convenience standpoint, the roadster delivery offers exceptionally wide doors, equipped with snugly fitting side-curtains, that open and close with the doors as single units.

The third change is the promotion of William Coborn to sales manager. He was formerly assistant sales manager.

McDonald declared he was gratified at the acceptance in this city of the new Nash line, which includes the single six, the twin-ignition six and the twin-ignition eight. come, flowers will burst forth in the forests and grass will then have no obstruction to grow tall and lush for the grazing herd. When this great outdoor ritual is over and the balmy air from the south fans the log cabin settlements; then comes the Johnny-jump-up, sweet Williams, butter cups and a hundred other kindred wild flowers; then blooms the alabaster white dogwood and the purple redwood backed up by a field of green from oak leaves just putting out their summer's growth. Here one stands amid a riot of colors, beneath the dome of a deep blue sky. Everywhere are winding clear streams. Nightly over a dozen or more Ozark counties the sky is lighted as in celebration of some wonderful event. The Ozarks are broadcasting to the world the coming of another spring.

Metal Tire Covers

Metal tire covers, which serve the two-fold purpose of protection and ornament, have been introduced to local motorists for the first time. The cover is made in two parts—a circular metal plate which fits around the side wall of the tire, and a ring fitting closely around the tread. Color harmony with the individual car is made possible, as covers are available with chromium plated, black enamel or primer coated side plate. Any color desired may be applied over the primer coating.

F. S. Wiemeyer Co., 2623 Locust street, is the local distributer.

Roadster Delivery Model Introduced By Chevrolet Co.

In order to meet the requirements of its commercial car business, the Chevrolet Motor Co. announces a roadster delivery model to supplement its present line. It is now in production.

Designed to satisfy the needs of every variety of pick-up work, the roadster delivery makes an added form of transportation available to the users of commercial cars and provides some features new to this field.

Powered by the six-cylinder valve-in-head Chevrolet engine, the new delivery unit has the advantages of passenger car comfort, economy and dependability, according to officials. It has internal-expanding brakes on all four wheels; an easy ball bearing steering mechanism and a bigger, sturdier rear axle.

Extra large carrying capacity has been provided through the use of the full length channel steel frame and four unusually long semi-elliptic springs. It allows for the use of a 66-inch loading space, without excessive overhand. It is a full 45 inches wide, 14 inches high and 24 cubic feet in capacity.

From a convenience standpoint, the roadster delivery offers exceptionally wide doors, equipped with snugly fitting side-curtains, that open and close with the doors as single units.

after John Evans, second territorial Governor of Colorado, maintains an average width of 20 feet and has a maximum grade of 6 per cent. In making the ascent the motorist first drives up the famous Lariat Trail on Lookout Mountain, which presents alternating views of mountain peaks, rocky gorges and the great plains to the eastward. On the summit of Lookout Monutain is buried Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) and Mrs. Cody. Near their graves is the Cody Memorial Museum, a rustic lodge filled with personal relics of the famous scout. "Buffalo Bill" was buried there the year that the Mount Evans highway was started.

The last 25 miles of the drive remain continuously above 10,000 feet in elevation. Directly below the summit, but 1600 feet down, is Summit Lake, in probably the only municipal mountain park in the country above timber line, yet four and five pound trout are found in this lake. Adjacent to Mt. Evans is Mt. Bierstadt, named after the painter, Albert Bierstadt. On this 14,000-foot monster is a small lake that is always frozen over, said by experienced mountain climbers to be the highest lake in the United States.

A variation is offered on the return trip, the road branching from Echo Lake Mountain Park and descending Chicago Creek to Idaho Springs, where the first important gold discovery in Colorado was made. A road recently constructed there illustrates the new type of mountain scenic road being built in the West. Smooth as a billiard table, it permits four cars to travel abreast.

Accidents Are Costly.

The economic loss from motor vehicle accidents throughout the United States during the past six years has cost every individual in the country $25. The total loss is estimated at more than $3,000,000,000.

Gilpin also announced the appointment of Ray W. Jansen, a St. Louisan, as assistant zone manager here. He succeeds A. F. Diederich, who has been transferred to Wichita, Kan.

Jansen was assistant zone manager at Memphis for three years. He is known in St. Louis sport circles.

Oakland Conquers Ozark Test Grade

Another of America's steep "motor test" grades has succumbed before the high-gear power of the new Oakland eight. The scene of Oakland's latest conquest was the abrupt Crest street hill at Hot Springs, Ark., health and pleasure resort in the Ozarks.

Carrying six passengers, including newspaper observers and city officials, the Oakland started the climb after making a right angle turn into the 20 per cent grade at the foot of Crest Hill. Accelerating steadily in high gear up the 900-foot grade, the car went over the top at a speed of 30 miles per hour.

Missourian Tells of Selling Natives Motor Cars in Orient

Dewey W. Smith, Son of Secretary of State Fair, Holds Three Major Road Records in India; A Visitor in St. Louis Last Week.

SELLING motor cars in the Far East, where a car that would cost $1000 in St. Louis retails at $1700 or $1800, requires everything from a knowledge of the native dialects and religions to a perception of local political trends, according to Dewey W. Smith, who has spent 11 years in India, China, Japan and other less known countries and who passed through St. Louis last week. He was on his way to Sedalia, Mo., to visit his father, W. D. Smith, secretary of the Missouri State Fair.

Smith went to the Orient to work in one of the branches of the National City Bank of New York. After five years of banking, he became connected with the export division of the Graham-Paige Corporation. For the last two years he has been supervisor of far eastern territories for the Studebaker Pierce-Arrow Export Corporation.

Aside from his regular work of touring his extensive territory at least once a year, Smith has found time to set three major road records in India. In a Studebaker President 8, he drove from Calcutta to Bombay, a distance of 1466 miles, in 41 hours and 15 minutes, cutting six hours from the previous best time. His run from Bombay to Delhi, 966 miles, was made in 21 hours. He also holds the road record between Madras and Ooty.

High Duty on Automobiles.

"In India there is a duty of 30 per cent on automobiles imported into the country," Smith related. "In China it is 25 per cent and in Japan 35. The impost is levied on the value of the car when it lands in those countries, with the cost of freight added."

The former Missourian considers India and Japan his two best markets. China is a poor market, he said, not only because of the low value of Chinese currency, which has greatly reduced buying power, but because of the constant turmoil into which the warring factions have thrown the country.

"In India, with a population of about 350,000,000, there were only 137,000 automobiles at the close of 1929," Smith said. "About 20,000 more will be sold this year. I have found my principle market among the natives. If I had to depend on the European population over there, my sales would be negligible. My customers are natives, either merchants, bankers or men in the native government. Ninety per cent of the wealth of India is possessed by about 10 per cent of the people."

Calls Gandhi a "Politician."

Smith asserted that the natives of India pay about as much attention to Mahatma Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, as they would to "any other politician." He does not regard seriously Gandhi's movement for "civil disobedience."

After a short visit with his family, Smith will go to the Studebaker factory at South Bend, Ind., to confer with executives regarding the export trade.

Hints for Drivers

TOO much play in the steering gear will make it more difficult to keep ina straight line when backing out the garage driveway.

If the anti-freeze used in the car has a boiling point equal to that of water, or higher, there is no harm running with it in the radiator if the weather suddenly turns off warm. It may be a safeguard against a belated touch of winter.

Go through a flooded portion of the road slowly in low gear. Usually it's the splashing of water that causes the wet ignition to stall the engine amid stream.

If the brake pedal goes down to the floor on the first trial, but "builds up" to the normal position as the brakes are used, the indications are that there is air in the lines where the system is hydraulic.

Should the engine suddenly race madly, don't be alarmed. Switch off the ignition and prepare to fix the throttle return spring, which has either come loose or broken.

Buying 15 gallons of gasoline means taking on 90 pounds of weight to steady the rear end of the car. A full tank has its advantages where one is driving a light car alone over a rough road.

If you don't want to clog the cylinders of the new car with carbon, but feel that a little extra protection is in order, why not squirt a little engine oil into the contents of the vacuum tank when starting out in the morning. This will give the cylinders added protection during the starting process, but will avoid the possible objections of having oil in the gas as a steady diet for the day.

If you are going to have the shock absorbers adjusted take along enough passengers to equal the weight usually carried.

Running too slowly up a long, steep hill may cause the vacuum tank to go dry. This performance requires an open throttle, even though the car is running slowly. Suction for operating the vacuum tank is diverted.

Some of those annoying noises in the body can be traced to the door mechanism. Try adjusting the locks, or reclosing the door, the next time you are puzzled.

Since it is easier to maintain momentum than to build it up, always rush a hill with an old car in order to get up in high gear.

When it is necessary to traverse a spot where the under part of the car may strike, try, if possible, to back over it. In the forward direction the muffler may come loose, if it strikes the ground.

Fisk Officials Report 25 Pct. Sales Increase

Due to the introduction of the "air flight" principle in its complete line of pneumatic tires, the Fisk Tire and Rubber Co. has experienced a 25 per cent increase in sales during the first two months of the current year over the corresponding period of 1929, according to W. C. A. Bickham, field assistant to the general sales manager, who is making a four-day tour of the St. Louis Fisk territory, accompanied by C. H. Nelson, factory field representative, and H. L. Flood, St. Louis branch manager. Public enthusiasm and numerous new dealer appointments in the local territory have been unusually gratifying and the outlook for continuously increasing busines is exceptionally good, according to Flood.

Gas Tax Averages $17.

Motorists in the United States paid an average gasoline tax of $17 per motor vehicle in 1929.

CHEVROLET

BODY by FISHER

FISHER... the World's Largest Builder of BODIES, brings added value to the CHEVROLET SIX

The Fisher Body Corporation is the world's largest builder of automobile bodies and has occupied this position of leadership since the early days of the industry. Its products enjoy a reputation for quality that is taken for granted wherever motor cars run. Its operations are carried out on a tremendous scale, making possible many economies that assure better bodies at lower cost.

Fisher logs its own lumber from Fisher-owned forests and finishes it in Fisher-owned mills. Fisher makes its own plate glass in one of the world's largest plate glass factories, and is, by far, the largest manufacturer of motor car body hardware and fittings.

Fisher ranks among the largest fabricators of sheet steel and uses steel faced dies which are built entirely by Fisher craftsmen. All together, Fisher activities require more than 349 acres of covered floor space—and the total number of employees engaged exclusively in the design and manufacture of Fisher Bodies ranges as high as 65,000.

Yet Fisher leadership is based on more than control of basic materials and the elimination of middlemen's profits. It was Fisher pioneering that brought the closed car to its present perfection. It was Fisher vision that originated the idea of volume production on fine motor car bodies. And it was Fisher progressiveness that introduced the many new processes which make Fisher Bodies, beyond question, the best built motor car bodies in America or Europe today.

As a leading division of General Motors, Fisher is closely allied with Chevrolet; and it is only natural that Fisher, as the world's largest builder of bodies, can bring to the new Chevrolet Six an added measure of value unequalled in the industry.

Therefore, it is important that you pay particular attention to the body in comparing the value of the Chevrolet Six with that of any other automobile—because the quality of the body is a factor of great importance in determining both the degree of satisfaction to be obtained from a car and its ultimate resale value.

Chevrolet-Fisher Bodies are long, low and properly proportioned. They are of composite hardwood and steel—the type of construction employed exclusively on the world's highest priced cars on account of its superior strength, safety, durability and freedom from unpleasant noises.

The roof of every Chevrolet-Fisher Body is a separate assembly, resting as securely upon the body pillars as does the roof of a house upon its framework. The roof itself is formed of bows and slats and is scientifically constructed to eliminate drumming or rumble.

Furthermore, there are provided such modern features as the non-glare VV windshield which provides added safety for night driving; adjustable driver's seat; substantial hardware and fittings of pleasing pattern and finish; and long-wearing velour and mohair upholstery over cushions whose permanent comfort is assured by closely nested springs. Finishes are of genuine Duco in a choice of pleasing colors. And throughout there is evidence of an attention to detail not ordinarily expected in a low-priced car.

In addition to the fundamental advantages of Bodies by Fisher, the new Chevrolet Six offers many superiorities in performance. The six-cylinder valve-in-head engine has been increased in capacity to 50 horsepower. Four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers are standard equipment.

The four-wheel brakes are fully enclosed and protected from the effects of dirt and water. The rear axle, transmission and drive shaft have been improved to provide greater strength and dependability.

Yet this better car sells at greatly reduced prices. And comparison with any low-priced automobile will reveal a difference in value far greater than the difference in price!

At St. Louis Airfields

A PREDICTION that airplanes will carry the majority of long-distance travelers in the future was made by Halsey Dunwoody, executive vice-president of the Universal Aviation Corporation, at a meeting of shippers at Jefferson City last week.

Dunwoody expressed the opinion that all passengers making long trips would go by air, with the railroad carrying short-haul passengers and heavy freight. All long-distance mail and the greater part of express shipments would also go by air Dunwoody told the shippers. How soon this could be accomplished depended largely on airport development, he said. He predicted the construction of large planes with six or eight engines capable of carrying 150 passengers. With such equipment carrying full pay loads the fare for a coast-to-coast air journey could be fixed at about $100, Dunwoody declared.

Ryan Foursome Price Cut.

The price of the new Ryan Foursome, introduced at the recent international aircraft exposition, has been reduced about $1000, from $10,900 to $9985. The standard B-5 Ryan, with whirlwind engine, now sells for $12,985, as compared with $13,250, the former price.

Similar clubs are to be established throughout the country, under a plan permitting the clubs to buy planes at cost. Fees for instruction are $13 an hour for dual training and $5 an hour for solo flying. At this rate it is estimated students may qualify for a private license at a cost of $220, and for limited commercial license for $450.

48 Different Types Of Chassis Offered In Truck Models

DETROIT, Mich., March 22.—Officials of the truck division of Dodge Brothers assert that the company now has one of the most comprehensive range of units in the motor truck industry. Capacities range from the merchants' express light delivery car to the heavy-duty three-ton truck, and the various models and combinations in the line meet 96 per cent of all hauling needs, they declare.

Six-cylinder engines and four-wheel brakes on all models, and radiator shutters operated from the dash on all heavy-duty models are features of the 1930 Dodge Brothers commercial cars and trucks. Four-cylinder power plants are also available in the ¾-ton and one-ton sizes. A four-speed transmission in the one-ton and heavier capacities insures more flexible operation under all conditions. All brakes are completely enclosed as a protection against dirt and dust and afford positive control at all times.

New Roadster Model in Series 'S' Hupmobile

Unconventional Design Gives Impression of Great Speed.

A roadster, embodying new design lines and a color scheme which departs from the conventional, is announced by the Hupp Motor Car Corporation. The new body type is an addition to the model "S" six-cylinder Hupmobile which was brought out last August.

One of the chief features of this new car is its exemplification of a new trend in speedster body design. Instead of the former straight lines and moldings, flairs and convolutions are used which seem to elevate the plane of the hood above that of the rear deck. In other words, the forward end of the car seems to ride much higher than the rear.

The bead moldings of the new car converge at the lower end of the rear deck to form a modulated point. Back of the cowl the double bead striping becomes a single line extending downward over the rear deck.

To further accentuate the low appearance of the rear deck, a broad stripe of contrasting color, starting just below the center of the doors on the running board splash apron, swedves upward over the crown of the fenders and downward to the rear sheet metal valance. To complete the smooth appearance of the rear deck, the gasoline tank filler cap is concealed by a small plate which is tightly locked by means of a small control. The rear of the body is thus extended so as to cover most of the rear sheet metal and the gasoline tank.

The new roadster is built in Hupmobile's Cleveland (O.) plants. Its list price is $1175, f. o. b. Cleveland, with standard equipment, which includes five disc wheels with the spare wheel mounted in the right front fender. Full custom equipped, with the two spare wheels mounted in front fender wells, is obtainable at a figure slightly higher.

4 'Straight-Eights' Enable Marmon to Cover Price Field

This year's four Marmon straight eights comprise one of the most complete line of eights covering all important price ranges ever produced and placed on the market by a single manufacturer.

Including models in the price classifications beginning in the $1000 field and ending in the fine car range, the 1930 Marmon line is the culmination of a four-year program of straight eight development and research which started with the introduction of the first Marmon eight in 1926.

In the earlier days of the automotive industry, the eight was available only as a high-priced vehicle and its advantages could be enjoyed only by those motorists financially able to invest a considerable sum in their automobiles. Later, new manufacturing engineering methods made straight-eight production feasible in all price ranges and it was at that time that Marmon officials entered upon the program which is fully unfolded this year.

Broadcast From Deck of Vessel at Sea Next Wednesday

A broadcast from a ship at sea is planned for the Forty Fathom Trawlers' program over KMOX and the Columbia chain at 7:30 Wednesday night.

The fishing trawler "Spray" will arrive in New York from Boston the day before so that short wave transmitters and equipment can be installed on board by the Bell Laboratories under supervision of Paul Greene, chief engineer of the Columbia system. A test broadcast will be made that evening.

The following night, if weather conditions are favorable, the "Spray" will head out to sea until she reaches a depth of 40 fathoms, and the regular weekly program of the Forty Fathom Trawlers will be put on.

Will Rogers on Air Next Sunday Night

Will Rogers is billed for the Enna Jettick program at 7 o'clock next Sunday night over an NBC chain, including KWK. He is to have the entire 15 minutes devoted to this program to say and do what he pleases.

The Will Rogers broadcast will come from the studios of KFI, Los Angeles, that station being one of the many associated with the National Broadcasting Co.

What's New in Radio Industry

Geller, Ward & Hassner Show New Crosley Receivers, and Set Up Separate Radio Division — Majestic Dealers Making Tone Test—New Pilot AC Short Wave Set Tested.

The new Crosley line of AC screen grid receivers is being shown to dealers by the Geller, Ward & Hasner Hardware Co., distributer. As was told in this column two weeks ago, these models are six in number—the "Chum," the "Playmate," the "Comrade" and the "Buddy" in types designed to occupy small space, and the "Partner" and "Crony" in larger cabinets. An idea of the size of these new sets may be gained from the fact that the "Buddy" is only 24 inches high, 17⅜ inches long and 10½ inches deep, while the height of the "Chum" is 28½ inches, of "Playmate" and "Comrade" 29½ inches. The chassis in the four smaller models range from a new one with push pull 171A tubes for the "Buddy" to improved Crosley Monatrad and Unitrad eight-tube chassis, both with 45-type tubes in push pull audio, for the other sets.

Geller, Ward & Hasner have established a separate radio division to handle their Crosley distributorship, and R. J. Lickiss has been appointed general sales manager of it. J. F. Kidd has been made radio sales and advertising manager for the St. Louis and East Side territory, and Tom Brown has been appointed sales manager for the rural territory in Missouri and Southern Illinois. Lickiss has been an officer of Gellar, Ward & Hasner for years, while Kidd and Brown also are widely known in the radio trade.

Radio merchandising offices have been established on the fourth floor of the building occupied by he firm on Fourth street, as also an elaborately equipped service department.

This is the fourth year that Geller, Ward & Hasner have distributed Crosley receivers. They also have been Amrad distributer.

The firm has established the separate radio division, Lickiss said, because of growth of the business and manifest advantages in establishing and maintaining contact with its numerous dealers.

Majestic Dealers Equipped for Novel Tone Tests.

Secial records, for use in the new Majestic phonograph-radio combinations, have been furnished to dealers so that they can let fans test for themselves the acuteness of their musical ears. The records also were designed to be used in schools, for which the American School of the Air programs, sponsored by Majestic and the Columbia System and broadcast over the Columbia chain Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, were designed.

Persons taking the tone tests are given blanks to fill in. They listen to the records, then write answers to questions on the blanks. First, they decide how many voices they hear in a song, next which of two tones is the higher in pitch, then which of two snatches of music is discordant and which is true harmony, then how many instruments are playing a selection, and finally the names of various instruments which play in turn.

The tests are really interesting, and the results often are quite a surprise to those taking them.

Pilot AC Super Wasp Short Wave Set Tested.

One of the new Pilot AC Super "Wasp" short wave receivers was tested Saturday and Sunday at a location 10 miles east of the Mississippi River, in Illinois. The short wave stations of KDKA, WGY, WABC, WENR and WLW and the transmitters operating at Bound Brook, N. J., were tuned in clearly and with plenty of volume.

So, too, was CJRX, Winnipeg, Manitoba, which broadcasts on 25.6 meters, just a hair below 5SW, the big British short wave station on 25.53 meters. 5SW was not on the air Saturday or Sunday. The dials were full of code stations, and a number of amateur stations were picked up.

Tuning in the foreign short wave stations that broadcast regular programs is a matter of favorable weather conditions and learning the "feel" of a receiver. But the United States and Canadian short wave stations came in so strongly, that there could be no doubt that perseverance would locate the foreign transmitters for good signals.

The set operates smoothly and quietly, with virtually no hum on any of the wave bands. It is carefully engineered, well shielded and substantially made.

One set of coils covers 14 to 27 meters; another, 26 to 50 meters; another, 50 to 100 meters; a fourth, 100 to 200 meters, and a fifth, the broadcast band. This means that the set can be used to listen to regular broadcasting.

Tone quality is excellent. Of course, for fine tuning in a search for foreign stations, it is advisable to use headphones until the signals can be developed to the point where they will be suitable for switching on a loud speaker. But for most tuning a speaker can be used.

Altogether the AC Wasp made an exceptional showing as a short wave receiver.

Fred Marchev, formerly president of the Temple Corporation of Chicago, has been appointed general sales manager of Nathaniel Baldwin, Inc., with headquarters in Chicago. Marchev says the company will manufacture complete radio sets in Salt Lake City, Chicago and Los Angeles. • • • Otto N. Frankfort has resigned as vice president in charge of sales of the All-American Mohawk Corporation. He was six years with the Mohawk Corporation before becoming sales chief for All-American Mohawk. • • • Jack Capps, well known in the radio trade, is now with the Beck & Corbitt Co., covering the city for its Brunswick division.

Radio receivers of today and the future will not be affected by efforts to get television broadcasts under way within the next 60 days from Chicago, it is stated, because sight and sound can not be received at the same time on the same receiver. Two sets are needed. Tampering with regular broadcast receivers is advised against. Instead, it is declared that satisfactory results will be possible only with a special short wave television receiver. The simultaneous transmission of sight and sound will be attempted on a large scale by WMAQ, Chicago, and WIBO, the same city.

Radio listeners will see as well as hear some of their favorite radio characters, if negotiations between the National Broadcasting Co. and several large motion picture producers are carried through. The American Federation of Musicians is appealing to the Federal Radio Commission to restrict the use of recorded programs by broadcasting stations in the larger cities. Such record broadcasting is declared by the Federation to be detrimental to the development of proper and natural appreciation of music as a fine art, and also deprives musicians of the necessary incentive to achieve excellence and of the means to make a living. It is alleged that thousands of musicians have been thrown out of work because of recorded music on the air.

At the same time the use of so-called "electrical transscriptions" by stations is increasing—in St. Louis as well as elsewhere. More than 130 stations in this country and Canada are to use a "ticker tape" type of recorded program produced by a new company. These programs are supplied in continuities ranging from 15 minutes to an hour in length and are on reels. They are sent in advance to the station, which broadcast from them at times specified by the advertisers. It is reported that some 40 of these programs are to be gotten out weekly.

The two big chain program companies have refused to countenance recorded programs. The Radio Commission has issued strict orders that record programs, whether made exclusively for broadcasting or otherwise, must be announced for exactly what they are.

NBC Establishes Division to Handle News Broadcasting

Following reports that the Columbia System planned to rely more and more on news happenings for its non-commercial programs, significance is seen in the announcement that the National Broadcasting Co. has established a new division which will arrange and supervise broadcasts of current events and special air programs. The head of this new division is William Burke Miller, formerly assistant manager of the NBC press relations bureau.

Miller is to conduct experiments to determine how far the broadcaster can go in his hunt for graphic word pictures of outstanding events for transmission to the radio audience. Miller is a Pulitzer Journalism prize winner. He is the reporter who crawled into Sand Cave in an attempt to rescue the imprisoned Floyd Collins five years ago. He was in charge of the "over and under New York" broadcast, the broadcast by a parachute jumper and the last Kentucky Derby broadcast.

GRAHAM

After Three Years of Preparation Now Gives an Impressive Object Lesson in Greater Value-Giving

THERE could be no better time than this to give practical proof that by strict adherence to quality standards in massed manufacturing, motor cars can rise above the commonplace in quality and still be held down in price.

Motor cars have become such an imperative necessity in our national life that the moment is fortunately ripe for the impressive demonstration of greater investment-value which the Graham brothers are now able to give.

The way has been well paved for this exhibition of greater value-giving by nearly three years spent in perfecting their plant processes—engineering, chassis construction and body building combined—and by the manufacturing volume awarded the Grahams by more than 160,000 owners.

Those valuable years were preceded by an experience of more than twenty years in which they have tried earnestly to hold fast in practice to the conviction that quality is the best policy in quantity production as in everything else.

This conviction was verified by the amazing success that attended their entry into the automotive industry, when they built up in five years' time, under their own name, one of the largest truck businesses in the world.

It was confirmed when their first year as independent motor car manufacturers was rewarded by the largest first year's sales ever given any manufacturer in the industry—and by a second year's volume still greater.

In those progressive years, inspired by the encouragement of as fine a following of owners as any manufacturer ever had the good fortune to gather together, the Grahams have learned much of incalculable value.

They owe all that they have to their public and they pass on now, at a moment when they believe it will be most appreciated, the fruits of their experience, in a line of cars so obviously superior in value that they advertise themselves—at prices so strikingly attractive that they represent impressive object lessons in greater value-giving.

45 PER CENT RECOVERY IN STOCKS FROM AUTUMN LOW

NEW LIFE INJECTED INTO BOND MARKET

Volume of Business for One Session, $29,000,000, Exceeded All Previous Records Except Two, Both Abnormal Sessions.

NEW YORK, March 22.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"Developments this week make it clear that money as a deterrent to business recovery is now definitely eliminated. Up till 10 days ago we still lacked that evidence. The evidence of the event has come in the return of 2 per cent call money for the first time in five years, 3½ per cent time money and the still more significent drop of 1¼ per cent through nine successive cuts, in the bill rate to 2¾ per cent. Not since November, 1924, have such attractive rates to business borrowers been available as now. We face no question of what the reserve will do. Easy money is here as a potent reality. Its powerful influence from now on will be working toward recovery.

Recovers 51 Points.

"Apparently the stock market is discounting a turn upward in business much as it did after the 1907 panic. The market has pushed ahead quietly, but persistently since November. Roughly, 113 points were lost between the Sept. 7 peak and the Nov. 13 bottom. The advance to date has restored 51 of those points. Expressed in another way the market has recovered 45 per cent of what it lost last autumn. That is a more substantial rebound than the public appreciates. Indeed it has come with a conspicuous absence of public buying. Until the last three weeks loans did not begin to expand. Stocks for the most part have been bought by cash by institutional and individual investors whose judgment is usually right.

New Life to Bond Market.

"Far greater importance attaches to the new life injected into the bond market this week than elsewhere. The volume of $29,000,000 set on Friday exceeds anything in the records except that for Oct. 29, 1929, and Dec. 30, 1918, which were abnormal sessions. Against a continued heavy flow of new emissions the market in bonds is pushing persistently into new high levels since 1928. From early 1928 until October, 1929, bond prices drifted downward. Corporate descriptions since October have risen on the average 4.2 points, but they are not yet back where they were at the beginning of 1928 when a bull market in bonds was choked by an encroaching bull market in stocks. This far-reaching recovery in bonds is the underlying change in conditions that more than anything else inspires hope.

Current Reports and Future.

"Evidence of an approaching upturn in business is not yet manifesting itself in the statistics. The procession of bad news in industry that everybody expected is only now passing by. To those whose eyes are fixed on first quarter comparisons in earnings the situation looks bad. To those who look further it does not look so bad. The removal of deterring influences, and the prompt application of stimulants, probably points the way to the future more accurately than the current business statistics. At this time of year the stimulant will be working with the seasons. By the time the normal seasonal pick-up has passed the full benefits of easy money should begin to show in the business curve.

Lower Reichsbank Rate Reported Planned.

STOCKS SLUMP IN HEAVY WEEK-END VOLUME OF TRADE

Bull Movement Buried Under a Landslide of Closing Period Profit-Taking — Ticker 52 Minutes Late.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 22.—The bull movement in stocks was buried under a landslide of week-end profit-taking sales in today's market which canceled most of the gains of the past two sessions, and kept the ticker running 52 minutes after the close. Total sales for the two-hour trading period were 2,314,900 shares, which was at the rate of nearly 5,800,000 shares for a full session.

The noncommittal tone of the week-end business and trade reviews, yesterday's abrupt end to the period of abnormally easy money, and acute weakness in a handful of isolated stocks, appeared to have shaken bullish confidence. Furthermore, there was a rather wide feeling that the sharp advances earlier in the week had for the moment impaired the market's technical position.

The announcement of President Carlton of Western Union that the company was experiencing its least profitable quarter in 15 years, was also unsettling, although this was largely due to extraordinary expenses such as costly repairs to trans-Atlantic cables broken by earthquakes. Reports from the Youngstown steel area indicated that aggregate production next week would sag a little further, although some mills planned to step up activity.

Anticipate Easy Money.

Bankers generally looked for comparatively easy money next week, although little hope was held that the exremely low rates of this week would be duplicated. While a period of cheap credit is definitely indicated, the release of credit by the Government's quarterly overdraft at the Federal Reserve exaggerated the situation this week.

Western Union broke sharply after the Carlton statement, touching 185½, off 18½ and a new low for the year, but it rallied to close at 190. Allied Chemical receded 6 points, and Westinghouse Electric. Johns Manville, and Auburn Auto about 5 each.

Some of the merchandising shares were depressed, Woolworth declined more than 4 points to a new low for the year at 58¾. Montgomery declined more than a point, going below 40 and within a point of the year's minimum. Simmons continued downward touching 43¾, off more than 4 points. Last year it sold up 188.

U. S. Steel and American Telephone fell back 3 points, and shares losing 2 to 4 included American Can, American Tobacco B, A. M. Byers, J. I. Case, Coca-Cola, Columbian Carbon, Drug, Inc. Fox, Public Service of N. J., Underwood-Elliott, and Warner Bros. National Cash Register was again down, touching another new low for the year at 60¾.

Few Stocks Higher.

Operations for the advance were continued in a few issues, however, United Aircraft, Newport Co. and Industrial Rayon gained about 5 points, the first two named reaching new high ground. Pacific Lighting, Penick and Ford, Texas Gulf Sulphur, and Vanadium rose 2 points or so to new 1930 highs, and closed near the top.

The commodity markets were also under pressure. Wheat lost a couple of cents, reflecting heaviness in the Liverpool market and bearish weather reports. Corn declined about a cent. Cotton closed practically unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were generally steady. Sterling cables again ruled at 4.86¾, the highest in two months. The Japanses Yen moved up to 49.45 cents, a new 1930 high.

EK'S BOND TRADE LARGEST IN 2 YEARS

Quiet Market at Close With Prices Holding Generally Firm.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Compared with the recent boiling and market, today's two-hour session was a routine affair. Prices held generally firm, investment issues moving within small ranges in either direction. Not even the convertibles displayed much life and usually sagged in sympathy with stocks.

Sales of New York Stock Exchange bonds in this week of declining prices totaled approximately $115,000,000, a new high for more than two years. The Curb's total has also been extremely active, while dealings in unlisted securities, which account for a heavy majority of the bond trading, reached almost phenomenal proportions.

Many of the wide swings were in speculative and semi-speculative bonds. New York Dock 5s rose 5½, Seaboard all Florida "B" 6s advanced 3½, and Certain-teed 4½s rose 2¾. Pathe 7s lost 2. Colon Oil convertible 6s were marked up slightly more than 3.

The few outstanding changes in issues of high investment rating included a 3 point gain in Morris & Essex 3½s which went to 82, a new high. Long Island General 4s and Atchison convertible 4s were other strong spots.

For the most part, however, the rails as well as the utilities, held within the fluctuations of half a point. Boston & Maine 5s, of which an additional $15,000,000 issue is expected soon, lost an early rise of about a point. Great Northern 2½s fell 1½ and Lehigh Valley of Pennsylvania 4s went down 1¾.

The sharpest drop in the stock future issues was made by American Telephone 4½s, which declined 1½ net after having touched the new high of 168⅛. Fractional losses resulted from moderate selling pressure against Baltimore & Ohio 4½s, Chicago & North Western 4½s and Atchison 4½s.

Foreign bonds were quiet and slightly irregular. Buenos Aires 6½s sold off ⅝. Antioquia 7s lost 3 to two points, British 5½s were active and firm, while Australia's listings retained recent gains on fair turnovers.

The Liberty 3½s was the busiest of the Governments, slipping off slightly on moderate volume. Prices in this group were lower, but the trading was of inconsequential proportions.

WEEK'S METAL MARKET REVIEW

NEW YORK, March 22.—Some improvement in sales of copper to foreign consumers reported late in the week, possibly reflecting strength in the London market. Shipments to domestic consumers are said to have been increased somewhat recently in anticipation of a further expansion in demand. Independent consumers, however, are buying only immediate needs and the market generally remains quiet. Producers continue to quote electrolytic at 18 cents delivered in the Connecticut valley.

Demand was somewhat steadier, and the week showed improvement. It was reported that the foreign interest in reference had ended and that a tentative agreement had been reached to restrict production abroad about 5 per cent.

The market for zinc was a trifle easier but there was a fair amount of inquiry for nearby shipment.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Raw sugar was easier today. Sales were about 210,000 tons of Cuban from store to local refiners at 3.52c to 3.58c, according to delivery.

Prices opened unchanged to 4 points lower in quiet liquidation and selling by Cuban connections. Shorts covered on the initial declines and prices rallied a little, although trading was not active. Later operations consisted mainly of switching between the near and distant positions, with the over developments reflecting uncertainty over developments relative to the continuance of the selling agency scheme. Prices eased again near the close on increased commission house selling. Final prices were 1 to 4 points net lower.

There were no transactions in the No. 1 contract with prices easier, in sympathy with the No. 4, and closing at 3 points net lower. HOG MARKET LOWER IN TRADE FOR WEEK

Receipts Are Lighter Following Liberal Run in Previous Period.

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., March 22.—(United States Department of Agriculture.)—A slow movement of dressed beef and some further reductions in values in that end of the trade caused buyers to concentrate their efforts to reducing live costs on steers, mixed yearlings and heifers during the week with the result that these classes were reduced 25c to mostly 50c and in spots losses of 75c were shown. Bulls and vealers also declined. Some declines in instances, but the cow trade was on a firm basis generally. Stocker and feeder cattle were mostly unchanged. Tops for week: 1246-lb steers and 740-lb mixed yearlings, $13; 910-lb heifers, $12.90; 980-lb steer yearlings, $12.50; cows, $9.25; vealers, $13.50; feeder steers, $12. One load of plain weighty steers at $11.60 averaged 1406 lbs., while a few cars at $12 @12.75 scaled 1313 to 1370 lbs. Steers averaging 1217 to 1278 lbs ranged from $10.85@11; bulk, $11.40@12, while medium weights scaling 1103 to 1160 lbs. ranged from $9.85@12, bulk $10.50@11.25. Lightweight steers, 1015 lbs. down, $9@12.50, bulk $9.75@11.75, with bulk of all weights $9.75@11.75. Most fat steers scored $12.35@13 early in the week. Fat mixed yearlings and heifers went principally at $11.50@12.50, medium kinds largely $10.25@11.25; cows, mostly $7@8.50. Bulk of beef cattle continued brought $4.25@5.25. At the close of the week top vealers sold at $13.25, while best medium bull, calves, $7.50. Stocker and feeder steers bulked at $9.10@10.90.

Hog Market Down.

Receipts at this point for the current week approximated 65,300 compared with actual arrivals of 65,410 last week and 79,089 corresponding week last year. Tone of marketings around the livestock circuit fell 20 per cent below the total of last week. Liberal marketings at the close of last week enabled packers to hammer values to the lowest point reached since late in January. This was undoubtedly largely responsible for the light runs of this week, but even at that salesmen were unable to maintain prices. Shippers offered considerable support most of the week, but packers insisted on putting up their droves at lower figures or at best no better than steady. Extreme high this week was $10.80, paid sparingly during early rounds Thursday though even on that day most sales were consummated at $10.50 and below. A moderate recovery was stazed on the last two sessions, but average quotations finished 15@25c lower than the close of last week. Choice 180-lb weights topped on Saturday at $10.70 and majority of 190@215 lb. averages cashed at $10.50@10.65, these being quoted steady to 10c higher than Friday. Scattered loads of 220@240 lbs. butchers realized $10.25@10.40 and a few 250@275 lb butchers turned at $9.90@10. A few 130@150 lb light lights scored the $10.50 money and 100@120 lb pigs cashed at $9.25@10. Packing sows bulked at $8.50@8.75.

Fat Lamb Market Lower.

Receipts of sheep and lambs this week approximated 8700 head, compared with actual arrivals of 5237 last week and 4174 corresponding period last year. Excessive receipts provided a bearish factor in trade and repeated downturns featured the fat lamb market. Late sessions were at the low time of the week and practically at the low time this season. Dressed lamb in the East was uneven with better grades showing losses and lower grades reflecting a slight improvement. This resulted in throwout lambs finding little change in price, while better grade material finished 50@75c lower than a week ago. Sheep and yearlings were almost lacking among available supplies and quotations were unchanged. Wooled lambs topped for the week at $10.75 for choice 75-lb weights, while shippers paid $10.60, next highest price, for better 94-lb descriptions. The packer top held at $10.50. On later sessions no wooled lambs were able to pass $10, this price paid on Friday for a double of choice 85-lb averages. Quality was lacking in most late arrivals and $9.50 took numerous loads of 85 to 95 lb Colorado and other fed Westerns. Clipped lambs topped at $10 early in the week with the bulk at $9 to $9.50, less desirable kinds at $8.85. Throwouts cleared at $8 to $8.50. Fat ewes sold at $4 to $6, according to weight, quality and condition.

NARROW, IRREGULAR CLOSE IN COTTON

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Trading in cotton was attributed largely to technical readjustments in positions today and resulted in rather nervous and irregular fluctuations. An early advance was followed by reactions under week-end realizing but there were rallies on renewed covering in the late trading. May contracts late selling at 10.80c on the opening demand, declined to 15.66c and closed at 15.74c compared with 15.78 at the close of Friday. The general market closed steady with March 11 points higher while later deliveries were net 2 points higher to 6 points lower.

The market opened steady at an advance of 6 points to a decline of 4 points, with the active months showing net advances of about 4 to 13 points during the early trading on buying which seemed to be prompted by fairly steady Liverpool cables and favorable week-end reviews of the cotton goods trade. The market met considerable realizing, however, and there may have been some selling for a weak account during the middle of the morning with July declining to 15.72c and the new October contract to 15.43c, making net losses of about 7 to 10 points on the more active positions. Offerings tapered off in the afternoon and a revival of trade buying and covering accounted for the late rally.

There was very little business in March in which the interest has evidently been largely reduced, and it seemed only a little buying to send the price up from 15.66c to 15.71c at the close. July closed at 15.72c and all the new October contract at 15.33c.

Part of the day's business was attributed to the undoing of straddles and further transferring of contracts from near to distant months. Trade interests were credited with buying near months and there may have been a little buying of later deliveries on reports of favorable progress with the acreage reduction campaign in the South.

Liverpool cable reporting fair cloth sales to India and yarn sales in excess of production came in for some comment while there were also reports of an increased business in the local cloth market.

SWAP PROPOSED FOR CITY HALL OF UNIVERSITY CITY

Deal Would Involve Use of Woman's Magazine Tower for Seat of Government of Municipality.

ATTRACTIVE OFFERS FOR CITY PROPERTY

Public Building Site for Department Store Branch Also Said to Have Been Contemplated.

By Berry Moore.

Several attractive offers have been submitted in the last few days for the City Hall block in University City, with a frontage of approximately 300 feet on Delmar boulevard between Melville and Adelaide avenues, according to real estate men. Nathan Frank, attorney and former Congressman, a downtown department store concern, and Sam Hamburg Jr., a professional real estate operator, are mentioned prominently as prospective purchasers.

A proposal has been made involving an exchange of the University City Hall property for the Woman's Magazine Building at the entrance to University City. The Woman's Magazine Building is owned by a corporation controlled by Nathan Frank, which seeks the University City Hall block because of its speculative value, it is said.

Proposed Terms Not Disclosed.

Eugene D. Ruth, Mayor of University City and a member of the real estate firm of Francis, Perry & Ruth admitted that Frank had made a proposition for the University City Hall block, but said that it had been rejected by the Board of Aldermen. Ruth declined to disclose the basis of the proposed exchange. He mentioned the fact that property on the north side of Delmar boulevard in the block opposite the City Hall had sold as high as $1000 a front foot, with improvements of negligible value. This referred presumably to the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Heman avenue, 100x100 feet, for which the S. S. Kresge company is said to have paid $100,000, as a site for its recently completed building. This site has a second frontage on Enright, which greatly enhances its value.

On this basis the University City Hall property would have a valuation of approximately $300,000, not taking into consideration the value of the City Hall building and the engine house, the former costing $200,000, exclusive of the ground, according to Ruth. The value of the Woman's Magazine Building cannot be estimated on the front foot basis.

Magazine Tower for City Hall.

As gathered, the proposal contemplated occupancy of the Woman's Magazine Building as the University City Hall, for which it is said it would be available with comparatively few alterations. It consists of a six-story octagonal tower dominating from high elevation the Delmar boulevard entrance to University City, with a one-story building in connection, extending to Trinity avenue. The latter contained the printing plant of the Woman's Magazine, published by E. G. Lewis, founder of University City. The site comprises the entire block bounded by Delmar boulevard, Cornell, Trinity and Harvard avenues.

A printing plant was made permissible under the restrictions of this block, as drafted by Lewis, having in mind the Woman's Magazine publication. The building is now occupied by the Orcutt Co., a baking and moving concern.

Department Store Branch.

The department store mentioned as a prospective purchaser of the University City Hall block is heralded as having plans for a branch store on an ambitious scale. It is said to have made the largest cash offer so far reported for this block, which forms an alluring site for the enterprise of this kind.

Sam Hamburg Jr., whose deals have been a feature of the real estate market in both the business and apartment house sections of the city, is understood to have made several offers, each at an increased price, for this block, impressed by the future of the site with its extensive frontage on one of the most advantageously situated blocks on the business section of University City. He also is said to have plans for a pretentious retail structure.

Details of the proposed exchange, which has not gone beyond the conversational stage, be made, the engine house, it is suggested, could occupy its present site under a lease from the Frank corporation.

While the University City Hall block never has been offered for sale, it is said to be on the market on the theory that it has become too valuable as a real estate proposition to be occupied further for its present use.

The University City Bank & Trust Co. is established in recently complete structure at 6633 Delmar boulevard. The S. S. Kresge Co., Remley Market and other large retail concerns occupy quarters directly opposite.

Property on Delmar boulevard, whose growth has been essentially of a business character, has been in renewed demand with the completion of the viaduct over the Wabash tracks at Hodiamont avenue, to say nothing of the widening of the thoroughfare.

The Woman's Magazine Building has been under consideration at different times recently by life insurance companies as available for general offices for institutions of this character.

I. MILLER & SONS OPEN STORE HERE TOMORROW

Branch of New York Company Handling Women's Shoes Leases 823 Locust St.

I. Miller & Sons of New York will open a St. Louis branch tomorrow morning at 823 Locust street. More than $75,000 has been spent in remodeling and refitting the store.

The company has branches in 59 cities. It started about 30 years ago, when I. Miller opened a custom shoe shop in New York. The company manufactures and sells only women's shoes.

Two of the New York executives of the company, Arthur Livers, advertising manager and general manager of the I. Miller stores, and Irving Grossman, general sales manager, are in St. Louis for the opening. The St. Louis manager is Frank Tannenbaum, who is also manager of the Kansas City branch. The concern has acquired a long lease on the store.

PURCHASES 50 ACRES IN FOREST PARK MANOR

Bennett Firm Lets Grading Contract at North and South Road and Eager.

Three pieces of land comprisnig about 50 acres, situated on North and South Road and Eager avenue, have been purchased by the Bennett Realty Corporation through LeGrand Jones, Inc., from the Missouri Fire Brick Co.

Bennett Realty Corporation has already sold most of the lots in Forest Park Manor at the southwest corner of North and South road and Eager avenue, which is about seven blocks south of Clayton Road. Bids have been awarded for the grading of the property, which also will have macadam streets, sidewalks, sewer, gas and electricity.

This area is being rapidly developed since the laying on North and South Road of a 40-foot concrete highway. It also is proposed to pave North and South Road as wide south of Eager avenue as north. Eager avenue was paved with concrete last Fall and arrangements are now being made to put an additional eight feet on each side.

Charles Bennett, president of the Bennett Realty Corporation, says that this new division of Forest Park Manor should be as well built up and within the next two or three years as the subdivisions to the northeast. The new $1,000,000 County Hospital is being built five blocks north of Clayton Road on North and South Road. Within four blocks north of Forest Park Manor, the Clayton School District has obtained an option on ground for erecting a grade school building. Forest Park Manor will have approximately 300 home lots and several business corners.

LeGrand Jones, Inc., sold a short time ago 80 acres on the south side of Clayton Road, just west of North and South Road, which the Pitzman Co. is now subdividing for J. H. White Co.

NEW MARY INSTITUTE DRAWS SPECTATORS

Sunday Visitors in Continuous Line to View Classic Colonial Buildings.

Much interest is being taken in the new Mary Institute buildings which are now practically completed and ready for occupancy, at the La Due and Warson roads. On Sunday afternoons a continuous line of interested spectators views the beautifully laid-out campus, with winding roads, and the classic columns of the colonial architecture.

The building is one of the most beautiful and nobly conceived country day schools in this section. The layout has been carefully planned so as to provide every necessity of a country day school. The academic departments are provided with gymnasium, playroom, chapel, dining room, departments for domestic science, art, music and drama.

The architects, Study & Farrar, spent considerable time in Virginia studying the Jeffersonian architecture which is found at Charlottesville and Monticello. Inspired by these noble works that have received admiration for a century, the architects have produced in St. Louis County a modern building finally conceived in the best period of the colonial style. In the thoughtful arrangement of the plan the building has been composed of three principal parts, a large central portion and two flanking wings.

The choice of building materials and architectural motifs has been made with fine discrimination, so that the beauty of colonial architecture may be seen to be perfectly adaptable to our present-day needs.

MARYLAND AV. APARTMENT SOLD FOR $120,000

Transactions of Week Indicate Renewed Interest in Business and Investment Property.

There was renewed activity in real estate last week with speculative investments in apartment and business centers, as conspicuous features.

A three-story 20-apartment building at Maryland and Boyle avenues was sold by Perle Goldstein to L. W. Sims, through the Singer-Klein Real Estate Co. The price is reported to be $120,000. The building has 150 feet frontage on Maryland with a depth of 213 feet on Boyle.

A building at the northwest corner of Jefferson and Cass avenues was sold by Sims to a client of the Singer-Klein Real Estate Co., which handled the deal. The price, it is said, was $55,000. The building contains five stores, a large hall, four offices and four flats.

Graward Hall, a three-story 24-apartment building at the southeast corner of Cates and Clara avenues, was sold to Otto L. Spaeth. The negotiations on behalf of the purchaser were handled by the Wenzlick Real Estate Co. The Holbrook-Blackwelder Co. represented the seller.

A lot 110 by 128 feet in the 3100 block on Pine street was sold to a client of the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Co., through Francis X. English, salesman. The price was $250 a front foot, it is said. The seller was represented by the Farish-Knapp Co. and the E. A. Bokern Real Estate Co. Plans are being made to erect a business building on the site.

The two-story building, No. 1524 Olive street, on a lot 25 by 109 feet, was sold to Lester Goebbels who was represented by the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. The seller was represented by Jack Dubinsky.

Final papers were passed in the sale of the property at the northeast corner of Olive street and Vandeventer avenue, by Margaret Georges to the Continental Life Insurance Co., forecast exclusively several weeks ago in the Post-Dispatch. The reported price is $235,000. The building is two stories high with stores on both Olive street and Vandeventer avenue. The annual rentals total $26,000. Paul M. Stendal, real estate agent, handled the negotiations for the purchaser.

MEN'S STORE ON 4 FLOORS OF THE REPUBLIC BUILDING

J. S. Wolff Co., Holding 20-Year Contract, Buys Nine Tenants' Leases to Expedite Its Occupancy.

Because of confidence in the immediate future of Olive street as a retail center, the J. S. Wolff Clothing Co., of which Walter V. Wolff is president, has purchased nine tenants' leases, and will take possession July 1 of the greater part of the Republic Building, at the southwest corner of Seventh and Olive streets. On that date it will begin the work of remodeling the premises as a men's clothing store.

The Wolff Clothing Co., several months ago, acquired a 20-year lease of the premises, effective April 1, 1931, from the Usona Realty Co. The unexpired leases of tenants made it necessary to set the date ahead. The company, however, was unwilling to wait another year to establish itself at this strategic corner.

A factor in figuring the future of this corner, realty men believe, is the forthcoming change in the Federal Building block, west and north of Eighth and Olive. Eventually, it is expected, a business block of the first importance will occupy the present Federal site.

Negotiations for the tenants' leases were handled through Martin & Breitt, through whom the long term lease also was acquired.

The Wolff company will occupy a large part of the first floor, including the corner of Seventh and Olive streets, and the entire second, third and fourth floors, which will give the concern almost double the capacity of its present store at Broadway and Washington avenue. Occupancy of the entire floor of the building is contemplated with the acquisition of the rest of the tenants' leases.

The Republic Building, a four-story structure, has a frontage on Olive street of 125 feet and on Seventh of 170 feet with an alley on the west and on the south. The building, including the site, was sold in 1906 by the late James Campbell through the Mercantile Trust Co. to the present owners for $1,000,000.

MERCANTILE-COMMERCE HAS ACTIVE WEEK IN REALTY SALES

Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. reports sales as follows:

The two-story building, occupied by the Remington Cash Register Co. at 1524 Olive street, was sold to Lester Goebbels. The owner was represented by Jack Dubinsky and the purchaser by the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. A nine-room residence at 6347 Waterman avenue was sold by Henry A. Friedman to Dr. Justin S. Brewer, who will occupy it as a home. 4984 Odell avenue, a four-family three-room brick flat, lot 50x132, was sold for Elizabeth Mulally estate to August Beckman.

A lot at 4735 Page boulevard, northeast corner of Page and Walton avenue, 50x150, was sold for Marie Lally to a client of Fishman Harris Inc. At 7530 Ethel avenue, five and five room single flat, was sold to Rey B. Wheeler, the owner being represented by the Darst Realty Co. The company sold for Joseph M. Murphy a lot 55x170, on Grand View drive, Riverview Gardens, to Mrs. Ina Bram, and sold for Lester D. Goebbels the northwest corner of Olive street road and Pennsylvania avenue, 35x116, to a client of the Jack Dubinsky Realty Co.

Our wonderful father, that father was you.
Sadly missed by

Till we meet again some day.
She is happily reunited
With her pat, our father dear.
In the Beautiful Isle of Somewhere,
They await their children there.
Mother, your memory is as sweet today
As the day you passed away.
HER CHILDREN.

DOBBIN—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Leonard Dobbin, who departed this life March 21, 1928:

Sherlock Holmes Himself in Person

William Gillette, who returns to the American Theater tomorrow night.

Mr. Gillette's Farewell

Dean of the Stage Returns to the American Theater for Last Time in "Sherlock Holmes"—First Appeared Here in 1874—"Shanghai Gesture" Continues at the Orpheum—Otis Skinner Coming Next Week in New Play.

THE Shubert Theater remains dark with nothing, so far, in sight until Jane Cowl comes on April 7 in "Jenny"; the Casey Players, at the Orpheum go into their second week of "Shanghai Gesture" this evening and, so, dramatic interest centers—as it would anyway—around the arrival tomorrow night of William Gillette, at the American, in "Sherlock Holmes."

It was back in 1874 that Gillette first appeared in St. Louis. He played here then for a time with the old Ben De Bar stock company. His last appearance here was in "The Dream Maker" at the American Theater in 1921. "Sherlock Holmes," which he brings back tomorrow night, was played by him in St. Louis 30 years ago and again, for a week, in 1915. Much has been written, and much more undoubtedly will be written, about this farewell tour of Gillette in his most famous character creation. Editorials have commented on the beauty of his performance, the worthiness of the melodrama, on the sentimental wisdom of the late A. L. Erlanger and George Tyler in persuading him to revive his best known work and on the "quality" of the audiences that have been crowding theaters in the cities of the East to give an affectionate farewell to the dean of American actors.

Mr. Gillette, himself, approached the farewell tour with some-thing of trepidation. His trip, however, has routed any fears and "Sherlock Holmes" settled himself to sheer enjoyment of his own reincarnation.

THE predecessor of all detective and mystery plays, built to pattern if you will, but epitomizing all the thrills and tremors of modern crime plays, "Sherlock Holmes" brought to life Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's lay figures. Gillette did not "play" "Sherlock Holmes" 30 years ago; he was in himself the master mind. Today, according to all reports, he still does not play him; he lives the character he created.

The experience of the American Theater this week is expected to be a repetition of that of all the playhouses he has visited in this farewell tour. From the front rows in the orchestra to topmost seat in the balcony, the older and the younger generation will probably sit forward breathlessly and follow the magic presence of the imperturbable, pipe-smoking, drug-taking, violin-playing, master sleuth—the embodiment of every boy's dream. The crisp, brittle personality; the long, slender hands, the dry, clear voice—all have no semblance of years. "Sherlock Holmes" is ageless.

Of course a farewell tour is a time for affectionate regrets. Perhaps there is a good deal of sentiment about it. Why not? These are the last performances on any stage of one of the outstanding figures in the American theater, affording to the elder generations the final opportunity to pay their respects to a gallant representative of a well remembered past; and affording to the younger generation the opportunity to see one of the greatest living exemplars of the most evanescent of arts.

In the cast with Mr. Gillette are several actors who have been with him in former productions of "Sherlock Holmes"—notably John Miltern, his favorite Moriarity, and William Postance, his favorite stage manager, playing Sidney Prince, the cafe cracksman, in the present production. Others in the company are Wallis Clark, Mon-

WILLIAM GILLETTE — A Living Legend

By Clayton Hamilton

Mr. Hamilton, dramatist, author of many books on the theater, and chairman of the Pulitzer prize drama jury, presents here for the Post-Dispatch some interesting sidelights on his friend, the venerable actor, William Gillette.

LUCKY is the person who becomes a legend in his lifetime, for people pass away and are forgotten but legends cannot die; and to see oneself transmuted to a legend is to enjoy a foretaste of immortality.

The veteran actor, William Gillette, who this season, in the seventy-fifth year, is making a farewell tour of the leading cities of this country, has already received, in city after city, such plaudits as have rarely been accorded to any artist on the stage; yet these ovations, in themselves, would afford him no assurance that he would be remembered a century from now. Though a man may, in his lifetime, have risen to the presidency of the United States, he will, in 50 years, become as dead as James K. Polk or James Buchanan, unless his actual image is transmuted by the popular imagination into a legendary figure, Lincoln lives, because he is a legend; while Andrew Johnson, who survived him on this earth, has been dead and done for ever since he died.

It is, of course, traditional that an actor's work dies with him and that nothing can survive him but the mention of his name. Yet, though William Gillette may make his final bow this season on the stage, he will by no means make his exit from the memory of men.

Throughout the 1880s, Mr. Gillette—in his triple capacity as dramatist, as actor, and as producing director—worked himself into a commanding position in the American theater. At the same time Dr. (now Sir Arthur) Conan Doyle, on the other side of the Atlantic, conceived—from certain hints from Edgar Allen Poe and from certain traits of an actual scientist in Edinburgh—the legendary figure of the great detective, Sherlock Holmes.

IN "A Study in Scarlet," which was the earliest story of Dr. Doyle's in which Sherlock Holmes appeared as the central character, the great detective was described as follows: "In height he was rather over six feet, and so excessively lean that he seemed to be considerably taller. His eyes were sharp and piercing; and his thin, hawklike nose gave his whole expression an air of alertness and decision. His chin, too, had the prominence and squareness which mark the man of determination. His hands were possessed of extraordinary delicacy of touch."

This description, written several years before Dr. Doyle had ever heard of the existence of William Gillette, fitted the physical peculiarities of the actor with the exactness of a police court record; and the character of Sherlock Holmes, moreover, was precisely suited to the actor's temperament. Consequently, toward the close of the 1890s, Mr. Gillette sought the permission of Dr. Doyle to borrow the figure of the great detective and to build a play around him.

The play, entitled "Sherlock Holmes," was not a dramatization of any existing story by Dr. Doyle. It was a new invention, created directly for the stage by William Gillette in his capacity as playwright. It was written in California; and the novelist, from whom the leading figure had been borrowed, never saw the manuscript until it was completed.

WHEN William Gillette first appeared upon the stage as Sherlock Holmes in 1899, it became at once apparent that here was one of the rare instances in history of the perfect identification of an actor with a part. Thenceforth forward, it was no longer possible to think of Sherlock Holmes except in terms of William Gillette, nor, indeed, to think of William Gillette except in terms of Sherlock Holmes. After two solid seasons in America, the actor-playwright took the play to London and played it for two solid seasons on the other side of the Atlantic.

At the same time, one of the ablest illustrators in America, Frederick Dorr Steele, adopted the face and figure of William Gillette as the basis of his illustrations of all the subsequent stories of Sherlock Holmes which, through the course of several years, were written and published by Dr. Doyle. In this instance, we find a rare case of unintentional collaboration between practitioners of three very different arts—a story writer (Dr. Doyle), who imaged a fictitious character; an actor (Mr. Gillette), who gave the character a flesh and blood embodiment, and an illustrator (Mr. Steele) who presented a visual record of this embodiment to hundreds of thousands of people who had never enjoyed the privilege of seeing Mr. Gillette's impersonations on the stage.

WRITING to William Gillette at the outset of his current tour of farewell to the stage, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle remarked: "You make the poor hero of the anemic printed page a very limp object as compared with the glamour of your own personality which you infuse into his stage presentation." And, by the graphic artistry of Frederic Dorr Steele, this glamour has already been suggested to millions of people, all around the rolling world, who have never been privileged to see William Gillette, with their own eyes, on the stage.

By this curious falling out of circumstances, it has become a fact that Sherlock Holmes is by far the most widely known figure in all contemporary fiction; and, since William Gillette has become completely identified with Sherlock Holmes, the actor is already known and will later be remembered by countless people who have never seen him in the flesh.

The career of the youthful organist is being sponsored by churchmen of the Episcopal diocese of St. Louis, who have provided the necessary funds for his musical education in New York.

Daniel Phillipi, organist at Christ Church Cathedral visited young Callaway's home in Louisiana, Mo., and brought his talents to the attention of Dean Scarlett.

The program will be:

Gothic Suite ..... Boellmann
Song of the Chrysanthemum—
Provencal Morning ..... Bonnett
Reve Angelique ..... Rubenstein
March Russe ..... Schminke
Two Pieces From the Woodland

Hayes to Sing at Coliseum.

A Roland Hayes recital announced for Friday evening, April 11, has been arranged for the Coliseum by Elizabeth Cueny, who will reduce the arena to concert hall dimensions by dropping a curtain from the girders of the building to the floor, thus cutting off about two-thirds of the usual capacity and providing a more intimate setting.

Dickens Recital at Principia.

Frank Speaight, an English actor who specializes on Dickens recitals, will present "David Copperfield" at Howard Hall, Principia, next Thursday night.

Ruth Chatterton, in "Sarah and Son," at the Missouri.

Opera Star in the Films

Lawrence Tibbett, of the Metropolitan, Makes His Bow in "The Rogue Song" at Loews—Laying Plans for a Theatre Devoted Entirely to News Pictures—Zoe Akins Tries Her Hand As a Movie Playwright—The Rise of Jack Mulhall From a Cafe to Stardom.

BY NIE.

THE first of the near grand operas—at least it has a famous star from the Metropolitan Opera House heading its cast—to reach the screen "The Rogue Song," is on display down at Loew's. We have had, already, musical comedies and light operas but the appearance of Lawrence Tibbett, perhaps the greatest living baritone, and the first major opera star to be featured in a talking picture, lends considerable importance to this film.

In "The Rogue Song," filmed entirely in Technicolor, Tibbett sings songs ranging from those of operatic caliber, with a symphony orchestra accompaniment, to simple love ballads.

He rides at breakneck pace through varied adventures, while brilliant ballets, magnificent mountain scenery, and other interesting details are reputed to make this picture one of the most elaborate productions of the year.

Tibbett is himself a romance. The son of William Edward Tibbett, former sheriff of Kern County, California, who died capturing the bandit McKinney, Tibbett was born and reared in the West, and after attending school in Los Angeles became an actor. He was a success at this when his voice was discovered by Josef Depuy, and he was launched in opera. Today he is one of the greatest of the Metropolitan stars.

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer signed him for the new picture, special preparations were made, for it was to be the first approach to an operatic film. The story was written by Frances Marion, with dialogue by John Colton, of "Shanghai Gesture" and "Rain" fame. Herbert Stothart was chosen to compose the music, Clifford Grey wrote the lyrics, and interpolations were contributed by Franz Lehar. Besides Tibbett's songs, there is one with a women's chorus sung by Elsa Alsen, Wagnerian soprano, and one with Wallace Macdonald and a male "bandit chorus."

AT the Ambassador Theater this week, where Eddie Dowling, musial comedy star, is appearing in person as well as in the picture, "Blaze O'Glory," the brothers Skouras are trying an experiment. Following in the footsteps of New York, which has a movie house given over exclusively to news pictures, the Ambassador will run, twice daily, a half hour's performance of films made up from the news reels. These pictures will go on the screen from 10:30 until 11 every morning and from 6 to 6:30 each evening.

If enough interest is shown in the try-out the Skouras will look around for a smaller theater, downtown, in which nothing but news pictures will be displayed at all times.

HOLLYWOOD has a new recruit from the field of literature and the drama. She is Zoe Akins, St. Louis, poet and playwright and one of her first examples of screen work is "Sarah and Son," starring Ruth Chatterton, which is running now at the Missouri.

Miss Akins has enjoyed literary and dramatic prominence for some years. She is the author of such successes as "Declassee" and "Daddy's Gone a Hunting."

Her first contribution to literature was a volume of poetry which attracted the favorable praise of English critics. She followed it with a number of short stories which appeared in various high class national magazines.

"Declassee" ran for a full year at the Empire Theater in New York. Ethel Barrymore was the star. Other of her plays which have enjoyed successful runs are "Papa," "The Magical City," "Foot-loose," "The Varying Shore," "Greatness," "A Royal Fandango" and "First Love." She has also written a successful novel, "Cake Upon the Waters."

Miss Akins is a member of the Poetry Society of America, the American Dramatists and Composers Society and the Authors' League of America.

Paramount selected her to write the screen adaptation for "Sarah and Son," the novel by Timothy Shea. It is the story of the rise to fame of a poor but ambitious young woman, and provides one of the most thrilling and emotional parts in which Miss Chatterton has yet appeared.

✿ ✿ ✿ ✿

A SLUMMING party of New Yorkers visiting a Newark, N. J., cafe was responsible for Jack Mulhall, co-featured with El Brendel and Sue Carol, in "The Golden Calf," at the Fox Theater, becoming a motion picture star.

Mulhall was singing in the Newark cafe when the "slummers" spotted him.

"He's far too good for this place," they decided. One of them gave him a card, introducing him to Ned Wayburn, Broadway's leading dancing master. Wayburn was impressed with the youth and gave him a part in a Broadway production. On Broadway he met Rex Ingram who introduced him to the movies. Together they worked as extras at the old Edison studio at Fort Lee, N. J.

Several months later Mulhall played a bit in Hal Reid's "Hard Cash" and made such a hit that he got a job with Biograph. There he played with the Gish girls, Blanche Sweet, Lionel Barrymore and others destined to fame.

Mulhall then scored as the juvenile lead with Blanche Sweet in "The House of Discord," a super two-reeler of that day, so they sent him to Hollywood to become a regular leading man. Instead, he became a slap-stick comedian.

✿ ✿ ✿ ✿

TWICE Jack tried to get back to dramatic leads and twice he failed. The third time he became a Western star with Universal. That was the beginning of a career which eventually resulted in his playing romantic leads opposite more famous film heroines than any other actor. Among them are:

Mary Pickford, Dorothy and Lillian Gish, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Blanche Sweet, Mabel Normand, Mae Murray, Florence Vidor, Marguerite Clark, Bebe Daniels, Dorothy Phillips, Patsy Ruth Miller, Jacquelin Logan, Louise Lovely, Alice Terry, Edith Roberts, Lya de Putti, Betty Blythe, Dolores del Rio, Colleen Moore, Corinne Griffith, Billie Dove Dorothy Mackail and Alice White.

Mulhall's first starring vehicle was the First National all-talking production of "Twin Beds." Other recent pictures are "Show Girl in Hollywood," "Murder Will Out" and "In the Next Room."

Mulhall sings as well as acts in "The Golden Calf."

The Sinfonietta's Debut

Possibilities That the Permanent Existence of Such an Organization Would Open Up in the Field of Little Heard Music.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

A PROGRAM of little heard music will be played next Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Gold Room at the Jefferson Hotel by a string ensemble of 18 members under the direction of Alexander Thiede. This performance will be given in connection with a meeting of the Women's Committee of the St. Louis Symphony Society, at which ways and means of stalking the Big Money needed for the orchestra will be discussed. The general public is invited, 50 cents will be charged for admission to the main floor and tea will be served.

So much for the main facts.

What needs to be emphasized about the event is that it will mark the debut of what—for the moment—has been called the St. Louis Sinfonietta. Presumably this organization was brought into existence merely for the purpose of providing music for this one occasion, but if some of those who hear it played next Wednesday should be led to insist on its permanent maintenance the state of music in St. Louis will be greatly enriched.

The reason for that is not far to seek. There is a great body of musical literature which the concert-going public in St. Louis—and in most cities for that matter—never hears because it is never played. And it is never played because the organization necessary for its proper presentation does not exist. The string section of the Symphony Orchestra will occasionally play Hugo Wolf's "Italian Serenade" or a Handel "Concerto Grosso," but Symphony conductors wisely refrain from giving too much music that demands a smaller ensemble and an auditorium of intimate dimensions in order to achieve a proper effect.

A local patron of music remarked the other day that for every 100 persons who were familiar with the Beethoven symphonies not more than 10 were familiar with the Beethoven quartets. That statement is undoubtedly true and it is also true that of that 100 not one perhaps has ever heard a Purcell's Fantasia for Strings. This is not to suggest that a Purcell Fantasia is as important as a Beethoven quartet. But it would be a musical experience worth having to hear music of that sort occasionally not to mention other compositions written for small instrumental ensembles which have the same power over an audience as the ordinary symphony concert or piano recital.

IN preparing the program for next Wednesday afternoon's concert, Mr. Thiede made a survey of the music immediately available—that is to say of music that a publisher could furnish on demand — and found there was enough for an indefinite number of programs and practically none of it had ever been played in St. Louis. This, of course, would only scratch the surface. Research in the Congressional Library or the British Museum would uncover many more compositions that could be played as they should be played next Wednesday

THACHER CONFIRMED AS SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The nomination of Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher of New York as Solicitor-General of the United States was unanimously confirmed by the Senate today without debate. He has had the unusual distinction of having his confirmation first held up because of his electrical power company holdings and then because of the fear that he might be tainted with Russian Communism.

The Senate Judiciary Committee delayed its report on the nomination until he had sold his utility securities after the nomination had been favorably reported. Senator Overman (Dem.), North Carolina, blocked action until Thacher's alleged connections with the Soviet Government were investigated.

Miss Mary Kilbreth, representative of The Woman Patriot, filed a brief with the committee which urged that there was evidence of Thacher's friendliness with officials of Russian Communism. The brief also criticised one of Thacher's decisions in a deportation case. Thacher answered these charges in a letter, placed in the Congressional Record today by Senator Borah of Idaho, a member of the committee.

Thacher's Letter.

"I have been advised," wrote Thacher, "that some objection has been made to my qualifications for the office of Solicitor-General because of a decision made by me in the case of the United States of America ex-real John Voich (alias Vujevich) relator, against the Commission of Immigration.

"So that you may be informed regarding the matter, I am taking the liberty of inclosing to you herewith a copy of the memorandum decision and a letter from the District Attorney of this district enclosing a copy of his correspondence with the Attorney-General and the Commissioner of Immigration. You will note from these documents that the department agreed with the District Attorney that the administrative record did not sustain the charges contained in the warrant of deportation, and accordingly the appeal which was taken by the District Attorney pending receipt of instructions from the Attorney-General was withdrawn on advice from the Attorney-General.

"I am also informed that some question has been raised because I acted a long time as counsel for the Amtorg Trading Corporation, a corporation organized to carry on the Russian-American trade. It being stated that this company was engaged in bringing into the United States a large amount of Russian gold. I represented this company in a purely professional capacity for about nine months before becoming a member of this court, Feb. 3, 1925.

Not Concerned With Deal.

"In February, 1928, the State Bank of Moscow shipped to New York certain gold specie to be used on a basis of credit for purely business purposes. This transaction occurred after I had been on the bench three years. I was not concerned in any way with this transaction.

"Perhaps I should also add that I acted as counsel from the time of its organization until I became a member of this court, for the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, a corporation organized to purchase raw cotton in the United States, for which Mr. Alexander Gumberg was general manager. As you are no doubt aware, the purchase of raw cotton through this agency were very substantial, and of great importance to the cotton growers of the South."

GERMANY TO TAX TEETOTALERS

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN.—Seats on the water wagon will be taxed in Germany this year providing the financial program adopted by the Cabinet passes the Reichstag.

Forty million marks are expected to be raised for social welfare in this way. The tax is to be levied on mineral water but since practically all the mineral waters drunk in Germany are drunk by people who (at least for an hour or two) are putting aside the usual bottle of wine or glass of beer, it amounts to a tax on abstinence.

FASCISM WILL RESIST ALL ATTACKS, MUSSOLINI SAYS

Same Spirit, Will and Motto of 11 Years Ago Prevails, Anniversary Message Declares.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 22.—Premier Mussolini, in a nation-wide message today addressed to the black shirts of all Italy on the occasion of tomorrow's commemoration of the eleventh anniversary of the founding of Fascist combat groups, said that every attempt against the united will of a nation of 42,000,000 inhabitants was bound to fail. The message was contained in the order sheet of the Fascist party.

After briefly reviewing the circumstances of the organization of the combat groups, the Premier continued:

"The reminiscence for us is only a moment in our spirit and is immediately replaced by our anxiety to do and to realize."

The Premier said that "during 11 years Fascism prevailed over a thousand difficulties of every sort, but many others, no less grave, wait before us. Let us, therefore, regard with tranquil security the unfolding of events. Retrograde forces in coalition against young Fascist Italy do not disturb us. Let us make known to every one that we have the same spirit, the same will and the same motto of 11 years ago. Added to that we have experience, method and a more profound knowledge of men and things. With these reflections we rest one day to remember, while fascism enters its second decade which will be more glorious and more combative than the first, on guard."

U. S. ANNOUNCES $92,000,000 FOR BUILDINGS IN 1930

Mellon Says This Amount Is in Addition to $40,000,000 Projects Already Under Way.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The Treasury Department is to launch $92,000,000 in new construction this year in addition to expediting the $40,000,000 worth of public buildings now under way.

Secretary Mellon made this announcement today together with a statement that if the Senate will pass the Keyes-Elliott public buildings bill which would authorize $115,000,000 for construction, still more work may be undertaken during the year.

By June, the Treasury head said, $10,000,000 of new construction will have been placed on the market and between then and October expenditure of an additional $35,000,000 is to be under way. These expenditures will be scattered through 40 states on projects ranging from village post offices to enormous Federal office structures in the larger cities.

All of this is to be exclusive of the construction in the District of Columbia, where $30,000,000 of public buildings are under construction. For the district, the Keyes-Elliott measure carries $10,000,000 for new Interstate Commerce Commission and Public Health Service buildings and for reconstructing the exterior of the State, War and Navy buildings to conform with the architecture of the Treasury. The White House would then be flanked by two similar structures.

Some Leading Projects.

Passage of the Keyes-Elliott bill, Mr. Mellon said, would permit speeding up construction of the $14,000,000 Chicago postoffice, which is to be the largest in the world, the $6,500,000 Pittsburg structure and Federal buildings at San Francisco, Portland, Oregon, Hartford, Conn., Springfield, Ill., involving a total of approximately $30,000,000, besides ten other projects yet to be determined.

The contracts to be let under the present program for the year include a 21-story $6,000,000 Federal Office building in Boston and a $3,300,000 structure on the site of the present Baltimore Federal building.

Contracts already have been awarded for a $1,147,000 Marine Hospital at San Francisco; a $1,000,000 Federal building at Scranton, Pa., and one costing $900,000 at Memphis, Tenn.; a $585,000 immigration station at Seattle; a $830,000 building at Denver and smaller structures at Honolulu, McMinnville, Tenn., Rushville, Ind., and Waynesburg, and Tyrone, Pa.

Bids have been received for construction in East Chicago, Ind., Fullman, Wash., and Sterling, Colo. Others have been asked for buildings in Milwaukee, Ottawa, Ill., Price, Utah, and Scotts Bluff, Neb.

The list of the projects contemplated under the $92,000,000 expenditure, most of those not designated being post offices, include:

Indiana, Lafayette; Kansas, Wichita and Junction City; Michigan, Benton Harbor and Flint; Missouri, Kansas City and Sedalia; Ohio, Toledo and Marine Hospital at Cleveland; West Virginia, Morgantown and Parkersburg; Iowa, Iowa City; Oklahoma, Oklahoma City and Tulsa; Minnesota, South St. Paul; Texas, Galveston Marine Hospital; Wisconsin, Racine and Marshfield; Arizona, Prescott and San Luis; Colorado, Canon City; Idaho, Nanpa; Montana, Havre; New Mexico, Albuquerque; North Dakota, St. Johns Inspection Station; South Dakota, Vermillion; Utah, Ogden; Wyoming, Casper; California, San Bernardino; Oregon, Klamath Falls; Washington, Seattle Federal Office Building and Blaine Inspection Station.

MIAMI SOCIETY STIRRED BY CHARITY BENEFIT SUIT

Many Named as Defendants in $10,000 Action Deny They Consented to Act as Patronesses.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 22.—Society circles of Miami were aroused today over the naming of more than 20 leaders as defendants in a suit for $10,000 damages growing out of a society circus given as a charity benefit at Miami Beach, March 7 and 8.

Names of two of the origanal 29 defendants were withdrawn today by William J. Dunn, attorney for Irene Bordoni, stage star, and a number of other plaintiffs. The names of Frank E. Gannett, newspaper publisher and winter resident at Miami Beach, and Col. E. H. R. Green, son of the late Hetty Green, were stricken from the list.

Opinion among social leaders is that Mrs. Ganson Clark, promoter of the circus which ended in a financial tangle, confusion of claims and absence of benefits to performers or the four charities it was expected to benifit, apparently drew the list or sponsors without consulting those whose names added brilliance to the list. Many of the defendants asserted that they had not acted as committee members, nor had they consented to serve as patrons or patronesses of the affair. Among the latter were Mr. and Mrs. Hewett Brown, James H. Gilman and C. S. Cooper.

NEXT SUNDAY ARTHUR PIERSON and GRACE TROY Announce Arrival of "LITTLE ACCIDENT" LAFF RIOT

This is Wanda Perry, a young Broadway star. She is learning that proper care makes hair more attractive, even for a girl of twelve!

Now You Can Protect Her Lovely Hair!

NATURE is gradually lowering our ability to grow hair. Baldness is becoming the rule among men; authorities predict the day of feminine baldness is coming.

Now, more than ever before, it is necessary for the whole family to practice proper care of the hair. Millions of men and women know how Danderine helps stop falling hair; dissolves dandruff. It changes dull, lustreless, brittle hair into hair that is soft, sparkling, vigorous. Its consistent use encourages the growth of long, silky abundant hair. With Danderine it is so easy to "train" a child's hair; to keep it orderly, sparkling, clean. Danderine accentuates the natural curl of a child's hair. A girl's waves look more natural when "set" with it. They stay in longer.

Use Danderine with children to overcome the evils of frequent washing. It puts back into hair and scalp the natural oils removed by soap and water. Danderine isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. It is no trouble to use. Just put a little on the brush each time the hair is arranged. That will keep the scalp healthy and the hair always vigorous, soft, lustrous, easily managed.

The World's First Skyscraper in Colors

By ARTHUR STRAWN
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

MODERN architecture, now in the throes of radical transition, is being subjected to another revolutionary experiment with the recent announcement of plans for the construction in New York of what will be the world's first skyscraper in colors. Many buildings have employed modest touches of color by way of adornment, to emphasize structural design or to relieve the conventional monotone of the structural material, but this will be the first skyscraper to depend almost exclusively on a brilliantly colored exterior for its esthetic appeal.

The structure, which will be known as the Fashion Building, is to be erected on upper Fifth avenue under the auspices of Amos Parrish & Company, specialists in problems of merchandising and in forecasting fashion trends, a service which they dispense to several hundred stores in the United States.

The building will be 720 feet high. According to the accompanying sketch, it will have fifty-six stories, but a simple change in the steel specifications could deliver sixty-six stories with slightly lower ceilings in the same height. The first ten stories are intended to be suitable for retail-store space and the upper floors for office space, with the office elevators going right through the store building, making their first stop on the tenth floor.

It is the treatment of the exterior, however, which marks an innovation and which arouses the curiosity and interest of all persons interested in architecture—and this, to some degree, means practically everyone who is in any way to come in contact with the structure.

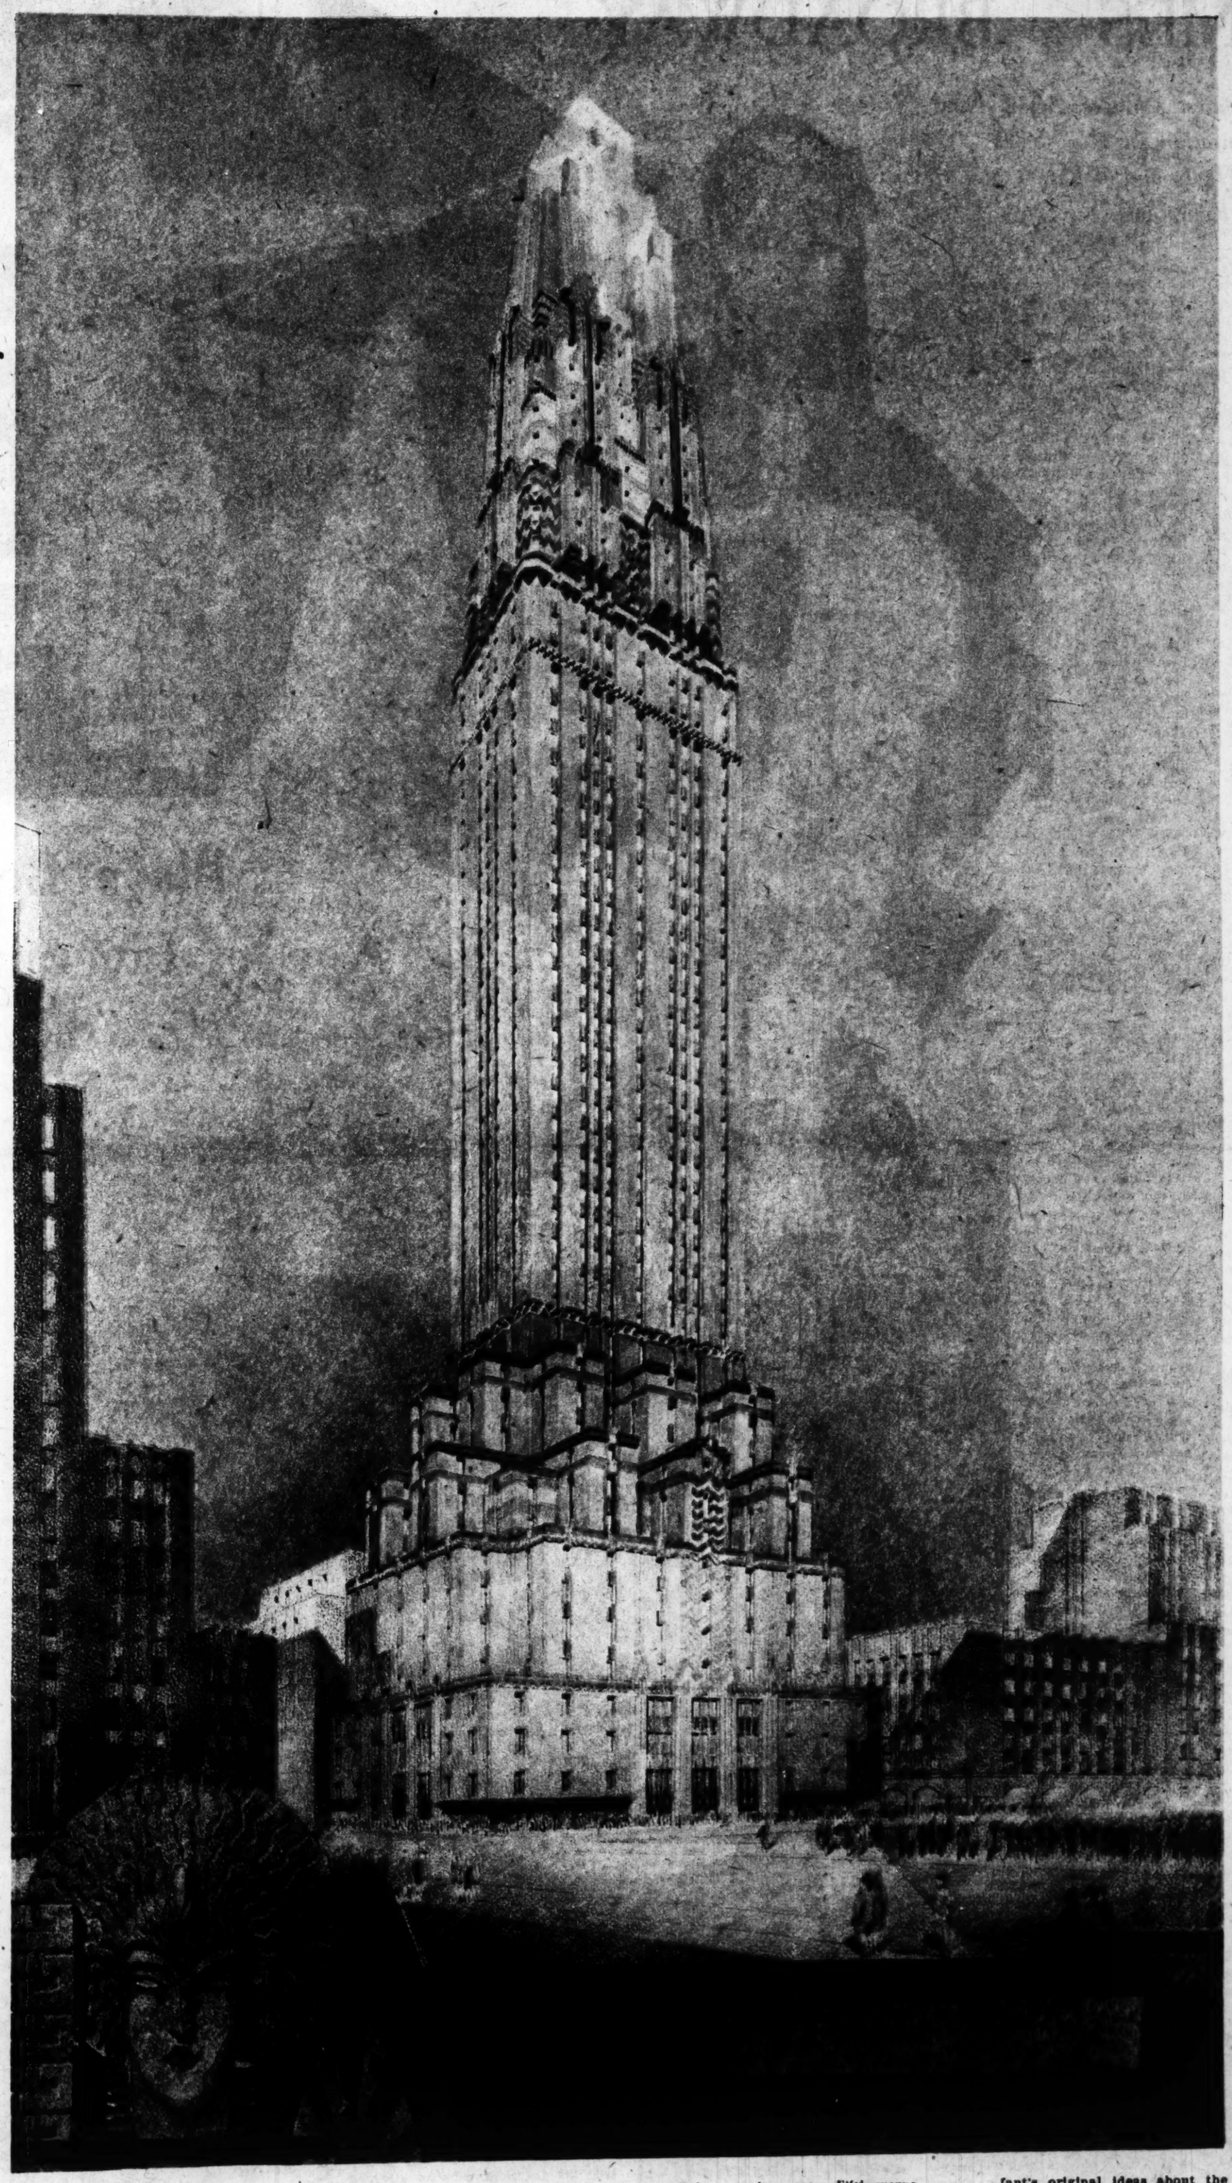
THE color effect is to be achieved by the use of standard terra cotta blocks, glazed in the required color. Centuries ago the Chinese used similarly glazed tiles on the roofs and other parts of their more imposing structures, and the color thus produced has been found to be practically weather-proof and hence imperishable.

Orange, red, green, blue and yellow are the colors that will be used in greatest abundance, and on the front face of the crowning tower of the building will be an idealized figure of a woman, in colors, to represent Fashion.

A year ago Amos Parrish, planning on constructing a building that would serve as a sort of fashion center, and at the same time wanting a building that would in a very real sense reflect and symbolize the functions it was serving, went with his problem to William Bergen Chalfant, a young but well-known Pittsburg architect. It was Parrish's idea that for the sake of advertising value a striking building should be envisaged. And since fashion itself is a reflection of mass taste, it was thought that the appeal of the building should be emotional rather than intellectual in order to have wide effectiveness.

To solve this problem Chalfant immediately suggested that the building be done in colors, a suggestion which represents a radical departure in architecture, but which seems to be a natural expression of Chalfant's background and training. For Chalfant was born 38 years ago in Tsinan, the capital of Shantung Province, China, where his father has long been engaged in missionary work. While a youth in China young Chalfant had ample opportunity to observe the liberal use of color on the exterior of the more imposing Chinese homes and buildings, and on one occasion he was impressed at learning that the brilliant green glazing of the tiles on the roof of a certain palace was 800 years old and still had lost none of its brilliance.

Later Chalfant attended the Carnegie Tech. School of Design in Pittsburg and on being graduated worked with Professor Hornbostle, head of the school, on plans for new buildings for the Institute. Hornbostle was very sympathetic toward Chalfant's original ideas about the use of color in architecture, as was Raymond Hood, then an instructor in the school, though now a world-famed architect. Chalfant later designed the Masonic Temple in Miami, the high-school group at Coral Gables and other buildings. Color played a part in each of these buildings, but it was not until Amos Parrish came to him that Chalfant saw, and grasped, his opportunity to use color on a large scale and to make it the chief medium of appeal.



An architect's sketch of the Fashion Building, which will be erected on upper Fifth avenue, New York.

The Effect Will Be Achieved With Glazed Terra Cotta Blocks, in Five Tones.

A building in full color was decided upon. Such a building has not yet been done, although the Radiator Building in New York does make dramatic use of color to heighten the effects of the design. Other efforts to use color have all been rather half-hearted and have all apparently been premised on the theory that color should merely subserve the interests of plastic decoration, instead of being used, as Chalfant contends it should be used, directly as a medium in itself and not merely to emphasize details.

THE dependence on color rather than on mere design for appeal is not whim on the part of Chalfant, but rather is based on a definite artistic creed which the architect defends without any air of apology. The logic of color in building is advanced by the architect himself as follows:

"All buildings up to the present have been built with a masonry tradition, which means that monotone has been fixed in the general mind as normal for any structure. All efforts to escape from the masonry tradition have been turned into highly abstract channels, such as those indicated by Le Corbusier in France and Frank Lloyd Wright in America, who have argued with genius, though somewhat narrowly, I think, that a true modern expression should be in metal and glass, reflections of our machine age.

"But theories of art always yield to practice, and to affect in practice a metal-and-glass or any other form of purely subjective design always involves an actual internal hypocrisy not less objectionable than that which it is supposed to abolish. On the other hand, the moment we treat the outside of a building in a way which is impossible to stone, we immediately, without strain, get away from the masonry structural tradition in expression and are freed to any sort of 'skin' expression which our taste prefers, and so can escape monotone and achieve whatever color effects we desire.

"In short, the idea of the building in full color is not presented solely as a stunt; it is seriously advanced as a genuine solution for the problem of expression of the Modern Age, and in addition provides an emotionally esthetic value where the machine solutions provide intellectual estheticism alone."

IN THE adopted sketch all surface materials, with the exception of a few ornamental details not absolutely necessary to the scheme, are standard machine-cut terra cotta block, with the addition of a triangular shape which can be economically produced in the same manner. The only variation from the standard block will be found in the color of the glaze, which is always applied after the block is cut. The cost of the proposed building and lot is roughly estimated at about $15,000,000, only about half of which will be for the building itself.

The color scheme as presented in the accompanying sketch by the architect is not necessarily the one that will be adopted finally, but is one of several possible schemes under consideration.

The AGE-OLD ART of CHINA COMES to BROADWAY

Mei Lan-Fang, Greatest Chinese Actor, Now the Newest Sensation in New York —What He Is and What He Represents.

Three photographs of Mei Lan-Fang, the greatest Chinese actor.

MEI LAN-FANG, who is China's greatest actor, has come to Broadway. And though he gives his plays in his native language and without any scenery whatsoever, and without a single woman in the cast, he has scored one of the great successes of the season.

Critics and public alike acclaimed him immediately. His engagement, which was to have been limited to two or three weeks at the most, has been indefinitely extended, and it is almost impossible to get tickets for any performance.

So great is Mei Lan-Fang's skill that he is able to project the most subtle ranges of emotion despite the fact that only a negligible few in his audiences are able to understand the dialogue. He assumes only feminine roles.

M. de Gracia Concepcion, a Philippine scholar and students of the Oriental esthetic, who has had an opportunity to observe the reaction of both Eastern and Western audiences to Mei Lan-Fang, here discusses his art, its origins and background. Mr. Concepcion, who is returning to his home in the Philippine Islands after a long stay in New York, has published several books of verse in English.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK CITY these days is definitely captivated by the glamorous East. To be more specific, it is the Chinese bloom that has suddenly infused its essence and has now found "the thing." And it was not the army of Chiang that did it; neither its too persuasive food nor the depth of its ethical teachings by Confucius and Lao-tze. It is the Chinese theater that is solely responsible for this, and this theater, by the way, is a one-man show in the universal person of Mei Lan-Fang.

He is still a very young man, very dainty to look at. The investiture of the poetic appellation as the first of The Pear Orchard did not miss its mark. At the Forty-ninth street Theater he is filling the house to capacity where he gives "The Suspected Slipper," "The Exorcising of the Fox Spirit," "The Heroic Maid"—to name only a few titles from his wide range of repertoire.

At the Plaza Hotel he holds audiences to the press. He is quite liberal in distributing his off-stage hours to tea functions given him in his honor, while his press representative gets furious for his inability to apprehend him.

It is said that he brought with him costume property valued at $100,000 and jewelry which is above that mark. It is to be noted that in the Chinese theater scenery is practically unknown and such other stage splendors as are essential for Ziegfeld's Follies, for instance. The costumes, therefore, make up for what it lacks in other things.

EARLY in his age, Mei Lan-Fang showed special aptitude for dramatic talent. This may be said to be an inherited proficiency in the arts from his forbears. Like some of our famous stage characters, he began his career and soon identified himself in female impersonation at the age of 12. From then on his rise to national acclaim in China was meteoric, and today, at the age of 32, he commands the adoration of the whole Chinese people. Articles of apparel are named after him: lip-sticks, dresses, hats, shoes and popular brands of foods.

In China such adulation would be inevitable, for the young man combines in his profession the highest cultivation of culture. Besides being an actor, he sings, paints and writes exquisitely. It is said that he is the author of many of the plays in his stock of productions.

The royal summonses were served upon him—that is, the sumptuosity of such imperial remnants within the Republic, granted or bestowed upon him the highest honors which were traditionally given by the past Emperors, to the greatest of their actors. This was in 1923, in the presence of the deposed Emperor, Hsuan T'ung, in the Yang Hsin Palace of the ancient city.

It is undoubtedly the supreme expression of art, this which Mei Lan-Fang now is conveying before the American public. Such world celebrities as Fritz Kreisler, the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden and others have proclaimed his triumph. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, in conjunction with Mrs. W. C. Wu, the wife of the Chinese Minister to the United States; Charles R. Crane, former Minister of the United States to China, Profs. John Dewey and Paul Monroe, together with the China Institute have co-ordinated their labor in making it possible for Mei Lan-Fang and his company to visit this country. The success of the undertaking is without parallel, considering the barriers of language and technical differences between the Western stage and that of Eastern, in the case of the Chinese.

The forte of Mei Lan-Fang on the Chinese stage is the impersonation of female characters—and for this matter, no Chinese actor could achieve distinction in any other part, at least not to the same height as that of the female impersonator. Sex has never been banned as a theme in Chinese plays. It has played an important factor indeed in the development of the ancient dramas—as something primal. And women have acted on the stage. It was not until Ch'ien Lung, the Emperor (1736-1795) came into power that women as actresses came into general disrepute, hence their absence from the stage altogether. From then on the female parts were taken by men. And then women as auditors faded away.

Even to this day there is only one modern theater, the very up-to-date one, which does not discriminate against the admission of women even in the audience. In Pekin there are two old-style theaters. One does not admit women, while the other only admits a very limited number in specially designated boxes in the balcony. Some modern theaters now allow women downstairs in a specially designated section.

The republican regime brought back to the stage certain of the privileges of women actresses that they enjoyed before the reign of Ch'ien Lung.

Music is considered an integral part of the Chinese drama. For the actors sing, that is, when they reach the highest pitch of emotional expression, similar to that of the ancient Greek plays. The musical dramas are characterized by their musical instruments: the P'i-huand, which is accompanied by brass percussion instruments; the hu-ch'in, a two-stringed violin, bowed with a horizontal motion; the k'un-ch'u, which is the flute and reed motif. This latter flourished during the Yuan and Ming dynasties of the 1280 to 1664 period. It is only of the most recent date that an attempt is being made by younger playwrights to present spoken dramas in the manner of the European stage.

The Chinese stage is a repository of the legendary heroes and heroines and is peopled by soldiers of fortune, emperors, scholars, priests and famous beauties. There is queer blending of the tragic and comic. History, religion and ethics furnish the mainspring of frequent battles, songs and mysteries.

There is nothing realistic in the Chinese drama. It is a highly-colored and sensitized vision of the exotic, far removed from the everyday realities of life. There is a seeming magical touch when one is carried away by the impressionism afforded by music, metre, rhythmic gestures, postures—composite of the centuries of Chinese civilization and culture.

The Chinese theater is the quintessence of beauty in meager lines and Mei Lan-Fang is the consecrated spirit and interpreter of that beauty.

Louise Mary Meiszner, of St. Louis, Can't Reach the Pedals on Her Piano, But She Gets Along Without Them.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

Louise Mary Meiszner.

LOUISE MARY MEISZNER is such a little girl that her age is still figured in half-years. Louise Mary is five-and-a-half. But that is no particular claim to fame; there are lots of little girls that old, and many girls a great deal older—though not all of them admit it. The quality that makes Louise Mary different from most little girls is that already she's a pianiste and a musician, and one who has absolute pitch—which is to say she can tell the key of C when she hears it, or F sharp, or G flat, or any other note. You strike the note and Louise Mary calls it.

Louise—because we know her well enough by now to drop the Mary—is the daughter of John Meiszner of 3729A Bamberger avenue. Mr. Meiszner is a musician; he plays the flute in one of the large motion-picture houses. Mrs. Meiszner is a musician, too, though not engaged in professional work. She is a pianiste, and both she and Mr. Meiszner attended the Royal Academy Franz Liszt in Budapest.

It was only a few weeks ago that Mr. Meiszner was practicing one morning on his instrument, as all good musicians should, and he blew, or puffed, or whatever flute players do, two C naturals. Louise had been listening to her father practicing — maybe just to see that he didn't loaf on the job—and she immediately demanded to know why he had given two Cs in succession to an unsuspecting world.

"How did you know they were Cs?" Mr. Meiszner asked his daughter.

"Why," said Louise, rather bewildered at such a strange question, "I know all the notes when I hear them."

"Uhm hmm," thought her father. "Uhm hmm. Well, we'll just see."

So becoming articulate he again put his lips to his flute, blew, and said: "What was that? What's this? How about that?" And Louise called every note as it emanated from the flute, called it correctly.

Louise has been learning to play the piano since she was 3. Her mother is her teacher, and it is a very pleasant job, for Louise likes to do what you didn't like to do—she likes to practice. She has gotten along the road to where she plays Paderewski's "Minuet," Dvorak's "Humoresk," Beethoven's "Fur Elise." Now she is going to take on a little Mozart.

SHE exhibited her skill to me, and I want to tell you the girl's there. She can't reach the pedals, but she gets along without them. Her small hand has difficulty in stretching over the great territory covered by an octive, but she does it, even if she has to strike the tip of the last key with the tip of her little finger to attain her desire. And true enough, when she's stretching toward the end of the keyboard, you expect her to lose her balance and topple off the stool. But she manages to stick to it. There is no weak performance when Louise plays. She strikes her notes roundly. The other day she broke the hammers on three keys.

Notes—she doesn't need notes. She can play from memory. She played the "Minuet" for me with her notes before her, and after a bit she did the trick without her notes.

She has a very good memory. Besides learning the piano, she pursues her academic studies at the Rose Fanning kindergarten. The children were to have a performance recently and the teacher decided Louise would furnish the music. It was necessary that she play "The March of the Wooden Soldiers." So she got the music one day and knew it by memory the next.

Not long ago she gave her first concert performance. She played for a week at a large neighborhood movie house.

"Did anybody applaud?" I asked her.

"Oh, yes," she said.

"How many of them?" I asked.

"All of them," she told me.

So you see she's accepted.

BECAUSE a wife worked hard for nine years, Charles T. Davis, said to be the world's richest ex-convict, paroled recently, is sharing the $3,000,000 she earned. But, blessed by fortune and cursed by fate, he's suspicious and she's unhappy. Although she built up their $57,000 medical-supply business to a $3,000,000 concern, in the decade since he was incarcerated for the murder of a detective, the two are estranged over business troubles.

When Davis was released from Dannemora prison, in this State, on March 1, there was no joyous meeting between the two. He sped westward in a private car. She wished him "God-speed" and remained in Brooklyn.

More than a score of years ago Davis married Henrietta Roesler. She was an elocution teacher in Brooklyn. He was a $15-a-week clerk. Looking forward, they planned to start an industry. She helped him save $500. Some of it came from a small inheritance from his grandfather; the rest from his salary. Some of it came from the tiny sums which she earned addressing envelopes, teaching elocution, and the pennies she saved by skimping food. Together they started the medical-suture industry in the cellar of their home.

"My education did not give me the background for a business career the college girl gets today. The only special training I had was in elocution. That was the career I had in mind before I fell in love. But when we started our little business of selling hot-water bottles, crutches and instruments to doctors and hospitals, I was the office manager, and a little bit of everything else that was needed," Mrs. Davis explains. "All I knew about keeping books was the training I got in running a house on a careful budget. But my father was a self-made business man and I could not remember when my mother had not helped him."

Because sutures have to be sterilized, the wife often sat up all night in the little plant, attending to that end of the work, too.

During the ensuing years the business grew and began to stand on its tiny feet. Two children were born: Austin, now 21, and Luther, now 15.

EVENTUALLY the business moved out of the cellar into a factory. A partner was taken in, and the firm came to be known as Davis & Geck, Inc.

It was then, according to Mrs. Davis, that she discovered her husband was "unusual."

"Mr. Davis always was decidedly different," she said. "I made allowances, smoothed things over, tried to hold friendships together, and called peculiarities genius to myself until the tragedy occurred."

Davis was obsessed with countless fears. The least difficulty made him fret. He grew thin. He lost his appetite. So afraid of disease germs was he that he would spend hours at a time scrubbing and bathing himself. One

EVENTUALLY the business moved out of the cellar into a factory. A partner was taken in, and the firm came to be known as Davis & Geck, Inc.

It was then, according to Mrs. Davis, that she discovered her husband was "unusual."

"Mr. Davis always was decidedly different," she said. "I made allowances, smoothed things over, tried to hold friendships together, and called peculiarities genius to myself until the tragedy occurred."

Davis was obsessed with countless fears. The least difficulty made him fret. He grew thin. He lost his appetite. So afraid of disease germs was he that he would spend hours at a time scrubbing and bathing himself. One time he shaved off all his hair, even his eyebrows, for fear they were infected with germs.

Both his home and his office were kept full of guns, lest someone come to steal his chemical plans. At night he kept his home brightly lighted to keep off burglars. There were weapons in his car and in his pockets. He even urged his wife to carry a stiletto to ward off danger.

Mrs. Davis, as she looked when her husband was on trial for murder.

THE climax came in 1921. Davis' auto was stolen. The theft was reported to an insurance company and the claim was satisfied. Davis bought a new car, one identical with the old. Through some error the license plates on his new car duplicated the old, and investigators suspected that Davis had recovered his car without notifying the insurance company about it.

A passing policeman noted the plates and came to this erroneous conclusion. After making inquiries the policeman made his way to the Davis & Geck plant. Davis sent out word that he was too busy to see the policeman. That refusal confirmed the policeman's suspicions. He left the plant. A few minutes later he returned with two detectives.

One of the detectives, Joseph Bridgetts, forced his way into Davis' private office and the other two followed. Bridgetts accused Davis of theft. Instead of laughing his way out of the misunderstanding the enraged Davis picked up one of his many guns, fired point-blank at Bridgetts, killed him and wounded the other two.

The tale of Davis' many peculiarities and eccentricities was laid before the Brooklyn jury at the time of his murder trial. It was brought out that both his father and uncle had died in an insane asylum. Davis was adjudged insane and sent to the Matteawan (N. J.) asylum.

"I went to see Mr. Davis every day while he was in jail and then when they sent him to Matteawan I spent every week-end there, sent him delicacies, and attended to his needs," said Mrs. Davis. "A letter to him was written and posted every night."

Before he left for the asylum he made over his 94 shares of the property to her. She already owned 51 shares. He told her to handle the business for him. It was a terrific task.

"When the business was turned over to me I assumed the responsibility of making the best of it," Mrs. Davis continued. "'Here is your $57,000 surplus, here are your debts and your prospects, make what you can out of it,' is what they said to me, in effect. I don't want to hurt my husband by claiming any credit. He worked like a slave. But when I took the business we had $300,000 in counsel fees to pay. We had damage suits filed by Mrs. Bridgetts and by Detective Mc-Glone and Policeman Horan. I look back and wonder how we ever came through."

Detective Joseph Bridgetts, who was slain by Charles T. Davis.

Mrs. Davis' mother, Mrs. Clara Roesler, came to care for the children. Mrs. Davis held on. First, she did her own household marketing and got to the office about 9:30 in the morning. Then she found she needed to be there earlier. Her mother took over the marketing. Sometimes Mrs. Davis stayed at work until 9 o'clock at night.

IN 1925 Davis was declared sane by State alienists and was again placed on trial, charged with murder in the first degree, before Justice Carswell. The jury convicted him of manslaughter, and the Judge sentenced him to Sing Sing for from 10 to 20 years, saying he wished the law would permit him to impose a heavier sentence. Davis went to Sing Sing and was later transferred to Dannemora prison.

On the very spot where the murder occurred Mrs. Davis kept on with the business. "Really, it was the organization that built the business," she says. "All our men and women were loyal to the last. They are the ones who helped me to keep it steady and build it up."

Slowly—very slowly—she was making a success of the medical-supply work. Soon she found herself the president of a million-dollar concern. She was dealing with the most prominent medical men and hospital heads in the country.

It was not until Mrs. Davis found a stream of ex-convicts coming to her office with letters from Davis demanding that she give them positions and money that Mrs. Davis began to balk at his advice. Once he demanded that she make a man, three times convicted of forgery, the treasurer of the concern. At every turn he threatened to tear down what she had built. Still she remained loyal.

"I am my husband's most loyal friend. I intend to stand by him and to care for him." She is gentle-mannered and sweet-spoken. "Yet nothing I did was right. I couldn't please him. He used every one of my letters against me."

From his cell he kept writing advice upon how to run the business. He declared she was "too much under the influence of a man in her employ."

"Why do they try to ruin his career by dragging his name into this, with charges that are absolutely false? How could I run the business the way I have if I permitted sex to influence my relations with any of my employes?" Mrs. Davis asked.

The assets of the business increased 400 per cent. She became a modern feminine executive. Then came an offer from a medical concern to buy Davis & Geck for $1,000,000. Because she was tired of working, because the offer was good, and because she did not wish her husband to assume control of the business upon his parole, Mrs. Davis was ready to accept. "We never wanted to be rich," she said. "Any money I get from the sale of the business I intend to divide with my husband to establish a trust fund for him and my two boys," she said.

BUT Davis, from the narrow confines of his prison cell, was more furious than ever. He shouted that he was helpless because he was shut out of the world. Davis declared that he had put his shares of the business only in her trust, that he hadn't given them to her outright. He hired attorneys, who drew up the document for Davis when he turned the stock

THE MILLIONAIRE COP SWINGS INTO ACTION AGAIN

Why Deighton M. Jones Preferred Pounding the Pavement to a Life of Luxury.

Deighton M. Jones, the millionaire policeman of Los Angeles.

Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LOS ANGELES.

WHEN Mark G. Jones, pioneer banker, died in Los Angeles in 1922, he left a conservative record, a million dollars and two sons, Deighton and "Bill." The conservative record was evidenced through large, leather-bound ledgers kept scrupulously accurate during the time Mr. Jones was Treasurer of the county. The million dollars was accumulated in a great measure while he was president of the Merchants Bank and Trust Company. The two boys came as just the natural order of events.

Like most bankers' sons when there are two in the family, one of them was destined to carry out the paternal traditions, and the other to show scant interest in dollars and fluctuating stocks. "Bill" Jones settled down to a study of rates and interest and margins. Deighton decided to be a detective. Whereupon, their paths diverged. Today the spotlight is turned upon the "cop." Deighton has brought major attention to the prosaic name of Jones.

Out in Los Angeles, men of banking circles raised their financial eyebrows when, in 1915, it was rumored about that one of Mark Jones' boys was going "on the force." Deighton, the younger son of the two, a handsome, sturdily-built chap whom everyone liked, had decided his role in life would be that of stalking criminals and helping to guard the city while others slept. Deighton, who could have entered the employ of a banking house as something better than a clerk! Deighton, whose social standing was established and who might be looked upon as a "catch" by any of the scores of debutantes brought forth in the California metropolis! Deighton a "cop"! The idea seemed preposterous.

BUT that is exactly what he became. Mark Jones' son strode before the Police Commission one day and in his happy, confident manner announced that he wanted to join the force and, if it pleased the board, he was ready to undergo examination at any time or place which might be designated.

It is recalled that some members of the board smiled at what seemed to be a young man's whim. An $85-a-month job would be nothing for him. But Deighton meant it, and he succeeded in convincing the board that he meant it. The fact that he was a wealthy banker's son had nothing to do with the matter whatsoever, so far as he was concerned. He wanted to get into a uniform, wear a badge, carry a club and, if possible, win promotion in rank on merit if he won it at all. He asked no privileges, no especial favors. He had a very good education, was strong and liked adventure, and would the board, please, give him a chance?

IT DID not take long for the commissioners to reach the conclusion that here was really good material for addition to some platoon. Although admittedly a novice, the young man gave evidence of having studied some phases of crime. His logical analyses of certain cases showed that he was sound-minded and level-headed. Interest in police work had been absorbing his attention. He could not be joining the force for the sake of financial gain.

So it came about that in November, 1916, Deighton Jones' name was placed on the city's list of police officers, and Deighton got his uniform and badge. Social circles smiled tolerantly.

"We'll see!" was all that old Mark Jones would reply.

It was just possible, so some of the aged banker's friends believed, that at heart Mr. Jones really admired his son for not wanting to spend his life as he had spent it, checking on notes and interest and mortgages and keeping tab on stocks and bonds and market quotations. It was a humdrum existence, devoid of romance and adventure. If Deighton wanted to seek thrills and encounter danger and get a "kick" out of a different life—well, that was his privilege. Let him try it. Mark Jones was confident the young man would give a good account of himself in that or any other job.

What a chance for the home-town paper was offered in the next few ensuing years. Young Jones had not been on the force a month before he began attracting attention. Some lively encounters near the rim of Chinatown showed him coming in with periodic regularity, holding a prisoner. A few hand-to-hand struggles with "tough eggs" caused his sergeant to remark:

Then his Lieutenant found occasion to become a bit "chummy." When trouble broke out in Chinatown with a reported dope ring and more men were needed, Deighton Jones was called in and assigned to the plain-clothes detail. It was not until then that he really began getting the adventure he had sought. He got it good and plenty.

Chinatown in Los Angeles is not as extensive as the Chinatown of San Francisco, but there is a district just north of the old mission and adjacent to the Plaza where two or three thousand Celestials live—a district with narrow, grimy streets lined by darkened doorways and interset with crooked alleys. Through it at night shadowy figures creep, to disappear through paneled walls. There are small upstairs cafes and clubs, where sometimes the tom-toms play and faint Oriental music is heard. The stores are filled with funny little gods and images calculated to attract, in daytime, the tourists and to offer, at night, an air of mystery to the slumming parties which frequently arrive. The sight-seeing busses include the district in some of their tours for those who find a lure in the words, "A City's Chinatown."

HERE Deighton Jones got enough thrills to last the average person a lifetime. It was not long after his assignment to the district that the officers saw men slipping into a niche in a wall and disappearing. And it was not long after that until there came to their nostrils that pungent, ineffaceable odor of the opium pipe. And it was in still less time that the officers surrounded the house while a squad smashed down a door with axes and arrested the smokers on their cots. Just a few days later the axes were working again in another raid, and then in another.

"Clean up Chinatown!" had been the order.

In every assault upon a den young Jones was in the foreground—fighting. In every raid he came forth with one or more prisoners. In every conference over Chinatown conditions he was asked to sit in. Promotions came to him one after another. When old Mark Jones died, eight years ago, Deighton, after seven years' work on the force, had become a Detective Lieutenant and narcotics investigator, and he knew Chinatown and Chinese people as well if not better than anyone on the entire force.

"I'm having a wonderful time!" he remarked one day before his banker-dad passed on to the great beyond.

He believed it, too. When the fortune of Mark Jones was taken in charge by the administrator and Deighton found he had been left more money than he could spend in all his life, he evinced little interest.

"I'll not give up my job," he said, "for anything. I love it."

He meant that, too. He stuck to his detail. But only for six years further. Then his health began to give way. The long hours in the damp of night, the close attention to work, together with an internal complication, drove him to the offices of the Police Commission, where he turned in his badge and uniform.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but I've got to quit. My physicians say it is imperative."

Jones gathered up a few possessions and in 1928 headed for the great open spaces in Arizona and on into Old Mexico. He tackled the job of rounding up his health as systematically as he had tackled the job of rounding up figures of the underworld. He slept beneath the stars, lived the primitive life, guarded his diet and exercise. He returned to civilization last year, robust, color in his cheeks and contented. Except that he was no longer on the force. The ex-"cop" bought a yacht with which to while away hours on the ocean. He bought a riding academy in Griffith Park as a business enterprise. His wife took up flying an airplane for pastime. Jones had a high-powered automobile which he drove about town and out along the California highways. He visited his old mates on the force whenever he could. But he was bored.

The middle of last January Mr. Deighton Jones arose one morning with an unusual bound and got into his clothing. He snatched a hurried breakfast and presently sent his motor car roaring out of the driveway. Down Pico boulevard into the heart of the city and on toward the city hall he went, just keeping within the speed limits. Into the offices of the Police Commission he almost hurtled.

"Say!" he blurted out, "I want my old job back. I can't stand it any longer. I gotta get on the force."

"Why did Jones resign?" one member of the board asked another.

"Because," remarked Commissioner Drake, "he was worth $2,000,000."

"I did not resign because I was worth a million dollars!" the ex-"cop" protested, bitterly and vehemently. "Look up my record! I resigned because my health broke down."

He knew he was right and he knew the records would sustain him. Not only that, he knew they would show that he had been a factor in "cleaning up Los Angeles' Chinatown and keeping it clean." He was prouder of that than he was of the designation "millionaire."

The Police Board acted quickly. "Officer" Jones strode out into the sunshine, wearing a badge. And excitement was not far off.

Word came through underground channels to Chief R. E. Steckel of the Los Angeles police the latter part of last February that the "reds" were to hold a meeting in the Plaza that night.

Chief Steckel detailed 50 plain-clothes men to mingle with the crowd. Some 5000 men, women, boys and girls gathered in the Plaza shortly after 5 p. m. Carl Sklar, said to be an official district organizer for the Communists, mounted a box and began haranguing the gathering. Lieutenant William F. Hynes and a number of officers approached the makeshift rostrum and told him to stop blocking traffic.

Suddenly the police saw Sklar stand on tiptoe and cry:

Sklar and another speaker, Frank Spector, were seized by the police. Their sympathizers rescued them.

THEN Officer Jones, long without adventure, decided it was time to pitch in. Women, using their umbrellas as lances, charged the uniformed forces, aiming the points of their makeshift weapons at the officers' faces. Policemen, caught in the jam of the milling crowd, tugged vainly at their clubs. Unable to free their riot weapons, they swung fists for all they were worth. Dozens of Communist leaders were knocked to the pavement. And Officer Jones was in the thick of it.

Once Jones saw a burly man facing him and let drive with his fist. His target was another detective. The latter mistook Jones for a Communist and clipped him on the jaw. Then Officer Jones lost consciousness.

Inspector Al Staten, convinced that a mere display of force would not disperse the Communists, gave the order which won the day.

"Let 'em have the smoke bombs!" he shouted.

In another moment a cold, gray cloud began ascending as the tear bombs broke among the rioters. They fell back a few steps. Another volley and the riot was over, men and women fleeing with handkerchiefs pressed to their faces.

The mists cleared from the mind of Officer Jones. He rose, somewhat bewildered, to his feet. Slowly, he began recalling what had happened. And he smiled.

He gingerly rubbed a growing lump on his jaw.

He's a "millionaire cop" yet, and will continue to be so, he says.

INTERESTING ST. LOUISANS

Dr. Max A. Goldstein

Whose Remarkable Work in Helping the Deaf Around Him Has Made Him Internationally Famous.

A NEW FEATURE OF THE POST-DISPATCH SUNDAY MAGAZINE

By M. W. CHILDS
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

LOOKING back on the crowded activity of his career, Dr. Max A. Goldstein says confidently: "I believe I'm doing my best work today. I don't think I've let down."

That is an opinion which is shared by his co-workers and his fellow scientists. And anyone who has observed him during even part of one crowded day will readily agree.

Dr. Goldstein as he talked was sitting behind his desk in the director's suite at Central Institute for the Deaf. It is a comparatively new building, dedicated in June of 1929, the most perfectly equipped of its kind in the country. It is, in more ways than one, Dr. Goldstein's own creation. He dreamed it, he planned it, he worked for it unceasingly, without thought of compensation.

"Why, I feel like a kid with a new pair of pants," he says. "I'm almost afraid to sit down."

And he adds, a grim smile on his face: "I think I'd almost commit murder for support in this work."

Dr. Goldstein's kindly face makes the incongruity of this figurative exaggeration apparent at once. But it indicates the passionate interest with which, for 35 years, he has carried on his work for the deaf. He has had to be, in his own phrase, a bond salesman as well as a scientist. He has had to sell this work, laboriously and earnestly, to the monied public.

This business of salesmanship has been necessary, Dr. Goldstein points out, because the infirmity from which the deaf, particularly deaf children, suffer is not highly dramatic. Their handicap does not strike the eye.

Dr. Goldstein has devoted most of his life to narrowing down this handicap. Trying to break down the wall of silence that surrounds the deaf. Trying to pierce their inner, remote world. Seeking to give them means of communication with the real world. What he has succeeded in doing in this respect is a matter of international record in learned journals and the annals of scientific societies. But it is also a profoundly moving human record, as the visitor to Central Institute readily perceives.

THIS interest in developing methods to aid the deaf has become Dr. Goldstein's religion. It is a religion concerned with immediate practical benefit to humanity. How this interest in the deaf first came into being Dr. Goldstein is unable to say. There have never been any deaf people in his family, and his own hearing has always been very keen.

It may have had its origin in Vienna. Dr. Goldstein was studying there in 1893 under Dr. Adam Politzer, founder of modern otology, and Dr. Victor Urbantschitsch. The latter was conducting some remarkable experiments with deaf children, which Dr. Goldstein was privileged to observe. Dr. Urbantschitsch was working on a theory, first advanced by Itard in 1802, that it was possible to give these children a certain degree of hearing, even though they were apparently stone deaf. It was a process of stimulating activity in the hearing centers, long disused, by shouting into the ears of these deaf children, by the use of musical and vibrating instruments and in many other ways. Young Dr. Goldstein returned to St. Louis with this clew, determined to work out a new method of teaching the deaf. Securing the co-operation of the mother superior and the teaching sisters at the St. Joseph School for the Deaf, he started to work with a class of girls, ranging in age from 6 to 18 years. Twice a week for two years he supervised the work of this class.

Then he gave a demonstration at the old Planters Hotel before the American academy of ear, eye and throat specialists. Sixteen shy little girls marched out on an improvised stage in the Planters ballroom. There were many notables on the platform, including the late Archbishop Kane. In little more than an hour Dr. Goldstein was able to prove that these girls, who had been thought entirely deaf, most of them from birth, could hear certain sounds. Most of them could distinguish one sound from another—many knew all the vowels. And one girl was able to carry on a limited conversation, blindfolded and without the aid of any apparatus, from a distance of 10 feet.

All this was most exceptional. There had been very little work done in the country that could be compared with it. Archbishop Kane and the spectators were impressed. To Dr. Goldstein it was a start.

But unfortunately, he observes at this point in the narrative of his career, it is necessary to earn a living. There was a lapse of more than 14 years, during which Dr. Goldstein gave the major part of his time to his practice. Not all of his time by any means, however. For he founded in 1896 a scientific journal, international in its range. The Laryngoscope, which he has edited ever since. He founded the St. Louis Art League and charted its development in the early years. He was professor of otology at St. Louis University.

Autographed photograph, which Helen Keller presented to Dr. Goldstein.

Then in 1914 he thought he saw freedom in sight—freedom to carry on the work he had been forced to drop so long before. He abandoned most of his outside activity, cut down the hours devoted to his private practice and founded Central Institute for the Deaf. It was started in rooms over his office, which he had formerly used for a private hospital. It overflowed within a year or two to an apartment house nearby. Shortly afterward a subscription fund was raised for the first building on Kingshighway. And in 1928 the second and much larger building, with a capacity for 90 resident and 300 day pupils, was assured. That first year there were three pupils and two teachers. Growth has been so rapid that already Dr. Goldstein is looking ahead.

The new building stands as a tribute to Dr. Goldstein's skill both as bond salesman and scientist. On the wall of almost every room there is a bronze plaque, bearing the name of a separate donor. These plaques indicate how the money for the building was raised. Dr. Goldstein went out into the highways and the byways and sold the idea of this building. He got a room here and a room there; a dormitory from this person, an infirmary from the next one.

That is what he is still doing, tirelessly and unceasingly. Scarcely a week passes that he does not have some special guests for luncheon and a tour of inspection of the school. One day it is the Kiwanis Club, a week later the Junior League. Sitting at the head of the table, he is the smiling, jovial host. But you can be sure that in the back of his mind there is some deep-laid plot to further the cause of the deaf. That is why he has brought these guests together.

IT IS in this role of host-with-a-purpose that the two phases of his work are most clearly seen. After luncheon, in the big, many-windowed dining room, with its blue curtains and touches of bright terra cotta, he takes his guests up to the second floor for an inspection of the pre-school-age nursery. "It is the largest pre-school for deaf children in the country," Dr. Goldstein explains.

The 35 children range in age from 3 to 7 years. For every five pupils there is a teacher. They are being taught the same things that normal boys and girls learn and at the same time they are learning to speak and to hear. It is a difficult, painstaking process. First, an effort is made to reclaim any latent powers of hearing they possess by methods of stimulation. Along with this they are taught lip-reading. The power of speech is much harder to implant. Many of these children were born deaf. They have never heard sounds. They must learn to imitate the mechanical way in which sounds are made—the vibrations they feel in the speaker's larynx, the movements of the speaker's lips, which they can see. Their voices must be given pitch, resonance, tone quality, so that they will not be flat and monotonous.

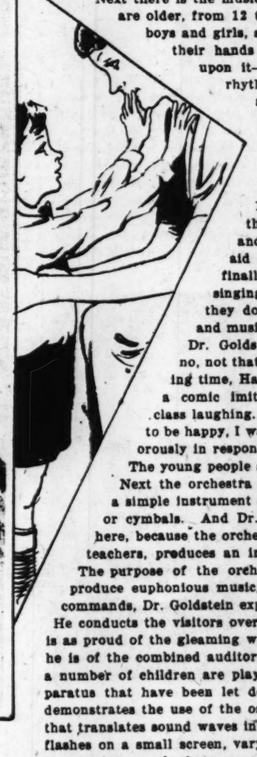
Dr. Goldstein knows all these children. They smile shyly up at him as he comes into the room. He cannot stand by as a spectator; he must take part in the teaching. He singles out a small boy. "How are you today, Charles? No, I didn't understand that. Try it again. More slowly. Bring the 'n' sound out." He alternately entreats and commands; his voice sharp and peremptory and then warm with praise.

In the next room he must have the teacher show the guests how well Henry knows his arithmetic. The teacher dictates the figures. The boy reads her lips, writes the figures on the blackboard and adds them in a column. But Dr. Goldstein can't resist this opportunity. He must prove that there is another boy in the class who is equally bright, so he conducts a demonstration with the other youngster on the blackboard at the other side of the room.

Nearly the entire second floor is given over to the pre-school. Into each room Dr. Goldstein takes the visitors. They are pleasant rooms. As part of the methods of instruction common objects bear signs done in big letters: "This is a chair." "This is a table."

Dr. Goldstein, surrounded by a group of younger pupils, at Central Institute for the Deaf.

Next there is the music department. These pupils are older, from 12 to 17 or 18. Nine of them, boys and girls, stand around a grand piano, their hands held with fingertips down upon it—to feel the vibration, the rhythm. The teacher plays a song with rhythmic swing. They mark the beat in unison. "Pum - pum - p u m, pum - pum - pum, pum," and then they count the beat, "1-2-3, 1-2-3, 1." Then they take their hands from the piano and mark time without direct aid from the vibrations. And finally they sing. It is not really singing but reciting in unison that they do. But it has a rhythmical and musical effect that is pleasing.



Dr. Goldstein interrupts here. "No, no, not that way. The way you're beating time, Harold! Like this." He gives a comic imitation that sets the whole class laughing. "Now, this way: 'I want to be happy, I want . . . .'" He sways vigorously in response to the music as he sings. The young people are delighted.

Next the orchestra assembles. Each child has a simple instrument of some sort, whistle, drum or cymbals. And Dr. Goldstein can say nothing here, because the orchestra, directed by one of the teachers, produces an impressive volume of sound. The purpose of the orchestra is not necessarily to produce euphonious music, but to teach response to commands, Dr. Goldstein explains.

He conducts the visitors over the entire building and he is as proud of the gleaming whiteness of the infirmary as he is of the combined auditorium and gymnasium, where a number of children are playing on rings and other apparatus that have been let down from the ceiling. He demonstrates the use of the osiso, a complicated machine that translates sound waves into light. A column of light flashes on a small screen, varying in shape and size with the varying sounds that are spoken into the microphone. A whole alphabet of photographs of these varying columns of light has been created on the osiso. This is one of the ways by which deaf children can determine the progress they are making in speech. The teacher speaks into one microphone, the pupil into another, and the two columns of light can be compared. There are various other complex and delicate instruments—the audiometer, which measures the exact degree of deafness.

In a large room in the basement is the free clinic. Here a force of teachers and pupil-teachers is engaged in the work of eradicating the speech defects of children, who come from all parts of the city. Each child is regarded as an individual problem. There is no technique to fit them all. Stammering, stuttering, baby talk, all the impediments to a happy, normal childhood, are here overcome. And there are some adults, too, persons of mature years, who have carried serious speech defects over to later life. Success with these cases is more difficult to achieve. But it is not impossible, Dr. Goldstein says.

BACK in his own office, over the door of which is the modest sign, "Director," Dr. Goldstein talks very seriously of his work. He speaks of the contributions made by Central Institute. It represents the first important co-operation between medical science and the study of the deaf child. He lists its accomplishments: Creation of the acoustic method of instruction whereby the hearing mechanism is stimulated to its greatest usefulness; establishment of the first training school for teachers of the deaf, with 500 graduates; introduction of the osiso and other instruments; analysis of the speech of deaf children through the sense of touch by simple apparatus; kindergarten which accepts deaf children as young as two and a half years, the first of its kind; personal research in translation and substitution of sense organs.

Many of these achievements are the result of Dr. Goldstein's own researches. Aided by the teachers under his immediate direction, three of whom have been with the school since its founding, he has worked out the

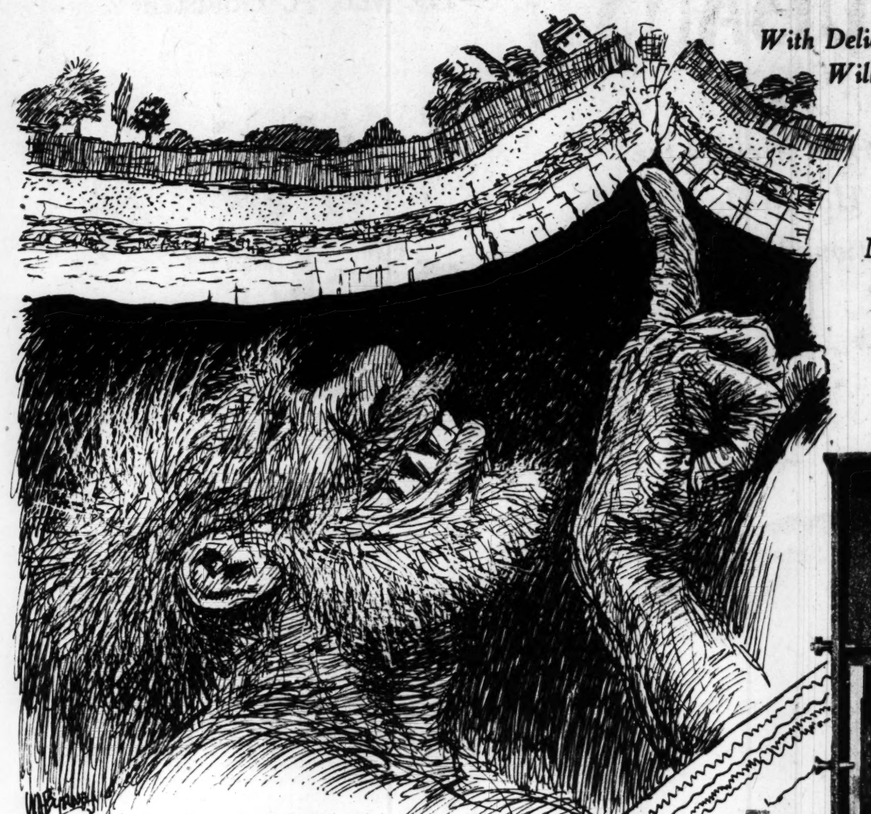
On the TRAIL of the EARTHQUAKE OGRE



With Delicate Instruments, Scientists Will Attempt to Solve the Mystery of Tremors That Have Shaken the New Madrid, Missouri, Region for More Than a Century.

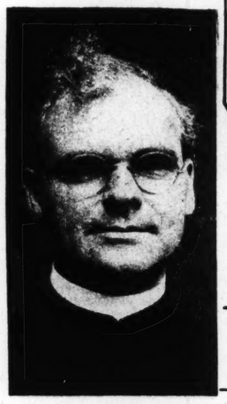
SCIENCE is setting a trap for the earthquake ogre of New Madrid. It proposes to extract from him a confession of why, at irregular intervals for more than a century, he has harried the fat Mississippi lowlands from Cairo to Memphis, and whether he intends to continue the practice. Not that anything can be done to curb the power of this giant in the earth. But with the source of his strength known, the cause of his tantrums understood and his habits disclosed, much of his destructiveness can be avoided.

A group of scientists, working under the general direction of St. Louis University, will be the detectives in the case. With specially constructed seismographs placed at the points of a triangle circumscribing the turbulent region, they intend to take down the story of the subterranean bad man, who, in 1811 and 1812, made the earth around New Madrid, Missouri, rise in waves, and repeatedly since then has shaken the river valley and at times left scars.



Rev. James B. Macelwane, S. J.

Section of seismograph record of an earthquake.

The instruments to be used are Wood-Anderson torsion seismometers, designed to record earth tremors comparatively close at hand; that is, within a few hundred miles. With the exception of one pair owned by St. Louis University, they are supplied by the National Research Council. They will be located at the Florissant seismological vault of St. Louis University; at Little Rock College, Little Rock, Ark., and at a point in Tennessee or Kentucky yet to be determined. The institutions in which they are placed will operate them, furnishing suitable quarters and trained personnel.

St. Louis University will be headquarters for the work. Here the observations made at the three stations will be studied and interpreted, the data co-ordinated.

WHILE the complete three-point system of observation will not be established until the return from Europe late this summer of the Rev. James B. Macelwane, S. J., head of the department of geophysics in St. Louis University, there will be preliminary work before then with the short-range instruments. A pair of the seismometers already is in use at the Florissant station—this is the pair owned by the university—and another pair will be set up soon at Little Rock College. A third set was received recently at the St. Louis school and is being placed temporarily in the seismological vault in its gymnasium on Pine street, so it may record any disturbances that may occur before it is permanently located.

It might be explained that the instruments comprising a pair are identical in construction, but one is so placed as to record motion in a north or south direction, the other east or west. No corresponding instrument which satisfactorily records vertical motion has yet been developed.

The Rev. J. S. Joliat, S. J., associate professor of geophysics, who is looking after Father Macelwane's university work during his absence, is directing preparations for the earthquake study.

The region which is about to be subjected for the first time to concerted, intensive seismological observation, known generally as the New Madrid area, comprises some 30,000 square miles. Lying just east of the Ozark Mountains, it takes in the Mississippi Valley from north of Cairo, Illinois, to Memphis, Tennessee, including parts of Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky. It is the greatest earthquake area—the most disturbed region seismologically, as scientists express it—between the Appalachian Mountains and the Rockies.

THERE is evidence of the great earth shock of December 16, 1811, apparently centering near the settlement of New Madrid, and of its successors. Cracks in the earth still may be discerned, and there are scarred bluffs, trenches, sand sloughs, sand blows, sunken pieces of land, and river swamps and lakes where dead trees protrude from the water. Reelfoot Lake, in Tennessee, was created by the earthquake, and its submerged trees still may be seen, as may those of Golden Lake, in Mississippi County, Arkansas.

There have been many earthquakes in the New Madrid territory since the series which began in 1811 and continued for more than a year. They have been felt as far away as Boston. The hardest shock since those disturbances occurred was on October 31, 1895. It was felt in 23 States, from Canada to Louisiana. Near Charleston, Missouri, four acres of land sank and a lake formed. The most recent violent tremor occurred May 7, 1927. Its effects were most marked at North Jonesboro, Arkansas, but it was plainly felt in adjacent States as well.

The deep deposit of alluvial soil in the Mississippi River bottoms has been an important handicap in determining the cause of the earth disturbances of the region, for geologists have not been able to study the underlying rocks in which fractures are supposed to have been made. But it seems to be agreed that these earthquakes were not of volcanic origin.

MYRON L. FULLER, in a bulletin of the United States Geological Survey devoted to the New Madrid earthquake, says the cause probably was a faulting in the hard Paleozoic rocks; that the effects were felt too far away for it to have been caused by a disturbance near the surface. He placed the centrum of the original shock along a northeast-southwest line from a point west of New Madrid to a point a few miles north of Parkin, Arkansas.

Commander N. H. Heck, in "Earthquake History of the United States," special publication No. 194 of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, says: "This earthquake was unquestionably due to a fracture in deep-seated rocks, probably a further readjustment of an old break. Apparently the doming and sinking are complementary phenomena in unconsolidated material resembling quicksand."

Fuller also stated that the earthquake "was but one of a series that is still unfinished, indicating that in all probability it resulted from causes that are still active."

Heck also gives something in the nature of a warning. "The fact that a great series of earthquakes occurred in the past and that lesser quakes have been of almost yearly occurrence," he says, "makes it important that this region be given scientific study so that it may be known whether conditions are such that another great earthquake may be expected or whether the minor earthquakes are part of a process of readjustment which is now being accomplished gradually and quietly."

Father Joliat, who has given much attention to the New Madrid earthquake area, also thinks readjustments along a fault in basic rock are responsible for the recurring shocks. Presumably the earth's crust is weaker in the disturbed area, he also points out, than in regions less subject to such violence.

"THAT'S about as far as we can go in our surmises from the comparatively meager data we have," he said the other day in explaining the research method that is to be pursued. "Now we propose to get the earth to talk—let it tell its own story. Our seismographs will take down what it has to say.

"What we want to know is: First, what are the exact epicenters of the earthquakes of the New Madrid area? That is, where is the place on the surface beneath which the disturbance originates? Second, where is the focus—the actual point of origin? How deep is it? And, third, we want to know the nature of the motion—the amplitude of displacement, the acceleration of movement, the amount of energy exerted, the periods, or duration, of vibration and whether they follow any order in their occurrence.

"In short, we hope to find out what goes on down there out of sight while the surface of the ground is trembling."

As explained by Father Joliat, the gathering of this information is largely a matter of accurate measuring of earthquake vibrations. There are two principal kinds of vibrations—known as waves—involved in this study. One is the P wave, a compression wave whose vibration is in the same direction as the path of propagation. The other is the S wave, a shear wave, whose vibration is across the path of propagation. The P wave moves the faster.

When a tremor occurs in the New Madrid area the three stations, their clocks kept accurate to the second from a common observatory, will record the waves on their seismographs, and from the seismograms the distance of the center of disturbance from each station can be computed. With these distances as radii, arcs drawn from the stations should intersect at about the point which they are trying to locate. Correct identification of the various waves on the seismogram is, of course, essential to success.

This is not an easy matter in the case of nearby earthquakes, where waves travel through the earth's crust, for there are usually several P waves, and, correspondingly, several S waves, arriving successively. It has been suggested that this is due to transmission of the waves along different paths, which are in different layers of the material deep down in the crust. According to this explanation, the waves arrive at a station successively owing not only to difference of speed in the various layers but also to difference in length of paths traversed.

Determination of the depth of the focus is a still more difficult matter, but it also is possible through use of established formulas and skillful interpretation of the seismographic records left by the earthquake waves.

There are both utilitarian and strictly scientific motives behind this research project. The mapping of probable paths and areas of future earthquake violence would be of primary importance to operators of railroads, telephone, telegraph and power lines, and gas and oil pipe lines in the region. Such information would be of service in determining the location of buildings and planning their construction. Foundations, framework and roofs could be built to offer the greatest possible resistance to shock if the structure was being erected on what was known to be dangerous ground.

IN THIS connection it might be mentioned that efforts are being made to devise an automatic protection against fire resulting from an earthquake. Such fires usually are caused by the short-circuiting of electric wires or breaking of gas lines. One scheme under consideration contemplates the balancing of a small metal ball on a rod in such a way that an earth shock strong enough to cause danger from electric or gas lines would knock the ball off its perch to fall into a slot or hole and cut off electricity and gas throughout the city.

Among the abstract scientific problems of the investigation is determination of the structure of the earth's crust. There are indications that below the sedimentary rocks there are layers in the igneous rocks; that there is first a layer of granite about six miles deep, below that a layer of basalt about 12 miles thick, and then the ultrabasic material. Among the indications that such a condition exists is the fact that several compression waves and several shear waves are recorded in one earthquake.

Connected with this inquiry is the testing of the theory that the arrival at different times of earthquake waves of the same kind is due to their traveling through layers of different kinds of material in the earth's crust. The speed at which compression waves pass through the deepest layer has been placed at about 8 kilometers (about five miles) a second; through the basaltic layer, 6.5 kilometers a second, and through the granitic layer, 5.5 kilometers a second.

IT WAS a difficult decision that Judge J. E. Alexander was called upon to make in District Court here the other day. Two mothers, one baby. A modern paraphrase of the case that Solomon was called upon to judge, complicated by the fact that so far as Judge Alexander could determine there was little to choose from between the two mothers.

"With neither character unstained I will choose the lesser of two evils, and award custody to the natural mother, Miss Depeisse," Judge Alexander ruled.

Thus, it seems that the baby, 10 months old, has been extricated from a peculiar situation.

The crowd that packed itself into the courtroom apparently approved Judge Alexander's decision. He was unable to check a spontaneous demonstration that lasted for several minutes after he had finished reading his decision.

Both women, Mrs. Elizabeth Risdon Headrick, the foster mother, and Miss Anna Saraline Depeisse, used every resource to obtain custody of the child. They engaged, when they took their respective turns on the witness stand, in a mud-slinging duel. And when the case came to an end neither one was spotless.

The trouble began shortly before the child was born. Mrs. Headrick wanted a baby, Miss Depeisse didn't. Mrs. Headrick's common-law husband, Clifford Headrick, had left her. She hoped that the child that was soon to arrive would bring him back to her.

But Mrs. Headrick's child did not live long. She wanted a baby desperately and so she took the simplest means of getting one. She put an advertisement in the paper.

Miss Depeisse answered the advertisement. She was soon to become a mother. It would mean disgrace and the loss of her job as a servant. The two women quickly made a bargain.

Mrs. Headrick was to pay all Miss Depeisse's expenses. And in return for this she was to have the child. Mrs. Headrick further agreed to keep all the circumstances of the matter secret.

BOTH women were pleased by the arrangement. It seemed to offer the solution to their respective problems. There would be no reason why Miss Depeisse's parents should ever know of the episode. They are prosperous farmers living near Red Wing, Kansas. She had come to Wichita to work.

Everything went along smoothly. The child was born. It was a healthy, normal girl. One of Mrs. Headrick's friends gave Miss Depeisse a room at her own home. And Mrs. Headrick, too, stayed at the home of this friend.

As soon as she was able the Depeisse girl went back to her job—she had given the pretext of ill health and had asked for a three weeks' vacation. Mrs. Headrick took the child to her home and entered its name in the

TWO WOMEN'S FIGHT OVER a "BOUGHT" BABY

And the Little Girl Who Has Borne the Name of Anna Saraline Headrick Now Goes Back to Her Real Mother.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

WICHITA, Kansas.

IT WAS a difficult decision that Judge J. E. Alexander was called upon to make in District Court here the other day. Two mothers, one baby. A modern paraphrase of the case that Solomon was called upon to judge, complicated by the fact that so far as Judge Alexander could determine there was little to choose from between the two mothers.

"With neither character unstained I will choose the lesser of two evils, and award custody to the natural mother, Miss Depeisse," Judge Alexander ruled.

Thus, it seems that the baby, 10 months old, has been extricated from a peculiar situation.

The crowd that packed itself into the courtroom apparently approved Judge Alexander's decision. He was unable to check a spontaneous demonstration that lasted for several minutes after he had finished reading his decision.

Both women, Mrs. Elizabeth Risdon Headrick, the foster mother, and Miss Anna Saraline Depeisse, used every resource to obtain custody of the child. They engaged, when they took their respective turns on the witness stand, in a mud-slinging duel. And when the case came to an end neither one was spotless.

The trouble began shortly before the child was born. Mrs. Headrick wanted a baby. Miss Depeisse didn't. Mrs. Headrick's common-law husband, Clifford Headrick, had left her. She hoped that the child that was soon to arrive would bring him back to her.

But Mrs. Headrick's child did not live long. She wanted a baby desperately and so she took the simplest means of getting one. She put an advertisement in the paper.

Miss Depeisse answered the advertisement. She was soon to become a mother. It would mean disgrace and the loss of her job as a servant. The two women quickly made a bargain.

Mrs. Headrick was to pay all Miss Depeisse's expenses. And in return for this she was to have the child. Mrs. Headrick further agreed to keep all the circumstances of the matter secret.

BOTH women were pleased by the arrangement. It seemed to offer the solution to their respective problems. There would be no reason why Miss Depeisse's parents should ever know of the episode. They are prosperous farmers living near Red Wing, Kansas. She had come to Wichita to work.

Everything went along smoothly. The child was born. It was a healthy, normal girl. One of Mrs. Headrick's friends gave Miss Depeisse a room at her own home. And Mrs. Headrick, too, stayed at the home of this friend.

As soon as she was able the Depeisse girl went back to her job—she had given the pretext of ill health and had asked for a three weeks' vacation. Mrs. Headrick took the child to her home and entered its name in the county records as Anna Saraline Headrick.

And, sure enough, the baby had the desired effect. Headrick came back to the woman, whom he accepted as his wife. They were apparently happy in the first months that followed the acquisition of the bargain-baby. Headrick never suspected that the child was not his—never dreamed for a moment that it was not even his wife's. Nor did Mrs. Headrick's mother, when she came to visit them, develop any suspicions.

No one need ever have suspected if the Headricks had not quarreled again. This time the quarrel was more serious. Headrick, who is an oil driller, sought out a lawyer to determine how he could obtain custody of the child.

Word of the Headricks' quarrel and subsequent separation reached Miss Depeisse. She says she had been thinking a great deal about what she had done. She had come to the decision that she wanted her baby. If the baby was to lose one or the other of its foster parents through legal action, Miss Depeisse figured that she might as well present her claim.

THROUGH legal steps she brought Mrs. Headrick and the baby into court. The Judge heard them both out.

"I never saw the child since she was born until today," Miss Depeisse said. "But she sure is a little dear. I have plenty of work and can and will support her."

"But she can't have her," said the foster mother. "She was given to me before she was born. I paid the bills as I agreed. And husband or no husband, I will have the child."

The Judge intimated in a question to Mrs. Headrick that it was only payment of the child's board bill that she was after. But she denied this vehemently. "It's the baby I want and I'm going to keep her," she insisted. As she said this she held little Anna Saraline tightly in her arms.

Judge Alexander reserved decision for a week. Then, hearing the two women besmirch each other's characters, through their attorneys, he gave the child to Miss Depeisse. Mother and daughter have gone back to the farm at Red Wing. Miss Depeisse says she is going to be married.

As for Mrs. Headrick, she went away from here shortly after the court action. Headrick asked the police to search for her. He said he wanted to know what really happened to his own baby.

The TRAGIC OUTCOME of a FAKE HOLDUP

Why Otis Waller Shot Through the Door When Ordered to "Stick 'em Up."

ATLANTA, Georgia.

OTIS WALLER and his wife were uneasy that night. Two women had tried to force their way into the Waller apartment that morning and on four occasions within a week there had been mysterious telephone calls to Mrs. Waller, demanding that she leave $1000 in the letter box of her apartment.

Waller had not been much concerned over the telephone calls, although his wife had reported them to the police. But when he came home to supper January 25 and heard of the attempts to break into his home, he began to take the situation seriously.

"And they may come back," Mrs. Waller added tremulously, when she had told of the morning's disturbance.

Her husband walked over to the dresser, took his automatic pistol from a drawer and made sure that it was loaded. He laid it on the bed.

"They'd better not," he said.

Waller and his wife and her mother, Mrs. Ella Reed, ate supper almost in silence, oppressed by that dread which blackmail so universally inspires. The meal over, they went into the living room, and Waller began to read the paper.

Then, three knocks sounded on the door. For a few moments the family made no move, merely stared at the door, nerves tense.

Then Mrs. Waller called: "What is it?"

There was no answer.

Waller rose quietly and got his pistol. "Lie down on the floor," he told the two women in a low voice.

With his hand on the door knob he listened. Then he opened the door an inch.

"Stick 'em up; we've got you!" a voice commanded from the dark hall—a woman's voice.

Waller thrust his pistol through the narrow opening and fired six times quickly. Then he stepped into the hall.

On the floor were a man and a young woman, known to the Wallers as Mr. and Mrs. William Warren. They were roomers at the Waller home.

The girl was dead, the man mortally wounded—victims of a practical joke.

INVESTIGATION disclosed that the pair had heard Mrs. Waller tell of the mysterious telephone calls and knew that she thought her life was in danger. She had seemed particularly disturbed on that morning and in the evening they thought it would be a good time to have some fun at her expense. Before he died, three days after the shooting, the wounded man said: "Waller wasn't to blame. We tried to play one of those jokes that just didn't work."

It was established to the satisfaction of the authorities that the two practical jokers had not been responsible for the efforts to extract blackmail from Mrs. Waller. But who the blackmailers were was not established. There was evidence that an Atlanta business man, changing his plans for a trip, found himself at a hotel with $1600 in his possession and turned it over to Mrs. Waller for safe-keeping; that Mrs. Waller placed the money in the custody of an attorney, and that the latter returned it to the owner. But officials apparently failed to discover a definite connection between this transaction and blackmail activities.

THE inquiry did bring out, however, rather startling disclosures about the victims of the practical joke. Warren's real name, it was discovered, was T. A. Watts, and the young woman was Cora Belle Brown, 18 years old. Watts had a wife and baby with whom he lived in Atlanta. Mrs. Watts helped nurse her husband when he lay wounded in the hospital, and was at his bedside when he died.

The mother of Cora Belle Brown declared that her daughter was married a year ago to Watts, whom she knew as Warren. But the police failed to find any record of the marriage.

Testifying at the inquest, Waller told of the threats made against his wife and said that after learning of the entrusting of $1600 to her he was inclined to suspect someone had found out about it and was using the knowledge as a basis for blackmail. Concerning the shooting, he said:

"When the couple who roomed with us came to the door I did not have the faintest idea it was the Warrens, and, feeling that my wife and I were being harassed by a group of blackmailers, I fired without a minute's loss of time when the girl told me to stick up my hands. If I had known who they were I would not have pulled the trigger for anything in the world."

Waller, who had been arrested a few minutes after the shooting, was freed when the Coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

PIECES of the GAME

By COSMO HAMILTON

"TAKE heed of a gluttonous curiosity to feed on many things," said Tyney to himself as he went past the butler into the hall of that old house, "lest the greediness of its appetite spoil the digestion thereof." From which it will be seen that here was a man who, in spite of being a soldier, had browsed in his father's library when he might have been playing golf. It seemed to him, however, that there was a good deal in all this about which to be curious.

On Thursday morning he had received a printed invitation to spend the week-end at Old Burgess with Lord and Lady Charing "to celebrate the second anniversary of the happiest wedding on earth."

He knew Old Burgess by reputation as a house in which Henry VIII had been wont to spend several months of the summer in rumbustious rioting. He had read of its lovely park, which was filled with royal oaks and giant rhododendrons and had heard of its unique collection of furniture, its gallery of fine old pictures, and its stream that was filled with trout. But why should Lord and Lady Charing invite an utter stranger to be present at an affair of so intimate a sort?

All that he knew about Charing was what he had read in the press. He was very young, it appeared, and recently down from Oxford. The university authorities had come to the conclusion that his presence in the City of Spires had so undermined its dignity that they had reluctantly sent him down. Since then he had been the leader in London of a series of Georgian jousts, after the first of which he had startled a die-hard father by leading to a registry office a girl called April Day—a girl as fresh as her name, a very tulip of a girl who, after a year on the stage in the chorus, had danced in a cabaret. Since that much-paragraphed indiscretion these two had never been seen together except by accident. Why, therefore, the celebration of the second anniversary of a marriage which, according to the gossips, was rather a hideous joke? And, again, why was an earnest soldier, who had always avoided the gay young people as he had turned his back on jazz, been included among the list of guests who it was natural to suppose were eager Charingites?

THE queerness of the whole thing deepened when he looked at the face of the butler and saw at once, having very keen eyes, that one of his mutton-chop whiskers was stuck on with spirit gum. Then, too, he was tall and slight, distinctly unbutlerish, and far too young. Undoubtedly there was about him the air of a rather gentlemanly actor in a West End comedy. The quotation from Fuller which had flashed through Tyney's mind did so because he felt quite certain that he had seen this person before. Where and under what circumstances his memory failed to say.

And the oddness of it hit him again when the man who had taken his car to the garage—he had driven it over from Aldershot himself—struck him as looking far less like a chauffeur or a mechanic than a county cricketer. He was astonished even more when the butler, with the sort of bow which butlers give in films, said, "I beg your pardon, sir, but Lord Charing has just telephoned to say that he and her Ladyship are likely to be late. Which means, if you ask me, sir, that they will not be here tonight. They desire that you will make yourself perfectly at home."

Upon which this curious person beckoned to a footman and gave orders that Tyney's luggage should be taken to his room.

On the qui vive now, as a man would be who had spent his youth in the trenches, Tyney decided that the footman, like the butler and the chauffeur, was merely acting a part.

The beautiful old hall was possessed, when Tyney entered it, by about twenty people who were quite obviously leading members of London's highbrow set. They were dressed in the garments of the intelligentsia, the cognoscenti, and the futuristic school—men whose hair was worn a little too long, whose collars were determinedly careless and who indulged in socks of the brightest colors, which flopped about their shoes. One of them, he saw, had earrings and the kind of thick blue sweater which belongs to lifeboat men. The women were quaint in individualistic garments, chosen, obviously, in a spirit of revolt. Some of them were sleeping, worn out after the frightful effort of a longish motor drive. Or it may have been that they had seized upon this opportunity to stop the machinery of their too active brains before going upstairs to change.

One long, spineless girl had placed herself full stretch upon the rug in front of the fire. The others were in groups in an orgy of conversation, and in the center of one of these, in an ecstatic attitude, stood London's latest poet, who was recognized by Tyney, from having seen his photograph, as Fanelon Esme Chavre.

A murmur of approval burst forth at the appearance of a footman with cocktails on a tray.

STRATEGY being one of Tyney's strong points, he helped himself to two of these and crossed the hall to a sofa on which was perched a pretty girl. At the sight of this pleasantly normal person, he said to himself, "Hurrah! Whatever may be mysterious in all this, there's nothing queer about her." He handed her the glass.

"Do you do this?" he asked.

"Ra—ther. . . . All the time!"

It dawned upon him that he had seen her playing excellent tennis recently at a house near Godalming. In fact, they had played together and won the set, and afterward had had tea in a small pavilion and exchanged a few remarks. Her name, he remembered, was Sheelah Burney, daughter of Brigadier-General Sir Ronald Shiplake Burney, and therefore someone whose language he knew how to speak.

She said at once: "What on earth are you of all people doing in this galere? And if you were to ask what I'm doing I shouldn't know what to say. It's rather extraordinary, really. I don't know the Charings, except from what I've read. I'm blest if I know why I'm invited. However—anything once."

"Same with me," he said. "Who are all these people? A rummy lot."

"Rummy's the word," she said. "I've never seen them before, but when I was exploring the house just now I poked about the dining room and saw their names on cards. I wrote them out for future use. I'm a paragraph scout, you know. Would you care to have a look?"

"It would help a lot," he said. And he took the scrap of paper on which, in large, round writing, she had copied out the names. They were Hugo, Viscount Rothe, Lady Jane Leftia, Finetta Pogis, Roding Busk, Bridget Kifford, Neal Silvis, Rosita Dyfan, Alan Dupper-Hyde, Ann Dart and the Countess of Stroode. The latter he knew to be that charming and popular American who had married Stroode for the philanthropic purpose of renovating his three old country houses, and allowing him to train a string of horses at Angmering. Of the rest he knew rather vaguely that Neal Silvis wrote novels which were totally devoid of plot.

The only other fellow guest whom he was able to identify was the white-haired Lady Stroode, who, even at that moment and in her country clothes, looked like a fashion plate. Under any circumstances she was to be identified as an American, because from the first thing in the morning until the last thing at night, she was perfectly turned out. Also because her feet were smaller than those of English women and extremely daintily shod.

THE fact that she had encouraged her hair to go white was no indication that she had given up the indomitable female struggle to retain the fag-end of youth. On the contrary. With a face that was utterly lineless, with eyes which were wide and sparkling, and with teeth which were almost too faultless to be true, her white hair made a most intriguing contrast and gave her an air of romance. She might—who knows?—have become white in a single night as the result of some tragedy, the sudden loss of a lover, or from having seen a spirit at the bottom of her bed.

He was totally unable to identify any of the others on the list. But he said with a sudden brain wave: "Look here! I don't know the Charings; you don't know the Charings, and the betting is that the Charings are complete strangers to everyone else in this room. Do you think that's possible?"

"Anything's possible," said Sheelah who, having only just passed her twentieth year, was a great philosopher. "But if so, what's the idea? . . . Do you think, then, by any chance there's anything fishy in this? How jolly if there is!" She laughed excitedly. Her dimples were ravishing.

"I never was so puzzled in my life," he said. "Especially as the so-called butler told me just now that the Charings won't be here."

"My hat," she said, "that's weird." But before they had time to exchange speculations as to what on earth it meant—an accident, a quarrel, or sheer forgetfulness—there was a movement in the room. It was caused by the return of Roding Busk, who had gone off ten minutes before. He was short and rather fat, with a round, ingenuous face. Not a dramatic figure by any means. In a high, round voice he said loudly, rather pleased with himself: "I say, everybody. What do you make of this? I've just been down to the garage and all our cars have gone! Not only that, but our chauffeurs have disappeared. If you will allow me to say so, I think that damnably odd."

It was the spineless girl on the bearskin who was the first to speak. "Why odd?" she asked without moving. "So far as my man's concerned, he's a botanist. He's taken my car to the nearest stream to study water plants."

"That's all very well," said Ann Dart, whose character and figure didn't fit her name because she was far from being sharp, "where are all the rest?"

"Oh, the infection of example—mass psychology," murmured Neal Silvis. "The probability is that they've all gone off to sample the beer in the nearest village. Chauffeurs need lubricating just as their engines do. I'm going up to dress."

HIS explanation and mental attitude, however, smoothed the others down. Much to the disgust of Busk, the dramatist, who had seen "a situation" in the disappearance of the cars without permission, he was followed upstairs by everyone except the practical Lady Stroode. Tyney and the pretty Sheelah withdrew into a window recess.

When Lady Stroode turned away from the round young man with the moon face from whose dramatic surprise Silvis had taken the sting, she saw that Tyney was supporting Sheelah's elbow and that her small, pink ear was very close to his cheek. A kind and humorous woman, who had not forgotten her youth, she left them undisturbed. "Dear things," she thought. "How nice. Well, I don't know the Charings and I suppose it was foolish to come, though, of course, I know they invited me to keep things merry and bright. I have that knack. But I am satisfied that the cars have only gone out in search of honest beer, and as I look forward to an amusing time and am quite devoted to freaks, I'll follow the mass movement to my room."

Feeling precisely as though he were a rather dull first act upon which the curtain had fallen with a thud, Roding Busk went, too.

Tyney was becoming more and more intrigued. Who, he would like to know, had taken his car out? Beer in a village pub. There was plenty of beer in the house. The strangeness of sending invitations for such a celebration to people whom the absent host and hostess had never met before; the fact that the butler was not a butler; that the house was eight miles from the nearest station in the middle of a lonely park, and that, as the cars had gone, there were no means of getting away except on foot—all made for uneasiness.

THEN, too, the town, if reached by walking, was a small one, on a side line, and by the time one could reach it the last train must have left. Here, it seemed undoubtedly, were the ingredients of a plot, a holdup, even, perhaps, a very nasty affair!

Well, he was a soldier and a gallant fellow. He must keep his head. In any case it was not unpleasant to find himself in a tight corner with a girl who was even more a darling than he had thought her at Godalming.

He said regretfully, liking the warmth of her elbow, "I think you had better go up."

"Oh, I'm a quick-change artist. Ten minutes is all I want." She was really afraid of nothing but mice and had never seen a ghost. And she liked the good-looking person who so absurdly held her elbow very much indeed. He had flitted, since their game of tennis, through her dreams. Whatever was going to happen, she was most awfully glad that she had come.

Two extremely disturbing things happened almost at once.

Tyney's brain was working. Unlike Lady Stroode, he was far from satisfied. And so, having escorted the charming Sheelah to her room, he first made certain that he wasn't being watched and then returned to the hall from the gallery and made for the telephone. He had spotted it in the hat room into which the footman had taken his things. It seemed to him to be a wise precaution to get in touch at once with the nearest police station by reporting to the inspector the disappearance of the cars. But having tried in vain to obtain the attention of an operator, he bent down to examine the wire and found that it had been cut.

That was the first of the two disturbing things—and a pretty nasty one. The second was brought about immediately by a brief but ominous conversation between the butler with the false whiskers and a fellow crook.

DRAWN back behind the door of the hat room, Tyney heard these words:

"Why during dinner, you ass?"

"Why not?"

"Because the women will come down wearing most of their jewelry, of course. The time to pinch their stuff is after they have gone to bed."

"Yes. But supposing one of them sees us and lets out an unholy yell?"

"We must wait until they are asleep. They will play bridge until the small hours and be as tired as dogs."

"But how are we going to kill time?" "There are two packs of cards in the kitchen and all the drinks we want. Or you can go to bed if you must and I'll call you when required. In any case we nip away as soon as we have collared the swag. They're as good as on a desert island in this place—no phone, no cars, a devil of a walk to the town. We shall be safe in London before they spot their losses." There was a chuckle at this. "The Stroode woman's pearls alone will make a dash good haul."

The two men passed and the voices died away.

Tyney straightened his tie and ran his right hand slowly down the back of his head.

"So that's what it is," he thought. "No wonder none of us know the Charings and they're not coming down! The invitations to this emotional anniversary were sent out, I see now, by the leader of this gang, who, somehow, possess this house. They've probably taken it furnished for a time. . . . And it's clear why they've asked Lady Stroode. Those pearls of hers are famous, and I suppose that some of the other women are noted for valuable things. But why these novelists, poets, and eccentrics—Rothe, who hasn't got a bean, and me? Anyone can buy my studs and links for twenty pounds."

He went quietly upstairs to his room. In the neatest and most efficient fashion his clothes had been laid out.

A newly-plucked white carnation lay on the dressing table. The valet knew his job. Both his jobs, in fact. Otherwise the butler wouldn't have engaged him as a snatcher of pearls.

And while he changed he thought. In record time he left his room and knocked on Sheelah's door.

In a blue frock and blue stockings and very neat blue shoes, having asked, "Who is it?" she joined him in the long passage, resembling a forget-me-not.

He took her elbow again, human fellow, and led her to an alcove which overlooked the park, and there, perfectly ready to comfort her, if the need arose, as, of course, he hoped that it would, he told her about the telephone and the scheme that he had overheard. To which Sheelah, after a little gasp, laughed and said: "My hat!" A wave of color flooded Sheelah's face.

"Are you sure that you can trust me?" she asked.

"Through thick and thin. Of course."

She gave him a look that was worth a year of life and held out a grateful hand. She said, "And I shall never forget."

AND then, in a clear undertone, briefly, he roughed out his plan of campaign. Nothing was to be said to anyone about the projected raid until dinner was at an end. When the so-called servants had left the room, having brought in the coffee, then would come the shock. On top of this, immediately, the men would be marched to the hall—novelists, poets, eccentrics and Hugo, Viscount Rothe—would be armed as quickly as possible with the swords of various periods that were hanging on the walls, and be led with a rush to the kitchen and hold the whole gang up. These people would be having their own dinner and be taken unprepared. One by one, at the point of the sword, they would be seized, bound—"There are plenty of straps on our luggage"—and locked into various rooms.

There was a glitter in Sheelah's eyes. Not for nothing was she descended from the famous Burneys who had fought with Charles I. The Sheelah of that brave period had herself pinned a burly Roundhead against the wainscot with her lover's blade. Would history repeat itself? History usually does. Tennis had given her a hefty forearm and an accurate eye.

"Do you like the plan?" asked Tyney.

To which she replied excitedly: "Peter, I see myself having the week-end of my life!"

He laughed and had all he could do to prevent himself from kissing her on the lips. This caution would be the thing which he would most regret until the crack of doom.

He found himself sitting on the right of Lady Stroode. He thought to himself how exactly like a diamond she was, lying in perfect peace in a smart case on a piece of yellow velvet. It seemed to him that whereas English women wore country clothes and riding kit better than any on earth, but looked rather messy in the clothes they wore in town, American women presented the appearance of having come out of bandboxes in everything they wore.

HE NOTICED with extreme interest that she was wearing her famous pearls, and saw at once that the butler had his eyes upon them, too. It astonished him rather to observe that not a single person seemed to think it in the least odd that the Charings were not at the table. He supposed that it was because they had become so accustomed in London to being invited to houses when the host and hostess were the only people whom they never knew.

From time to time, whenever his attention was not gripped by the bright and incessant flow of Lady Stroode's conversation, he looked across at Sheelah. She was sitting between Neal Silvis, whose shirt was dirtier than usual, and Alan Dupper-Hyde, who was a portraitist, and a very successful one. He was a master of the New Method and looked therefore with extreme scorn and ribaldry at the work of such men as Raeburn

The Sheelah of that brave period had herself pinned a burly Roundhead against the wainscot with her lover's blade. Would history repeat itself? History usually does. "Do you like the plan?" asked Tylney.

To which she replied excitedly: "Peter, I see myself having the week-end of my life!"

He laughed and had all he could do to prevent himself from kissing her on the lips. This caution would be the thing which he would most regret until the crack of doom.

He found himself sitting on the right of Lady Stroode. He thought to himself how exactly like a diamond she was, lying in perfect peace in a smart case on a piece of yellow velvet. PIECES of the GAME

ourney, Gainsborough and considered the whole of the Dutch school to be in the nature of primitives.

Tylney was thrilled to see the expression of amused excitement in Sheelah's sky-blue eyes. What a first-rate soldier she would have made if she had been a man!

Once or twice, as dinner progressed from course to excellent course — the champagne was Veuve Cliquot 1915, by Jove!— it seemed to him that the butler was enjoying himself far more than he had the right. He listened with a quite unbutlerish interest to the labored epigrams which Chavre was getting off. And when Rothe talked about racing and gave the table tips he actually wrote them down on his immaculate cuff.

Tylney caught expressions of intense amusement on the faces of the other crooks, especially when the listless girl who had a penchant for bears' heads talked rather freely about the Charings and their eccentric connubial ways.

WITH the arrival of the coffee, the Grand Marnier, and the most admirable old brandy, which was worth a sovereign a sip, Tylney, who had amazing powers of concentration, had prepared his bomb. He had decided to wrap it in the fewest possible words. He waited until the moment when the servants had withdrawn and then commenced an insistent tattoo with a silver spoon on a cup. By this time the conversation had become general, animated and a little noisy even. But when everybody, in mild amazement, turned inquiring eyes his way, he rose to his feet and spoke.

What on earth was the gibe? Was the soldier-fellah going to propose a toast? Silly ass!

"Look here," said Tylney quietly. "I find that we're up against it, and I'm going to tell you what you've got to do. We're in a nest of crooks. They've got us here under false pretenses, because the Charings know nothing about this party and won't, in fact, be here. Not only have the cars been taken away, but the telephone's been cut, and we've been bottled up so that when we're in bed asleep the jewels belonging to the ladies shall be pinched."

There was a gorgeous burst of laughter, and cries of "Go on, keep it up." Here, by gosh, was a humorist, one of those rare men who can invent an impossible story with a perfectly straight face.

TYLNEY was taken aback. Was there no seriousness in the composition of this modern breed? But when, with eager expectation of further funny stuff, silence fell again he proceeded to tell, with the precise accuracy to which he had been trained, all that he had seen and heard. Very seriously but tersely Sheelah backed him up.

Upon which Lady Stroode placed a long hand with pink nails upon her rising and falling pearls. Her heart was beating fast. "Oh, my God!" she said. "I thought all this was queer."

And Lady Jane Loftie, who was a penguin woman, commenced to flutter her feathers in a very considerable funk. She cried out in her high-pitched voice, "Ryahly, this is too appalling. Civilization's a fraud!"

If one may be perfectly truthful, a panic followed this—especially among the young men who had never been out of a world created by themselves in which words meant more than actions; pens, brushes, and rhyming dictionaries more than truth. Fanelon Chavre, who was as highly tuned as a seismograph, quivered in his seat. His face was as pale as his shirt front and he was on the verge of collapse.

It was the practical Lady Stroode who pulled herself together. Those wonderful pearls meant more to her than poor Stroode's three houses, although they had been fitted with baths.

"Captain Tylney," she said in a shaking voice, "we are in your hands. You're a gallant soldier. What are we to do?"

She got up. She was shaken and deeply disturbed. Indeed, she made no bones about showing that she was terrified.

It was extraordinary to see how, at once, every other woman in the room, egocentric as they were, rose involuntarily and scuttled to her side, not so much to give protection as to obtain it for themselves. It was as though they realized that she was the mother hen under whose wings they wanted to cluster and hide from the danger which obviously hung in the air. They made a charming group.

AND what a wonderful chance there was afforded to such an old gentleman as Rembrandt to paint the various expressions which came into the faces of all the men when Tylney announced that they were to be armed with swords, and stated the reason in the voice that he employed when he lectured at the Staff College on a point of strategy.

They were pacifists, of course, these small sophisticates. With the exception of Hugo Rothe, who was so expert a rider of horses that he never went out hunting without taking a toss, rarely missed a prize fight, and frequently went to Spain to enjoy a burst of sadism at her national sport. He flung himself into an attitude and pinked imaginary enemies as if he were one of the Three Musketeers.

If there were anything incredible on this earth—and there isn't and has never been—it must have surpassed the belief of an unenlightened onlooker to see the procession which was led into the hall by Tylney and his chief of staff, that darling all in blue—the novelist, the poet, the dramatist and Rothe, the horsy man, followed by the trembling Lady Stroode with her beautifully manicured hand clutching the little fortune which was hanging round her neck, the towering Lady Jane Loftie with her penguinlike splay feet, the listless futurist who seemed to possess no spine, and the remainder of the girls who had become suddenly feminine under the effect of fear. It was a pageant—a modern pageant, though as old as the hills.

Tylney mounted a chair which he had placed beneath the swords. These, one by one, he handed to his troupe, picking out the sharpest for his particular use.

He said: "You will follow me. No crowding, d'you see? I shall lead you to the kitchen. Into this we shall all go without the slightest sound. Bursting into the room in which the crooks are eating, I shall make for the butler and you will surround the rest.

"AND while we practice the handling of our weapons the ladies will go up to the bedrooms and collect all available straps. My chief of staff"—he gave her a look of most unprofessional love—"will follow down with the straps hanging over her arm. Is all that understood?"

He turned to the clutter of women and pointed towards the stairs. Then he said to Sheelah: "Lead the way up, will you? And be as quick as you can."

During the precious ten minutes before he led the attack he illustrated lithely the rudiments of swordsmanship, paying special attention to Silvis, who seemed to be under the belief that his weapon was an umbrella.

Sheelah came down with the straps. The rest of the feminine contingent remained at the top of the stairs. Ever ready with a beau geste, even in moments of fright, Lady Stroode had brought a rose from her dressing table and this she threw at the men.

"By your right, quick march," commanded Tylney, "and on the tips of your toes."

Sheelah brought up the rear. There were two quite natural spots of color on her cheeks.

The stairs to the kitchen were stone ones which luckily didn't creak, and as Tylney placed his men there was a roar of laughter in the room he was about to swarm. But before he did the deed that would look extremely foolish if those men had guns, he marched to the end of the queue.

"Look here," he said to Sheelah, lowering his voice. "This is quick work, I know, but I love you, do you see? And, if we get out of this little mess without any holes through our heads, I'm going to ask you to rough it with me in my fairly adequate flat."

Tylney, almost giddy under his glorious acceptance, went to the head of his troupe. "Over the top," he said.

FLINGING back the door he made a dash for the butler, put the point of his sword to his shirt front and cried out: "Hands up, you rat!"

The others rose to the occasion and surrounded the table of astonished servants.

With a yell of delighted laughter—at least that was what it seemed to be—the butler threw himself backward in his chair and rolled over and over until he came to the wall. Arrived there, he scrambled to his feet, stood with his back to it, and sputtering with amusement said, "Well, I'll be damned!"

"You are," said Peter Tylney. "And if you don't put your blinking hands up I'll pin you to the wall."

Whereupon the butler put his hands up, but not before he had plucked off his whiskers and tossed them in the air. "This is topping," he said. "By Jove, you give me a thrill. My faith in the British army has increased a hundredfold. All this has been carefully put up to see how you'd react—the pinched cars, the cut telephone, the conversation outside the hat room which you were meant to overhear."

Tylney, who was angry and mystified, said: "You're drunk or mad. You can't get out of this by talking this frightful rot. Sheelah, bring the straps."

THE butler went into another fit of irrepressible mirth. "Thanks most awfully," he said. "This is the most successful practical joke I've ever carried out—except that I'd forgotten the swords. I see now that under the leadership of a first-class fighting man even our intellectuals can be brought up to the scratch. Allow me to introduce you to Charing, dear old lad."

"You're a liar," said Tylney, and made a small hole in his shirt.

There was not a single guest in the room who could identify the host. But the ingenious Charing had prepared himself for this. Still laughing, although there was a spot of blood on his shirt front, he said:

"Excuse me if I put one hand down. Now let me give you the proof." Whereupon he drew out a passport in which, by a lucky accident, the photograph was good. He handed this to Tylney with a bow. It was Charing all right.

What a pity the great talents of some men are not put to better use!

Interesting St. Louisans—Dr. Max A. Goldstein

coustic method of teaching the deaf. He has done a great deal to perfect the various techniques by which the deaf person can "see" sound. Constantly on the alert for new devices such as the osiso, he has been largely instrumental in creating means whereby they may be of use to the deaf. He has stimulated research specialists in allied fields to do work bearing on the problems of the deaf.

And on the human side he has found time to carry on an enormous correspondence with former pupils of the school. He has kept in touch with many of these from the time that they left school to the present. Recalling a name here and there, he says: "She got her degree at the University of Arkansas five years ago, majoring in Spanish. I just had a letter from her the other day." And again: "That boy got a degree at Harvard. He was a brilliant student." When these former pupils come back to the school for a visit, Dr. Goldstein rarely fails to recall some anecdote out of their experience at the school. It is a meeting of friends.

THE deaf, in age from 3 to 18, have been drawn from all over the United States to Central Institute, and even from abroad. There is enrolled at present a boy whose parents live in Shanghai, China. A London specialist had announced as his final decision that the boy would never hear, much less talk. I saw him carry on a conversation with Dr. Goldstein.

Part of Dr. Goldstein's mail each day is made up of appeals from the parents of deaf children who, in many instances, haven't enough money for railroad fare to St. Louis, to say nothing of the modest resident tuition fee assessed at Central Institute. It is these letters which distress Dr. Goldstein. He gestures with a sheaf of them as he talks. "What can I do about these?" he asks. "These people write to me as though in some way I could solve the whole difficulty—money and all the rest of it."

The question most frequently asked Dr. Goldstein says, is how the first contact is made with a deaf child. He explains: The teacher begins with the primary sound "m." The child's hands are so placed on the teacher's head and throat that he feels how the sound is made when the teacher repeats "m-m-m-m-m." Then the child's hands are placed on his own head and throat and he is encouraged to imitate the teacher—to try to produce the same vibrations that he felt when his hands were placed on her head and throat. This substitution of touch for hearing gradually takes place—the child feels and imitates vibrations of the head bones and of the larynx. He is able to gauge his progress by the criticism of the teacher and by the use of such instruments as osiso, which translate the sounds he makes into light. Other sounds are added one by one. There are many vowel drills. Slowly these sounds are built into words. Words are associated with objects and simple sentences are formed. "I brush my teeth," the child says. "I sit under the table," and suits the action to the words. During this process, of course, he is also learning lip-reading. As progress is made in the elementary sounds the child is taught to secure differentiations of pitch. This last is the most difficult of all.

It is exactly as though a normal person, whose ears were stopped with cotton, were learning a foreign language through the sense of touch instead of sound. I saw a striking demonstration of substitution of sense of touch for that of sound. Dr. Goldstein talked into a megaphone, over the end of which was stretched, as on a drumhead, a specially prepared kind of paper. One of the advanced pupils, a girl of 14, totally deaf, placed her finger tips against this paper and, with her eyes closed, repeated what Dr. Goldstein said and answered his questions. Through her finger tips she was hearing complicated sounds—words and sentences—translated into vibrations of the paper at the end of the megaphone.

Dr. Goldstein is quite naturally proud of all the achievements of Central Institute. But his ever-active mind has fixed new goals. One ideal is a national college for the deaf, to be established in St. Louis.

Dr. Goldstein is frankly a little tired of the bond-salesman phase of his work. He thinks it is a little unjust that he has had to do this. But there is a suspicion that he has enjoyed even this part of his job, despite what he says.

FOR it is apparent that he delights in contact with other human beings. Around the walls of his office are numerous signed photographs, most of them of distinguished men and women with whom Dr. Goldstein has come in contact. Many of them are inscribed with warm affection. There is a photograph of Dr. Politzer, whom Dr. Goldstein acknowledges as his master. And on the opposite wall is a picture of Helen Keller, on which she has written: "To Dr. Goldstein, in warm appreciation of his work for the deaf." He recalls, his face lighting with the memory, that he taught Miss Keller to dance the two-step in the roof garden of the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston long years ago. He was instrumental in helping the famous blind-deaf woman increase the volume of her voice so that she could make a most profitable vaudeville tour and thus repay the money that had been spent on her education.

In his home Dr. Goldstein is more relaxed. "Sunday is the only day on which I have any time," he says, "and on that day I do nothing." But that is something of an understatement. For it is on Sunday usually that members of the family and friends gather in the pleasant, spacious home in Hampton Park.

Sometimes on Sunday, too, he displays his collection of prints and drawings. He has brought to this collection, one of the most diverse and interesting in the country, the same energy, the same care and pride, that mark his scientific and educational work. He brings from the steel cabinets in his study great stacks of pictures. He arranges an easel, adjusts the light, displays them one by one. Rembrandt etchings, a Mantegna drawing, a half-dozen Hogarth drawings, drawings by Rosetti, Burne-Jones, Michaelangelo, every period and almost every artist of note is represented.

There are many rarities, curiosities that Dr. Goldstein has picked up from time to time, a drawing by Jacob Epstein before the noted sculptor had won a reputation, a wash drawing by Rodin, a sketch by Kate Greenaway.

Almost every picture has a story that relates it to the collection. Dr. and Mrs. Goldstein vie with each other in recalling these collecting adventures. They argue with mock acrimony over details and over their respective tastes in art.

The collection has been acquired over a period of 30 years, much of it during the course of Dr. and Mrs. Goldstein's travels in Europe. Each time they go to London Dr. Goldstein spends hours, days, in a little shop near the British Museum, conducted in a most original fashion by one of the foremost bookmen in the world. He gives Dr. Goldstein the run of the shop. He digs through piles of prints that the book-shop owner has acquired through purchase of whole libraries. Mrs. Goldstein relates how she once found the doctor, covered with grime, in a little airless room above the shop. He had been there for six hours. There is an account of a lucky find in Paris, an etching in Venice that simply could not be resisted. All these narratives come out as, one by one, the pictures follow each other on the easel until they are piled up on small tables about the long drawing room.

There are pictures on the walls in every room, favorite pictures with which Dr. and Mrs. Goldstein have chosen to live. And in the attic is Dr. Goldstein's workshop, where he mounts newly-acquired drawings, prepares the etchings for framing, cleans them and restores them. It is a room precisely and carefully arranged, with an imposing array of tools at hand on a long work bench.

THE picture which Dr. Goldstein prizes most highly is a preliminary sketch by Veronese for his large canvas, "The Judgment of Solomon." Dr. Goldstein's discerning eye spotted it in a book shop in an English village. It was on the floor, covered with dirt and refuse. He got it for less than 25 cents.

Almost every picture in the Goldstein collection bears one or more marks—stamped or impressed symbols—put there by other collectors who have owned it.

Dr. Goldstein has edited a book on collectors' marks. It is significant that his own mark—the symbol which he has imprinted on all his pictures—is the emblem which he devised for Central Institute, a representation of the serpent of Esculapius entwined around the books of the teacher. Thus his life work and his principal hobby are related.

Even in the midst of the absorbing task of displaying his prints he does not forget for long the work for the deaf. He repeats an old threat—that he may yet bring himself to sell his collection in order to realize additional funds to carry on the work of Central Institute. Mrs. Goldstein smiles knowingly at this.

But it is time, the lack of time, that chiefly disturbs Dr. Goldstein. "I've started things that I know I'll never be able to finish," he says. "I know I shall not have enough time. And they are things that must be finished."

Made Her Husband a Millionaire

over to his wife for her protection to prove her claim invalid. In a court action an attorney for Davis read letters from Mrs. Davis to her husband assuring him he would get back the business when he won his freedom. "I did that to ease his mind," she said. "I have always tried to aid my husband and I regret that he has put me in a position of seeming to act against him. The fortune of our boys is at stake."

Last July, Justice May of Brooklyn denied the husband's petition for an injunction, unless he could put up $1,000,000 within five days. The Justice pointed out that six alienists had adjudged the manufacturer insane, and he expressed strong doubt over Davis' ability to take over the huge concern into which his former business had grown. The Judge praised her ability and the employes of Davis & Geck gave her a testimonial dinner.

Mrs. Davis says she gave her husband $300,000 while he was confined. He said he had received no money recently, while she spent as much as a quarter of a million dollars in the course of a year. He insists that it was his own business acumen, exerted through his wife, which resulted in success.

The children began to take sides. The older boy, Austin, siding with his father, was appointed trustee for Davis. The younger boy stood by his mother.

"That is the way Mr. Davis wanted it. I had to give up the management of our affairs. He was making it harder and harder for me all the time, until it was impossible to go on," says Mrs. Davis.

Davis' attorneys received a bid of $2,000,000 for the firm, and Mrs. Davis' prospective purchaser answered with a larger offer. After appeal and further litigation, Mrs. Davis finally sold the business last month for close to $3,000,000. Through consultation with Justice May Mrs. Davis acquired a total of $770,000 for herself, a fund of $100,000 each for Luther and Austin, and the remainder for her husband.

DESERT GAL

A Story Based on the Code of the Old West.

NEVADA NED stepped forward eagerly as the 9:10 arrived from Wild Deuce. In a moment he would be reunited with his daughter, Bess, who had just graduated from Wellesley back in the States. Eleven long years had passed.

The girl climbed out of the stagecoach in a cloud of dust and heaved her grip to a waiting Red Cap. Spanking her clothes and sneezing violently, she marched over to her father and shook his hand in that vigorous, hearty manner of the Old West.

"Which I'm plumb tickled to be back in Panther Crick!" she cried. "How's the cows, Ned?"

"Contented, thank'ee, ma'am," replied old Dawson. He twirled his drooping mustache. "Shudderin' terrapins, but it's hard to understand that fancy, eddicated lingo o' your'n! Still, it's what a pusson has to expect when he sends his datter off to a noodle refinery. I hopes as how ye ain't fagged out by the long hike?"

"Naw," said Bess. "I tuk it by easy stages." She handed her father a circular tin box. "A station agent 90 miles down the pike give me this yere parcel for ye. What be in same?"

"That 'ere be my racin' rattlesnake, Chaparral Charlie," said Dawson, tossing the box into the rear of the family wagon. "I loaned him to a neighbor and now the critter's back to be entered in the reptile derby at the fair. We won't visit the fair today as they ain't much doin' outside of the hog-callin' contest, but we'll mosey in tomorry for the Wrigley Sweepstakes. I've mortgaged the ranch so's I could put the proceeds on Chaparral Charlie's nose. He kin outskid any rattler alive, give him clear weather an' a fast track, an' I'm lucky to have him carryin' my colors."

"Draggin' 'em would be better," said Bess. "Have a seegyar, Ned. I'm sorry I can't jine ye, but they wouldn't let us smoke up at Wellesley an' I never learned how. But I likes my chaw."

They clambered into the wagon and Ned headed for the mesquite with a lusty "Gee-haw, you'uns!" In the manner of the Old West, the first six miles were negotiated without conversation and Bess amused herself by taking pot-shots with a rifle at occasional mountain lions, bears and gorillas. At the seven-mile post Ned offered his daughter a drink of whisky, to indicate that she had been readmitted to citizenship and was therefore privileged to talk. According to the code of the West, she accepted without asking him where he got it.

"HOW be the neighbors, especially my old sweetheart, Two-Pair Johnsing?" asked Bess. "I ain't had nary a line from the ornery critter in the hull time it tuk me to major in English."

Ned's eyes glinted fiercely. "Never mention that 'ere coyote in my presence, ma'am," he growled. "The bandy-shanked, flat-footed, thick-skulled, owl-eyed, hyena-faced, sheep-stealin' specimen of an onregenerate, cantankerous, locoed maverick has went an' beat me out of the Sheriff's office. Him an' me ain't on speakin' terms, 'ceptin' when we says it with bullets. N'r I don't want ye traipsin' around with him none. I've picken ye out a husband anyway, same bein' Flap-Jack Ballew, the boss of my cow-engraving department."

"Bein's which I never cottoned to this yere Flap-Jack party," said Bess, "I 'lows as how we'd better change the subject. It shore be a gallumptious day."

At this juncture a volley of shots rang out and a masked man with a .45 in either hand jumped from behind a large boulder. He was wearing those feathered trousers and one of those hats that looks like the vanilla part of a banana split.

"Had yer iron today?" he demanded. "If you'uns don't remove yourselves from that thar contraption pronto, I figgers to distribute some, promiscuous-like."

"Them clouds shore be purty," Bess was sighing, as she dismounted from the wagon with her hands upraised. "An' I dotes on them cactus plants an' them jackrabbits a-skally-hootin' through the bresh, an' them little sand lizards. We didn't have no lizards up Wellesley way, 'ceptin' the kind as habitates sofas."

In the manner of the Old West, Ned and the bandit shook hands in that firm, sincere grasp and gazed searchingly into each other's eyes. "Good afternoon to ye, stranger," said Ned, "I be Nevada Ned Dawson of the Circle-I Ranch an' this yere critter be my datter. What be yore brand?"

"I'm Little Joe from Natural Pass," said the bandit. "I be tickled right smart to meet up with you'uns. As for my business, I craves that 'ere rattlesnake which you-all contemplates runnin' in the race tomorry. Seein's how I laid my poke on Paddy Boy's Pride, I nat'rally aims to eliminate yore sarpent. Which you'll hand over same, Mr. Dawson, an' I'll be much obleged."

Ned sighed, but produced the tin box and surrendered it. "It ain't like a Dawson to give in so easy," he murmured, "but ye got the drap on me and they be wimmin folks about. Howsomever, our trails will cross again, bandit, and it'll go hard with ye. Elephants never forget."

"Thunderin' scorpions, the box be empty!" shouted the desperado. "Ye cain't cold-deck me, Mr. Dawson! I'll just tether ye to yonder cactus for a spell an' see if the sun treatment won't loosen up yore tongue a trifle. Nary a drap o' aqua pura ye gits till ye unravels the address of this yere Chaparral Charlie. Meanwhile, yore datter an' me will have a nice game o' kyards, all peaceful-like."

"Up with yore mitts, Flap-Jack Ballew, or I'll be searin' you!"

As the bandit bound her father, Bess recalled that she had been a cheer leader at Wellesley and might capitalize that experience in a substantial supplication for assistance. "Yee-ow!" she klaxoned—and made it big.

SLOWLY the stifling hours dragged by while old man Dawson bleached in the sun and Bess and the bandit sat on the road playing draw poker. Occasionally the bandit looked up from a full house or a straight flush to taunt the prisoner, but Bess always followed this with a word of encouragement such as "Remember ye be a Dawson!" and "Ride 'em, cowboy!" It was a sorry afternoon for her, not only was she prevented from helping her father, but she held mighty poor cards.

At length the bandit got up and deliberately emptied a canteen of water just outside of the captive's reach. This illustrated the pernicious influence of the movies. Then he seized Bess' wrist, but she jerked herself free and ran to the brink of a convenient chasm.

"One more step, Mr. Bandit," she said fearlessly, "an' I does an Immelman loop off'n this cliff."

"Bein's which I've came to prevent!" cried a triumphant voice. And a tall man in a blue uniform, with a star on his chest and a revolver in his hand, stepped from behind a near-by thicket. "Up with yore mitts, Flap-Jack Ballew, or I'll be searin' you!"

"Stammerin' tarantulas, it's the foreman!" cried Bess in amazement. "And you be Two-Pair Johnsing, the Sheriff of Panther County! Sheriff, where's the United States Cavalry?"

"I was field jedge back at the fair," said Johnson, "when this almighty whoop o' your'n come a-trumpetin' in. I recognized them lungs, ma'am, so I sets about to find ye. Ye've won this handsome silver loving cup as fust prize in the hog-calling contest."

Flushing proudly, Bess accepted the trophy and examined it. "By the great horn spoon!" she exclaimed. "Thar be a rattlesnake in the innards of this yere schooner!"

"That be Chaparral Charlie, ma'am," said the Sheriff. "In the Lame Wolf Saloon this morning I overhears this bandit-gent a-plottin' to kidnap the varmint. I decides to swipe him myself for safe-keeping, so whilst you and yore pap was a-greeting' each other, I removes him from his kennel. An' here he be all safe an' sound an' a-rarin' to lower the record."

Three days later the inhabitants of the Wild Deuce country received the following communication in their mail boxes:

"Yore Presence Be Requested At The Hitching
Of Miss Bess Hyacinth Dawson
And Sheriff Mr. Two-Pair Johnson.
Which Same Occurs In The Panther Crick Church

The groom showed up at the ceremony—according to the good old code of the West. Then the happy couple mounted a horse and galloped off into the moonlight, singing on the roan.

Your hands can stay

YOUNG

PLEASE do not "let your hands go" [illegible] is so unnecessary now, even for hands that do things. Science has created a new method for keeping them young. Specifically for hands, THINC Hand Creme (pronounced "think"). Of course THINC is not an ordinary cold cream, lotion, or vanishing cream. It is for the express purpose of making busy hands soft, white, flower-like. And it works quickly. You can actually see it roll out the hidden dirt that you didn't know was there. Overnight it brings finer textured beauty. And THINC is not an expensive. So little is needed, and the 60¢ tube is of generous size. All toilet goods counters have it, in tubes and jars.

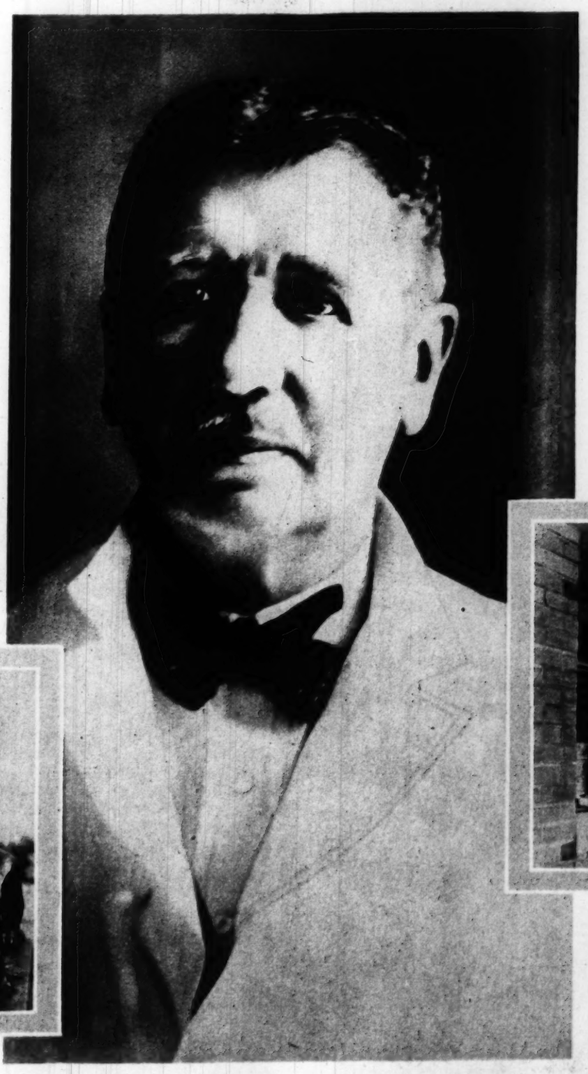
"I have used Yeast for 25 Years"

says Head of famous Skin Hospital



DEAN of all Scandinavian skin specialists is Dr. Johan Almkvist of Stockholm, head of the famous St. Göran Hospital for diseases of the skin and blood.

"For 25 years," says Dr. Almkvist, "I have used yeast for skin troubles, such as acne and boils.

"The effect of yeast against constipation," he adds, "is well known. By keeping the intestinal tract healthy and clean it prevents a number of poisons from being absorbed into the system.

"Indescribably important for the present-day indoor worker is the vitamin D contained in yeast after irradiation. Its effect is equivalent to that of sunshine itself."

Why not adopt this simple way to clear-skinned, vigorous health? Every day eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast. Each cake is rich in two precious vitamins—B and D. At grocers', restaurants, soda fountains. Directions on label.

"Wearing evening dresses with gracefulness is impossible when one is afflicted with a disgusting 'breaking out' of the skin," writes MISS ELINOR WALSH from Ottawa, Ont. "And who can do justice to herself when half-crazed with a dizzy headache? . . . Naturally I was alarmed . . . I resorted to yeast, and in two weeks my health improved. My skin trouble disappeared, I gained back my color, my self-confidence, energy and a smile."

"My doctor advised me to try Fleischmann's Yeast cakes," writes R. ROYCE WILSON of Waltham, Mass. "I was troubled with slight stomach disorders and had quite a few blackheads and pimples. The yeast cleared my skin and gave me lots of pep. The girls dance with me now, and that's one thing I like to do, dance. I am still eating yeast."

These leading skin specialists recommend yeast

Spain's foremost skin specialist, DR. JOSÉ SÁNCHEZ-COVISA, says, "Skin eruptions are nearly always accompanied by constipation. Yeast reduces intestinal putrefaction and is of great aid in treating these skin affections."

PROFESSOR DR. PIO PEDICONI, head of important skin hospital in Rome, declares, "Yeast keeps the system 'regular.' For many years it has been used in dermatology to prevent and cure pimples and boils."

$150

At this price you can now buy a 9 x 12 ft. American Rug that has the luxurious sheen and beauty of a true Oriental, and which makes over any room into a dream of beauty.

Unless you have visited the rug department of a good store recently you don't know anything about rug values of today. A great change has taken place, and Gulistan has caused it.

What does Gulistan mean? It means that you can have the silky beauty and pile-deep lustre of Oriental Rugs at a price you can afford.

That very sheen which has the power to change the appearance of any home, until it seems to contain many hundreds of dollars' worth of new luxury!

This change in rug values is causing such a stir that if you were to travel all over America you would find stores and customers everywhere taking immediate advantage of it.

People know that the famous House of Karagheusian has made in the Orient for years great numbers of the world's most beautiful Oriental Rugs.

They know that in Karagheusian's American plants they have been trying for years to machine-loom American Rugs that would be truly as lustrous and luxurious as their Orientals.

And now they know that Karagheusian has done it.

Think of the facts. The sheen is the same as that of a thousand-dollar Kashan Rug, the wools are especially imported from the Near East and China, the wearing-power exceeds that of popular-priced Oriental Rugs, and the fabric has been demonstrated by actual test in the "Times" Model Home at Hartford, Conn., to emerge revealing hardly any signs of wear, after 83,000 people had trod and re-trodden it!

And how you will delight in choosing the designs! There is a large choice, many of them duplicate museum pieces of almost priceless value. Many color-combinations, too. Sizes all the way from 22½″ by 36″ to 11′ 3″ by 21′. Scatter Rugs, Room Sizes, Runners, Stair Carpets. See the display at your favorite store at once.

The silken label illustrated below is on the back of every rug. It guarantees that you are getting GULISTAN!
